Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue Rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the entire state of facts involved. In those that are based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and confidential information are deleted to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on Subpart A, Tax Conventions and related Treasury Decisions and Revenue Rulings; Subpart B, Legislation and related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical Indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Price: $1.00 (single copy). Subscription price: $50.00 a year; $12.50 additional for foreign mailing.

Cumulative List of Announcements Relating to Decisions of the Tax Court Published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin from January 1, 1979 thru December 31, 1979

It is the policy of the Internal Revenue Service to announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin at the earliest practicable date the determination of the Commissioner to acquiesce or not acquiesce in a decision of the Tax Court which disallows a deficiency in tax determined by the Commissioner to be due.

Notice that the Commissioner has acquiesced or nonacquiesced in a decision of the Tax Court relates only to the issue or issues decided adversely to the Government.

Actions of acquiescences in adverse decisions shall be relied on by Revenue officers and others concerned as conclusions of the Service only to the application of the law to the facts in the particular case. Caution should be exercised in extending the application of the decision to a similar case unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same, and consideration should be given to the effect of new legislation, regulations, and rulings as well as subsequent court decisions and actions thereon.

Acquiescence in a decision means acceptance by the Service of the conclusion reached, and does not necessarily mean aceptance and approval of any or all of the reasons assigned by the Court for its conclusions.

No announcements are made in the Bulletin with respect to memorandum opinions of the Tax Court.

The announcements published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletins are consolidated semiannually and annually. The semiannual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for July and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the first half of the year and the annual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for the following January and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the last half of the year.

Collapsible corporations

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to "collapsible corporations". Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Act of August 22, 1964 [Pub. L. 88-484, 1964-2 C.B. 605]. These regulations provide necessary guidance to taxpayers for compliance with the Act and affect certain collapsible corporations and their shareholders.

DATE: In general, the regulations are effective for transactions occurring after August 22, 1964.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On July 6, 1977, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 341(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (42 FR 34523). The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to sections 1(a) and 2 of the Act of August 22, 1964 (Pub. L. 88-484, 78 Stat. 596). No public hearing was requested and none was held. After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

Generally, section 341(f) provides that section 341(a) shall not apply to a sale of stock of a corporation if such corporation consents to recognize gain on any future disposition by it of its "subsection (f) assets" (defined, generally, as assets of the corporation other than certain capital assets, owned or held under option on the date the stock of the corporation is sold) and if the sale of stock is made within the 6-month period after the consent is filed.

This provision is intended to provide relief to shareholders who desire to sell stock of a corporation that is rapidly growing and expects to continue in business but which holds constructed or produced properties which are worth substantially more than their cost and upon which there has not been substantial realization of the profits to be derived from the properties. The shareholders, through a sale of stock, would like to capitalize on the future prospects of this growing company. However, on such a stock sale, the corporation might be regarded as falling within the definition of a collapsible corporation (under section 341(b)) if the shareholders realize gain upon the sale of stock of the corporation prior to the realization by the corporation of a substantial part of the income to be derived from the constructed or produced properties.

Section 341(f) provides that the collapsible provisions will not apply to the sale of stock in a corporation which consents to recognize gain upon later disposition of, generally, its assets other than certain capital assets. The treatment provided has the effect of assuring that ultimately there will be the same tax consequences as if the assets had been sold before the stock.

SUMMARY OF CHANGES

The Treasury decision is identical to the notice of proposed rulemaking of July 6, 1977, with the exception of the changes noted below.

Section 1.341-1 and Example (1) of § 1.341-7(e)(4) are modified to use the term "ordinary income" to conform to a change introduced by the so called "Deadwood Bill" (Title XIX, of the Tax Reform Act of 1976, Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 1, 240).

In response to taxpayer comments, section 1.341-7 has been modified to make it inapplicable to shareholders who never owned (either actually or constructively) more than 5 percent in value of the outstanding stock of a corporation. Accordingly, a sale of stock of a consenting corporation, for purposes of section 341(f)(1), does not include a disposition of stock by a shareholder to which section 341(d)(1) applies. As a result, a shareholder who never owned more than a 5 percent interest in a consenting corporation and who sells stock of the corporation need not comply with the notification requirements of section 1.341-7(d). Also, the disposition of stock by such a shareholder within the 6-month period after a consent is filed will not taint the corporation's assets as "subsection (f)" assets.

In addition, a 5 percent-or-less shareholder of a consenting corporation who sold any stock in that corporation during the previous 5 years will not be barred by section 341(f)(5) from availing itself of the relief provided under section 341(f) for another consenting corporation.

[1] This publication of the Treasury Decision contains the complete text of amendments to the regulations. The instructions for modifying the notice of proposed rulemaking have been omitted.

The term "taxpayer account number" which appeared in § 1.341-7(b)(2) and (f)(3) of the proposed regulations has been deleted and the term "employer identification number" has been substituted in its place.

Also, a new § 1.341-7(j)(5) is added dealing with a corporation that is a member of an affiliated group filing a consolidated return. The corporation is considered to have filed a consent if one is filed on its behalf by the group's common parent.

In addition, this Treasury decision corrects § 1.1502-32(d)(6) which was revised by T.D. 7637, 1979-40 I.R.B. 21, appearing at 44 FR 46838, on August 9, 1979. The amendment set forth in paragraph 4 of this document deletes "August 6, 1979," and inserts in its place "August 9, 1979,".

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Lawrence M. Axelrod of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the amendments published with notice of proposed rulemaking in the Federal Register for July 6, 1977 (42 FR 34523) are adopted as proposed subject to the changes set forth in paragraphs 1, 2, and 3 of this document.

Paragraph 1. Section 1.341 is deleted.

Par. 2. Section 1.341-1 is amended to read as follows:

§ 1.341-1 Collapsible corporations; in general.

Subject to the limitations contained in § 1.341-4 and the exceptions contained in § 1.341-6 and §1.341-7(a), the entire gain from (a) the actual sale or exchange of stock of a collapsible corporation, (b) amounts distributed in complete or partial liquidation of a collapsible corporation which are treated, under section 331, as payment in exchange for stock, and (c) a distribution made by a collapsible corporation which, under section 301(c)(3), is treated, to the extent it exceeds the basis of the stock, in the same manner as a gain from the sale or exchange of property, shall be considered as ordinary income.

Par. 3. There is inserted immediately after § 1.341-6 the following new section:

§ 1.341-7 Certain sales of stock of consenting corporations.

(a) In general. (1) Under section 341(f)(1), if a corporation consents (in the manner provided in paragraph (b) of this section) to the application of section 341(f)(2) with respect to dispositions by it of its subsection (f) assets (as defined in paragraph (g) of this section), then section 341(a)(1) does not apply to any sales of stock of such consenting corporation (other than a sale to such corporation) made by any of its shareholders within the 6-month period beginning on the date on which such consent is filed.

(2) For purposes of section 341(f)(1) and (5)—

(i) The term "sale" means a sale or exchange of stock at a gain, but only if such gain would be recognized as long-term capital gain were section 341 not a part of the Code. Thus, a sale or exchange of stock is not a "sale" within the meaning of section 341(f)(1) and (5) if there is no gain on the transaction, or if the sale or exchange gives rise to ordinary income under a provision of the Code other than section 341, or if gain on the transaction is not recognized under any provision of subtitle A of the Code.

(ii) A sale of stock in a corporation does not include any disposition of such stock by a shareholder if, by reason of section 341(d)(1), section 341(a) could not have applied to that disposition. (Under section 341(d)(1), section 341(a) does not apply except to more-than-5-percent shareholders.) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (a)(2)(i) of this section, the term "sale" includes a disposition of stock in a corporation by a more-than-5-percent shareholder described in section 341(d)(1), even though section 341(a) did not apply to the disposition because the corporation was not collapsible or by reason of the application of section 341(d)(2), (3), or (e).

(3) A corporation which consents to the application of section 341(f)(2) does not thereby become noncollapsible, and the fact that a corporation consents to the application of section 341(f)(2) does not affect the determination as to whether it is a collapsible corporation.

(4) For limitations on the application of section 341(f)(1), see section 341(f)(5) and (6), and paragraphs (h) and (j) of this section.

(b) Statement of consent. (1) The consent of a corporation referred to in paragraph (a)(1) or (j)1) of this section shall be given by means of a statement, signed by any officer who is duly authorized to act on behalf of the consenting corporation, stating that the corporation consents to have the provisions of section 341(f)(2) apply to any dispositions by it of its subsection (f) assets. The statement shall be filed with the district director having jurisdiction over the income tax return of the consenting corporation for the taxable year during which the statement is filed.

(2)(i) The statement shall contain the name, address, and employer identification number of any corporation 5 percent or more in value of the outstanding stock of which is owned directly by the consenting corporation, and of any other corporation connected to the consenting corporation through a chain of stock ownership described in paragraph (j)(4) of this section. The statement shall also indicate whether such 5-percent-or-more corporation (or such "connected" corporation) has consented, within the 6-month period ending on the date on which the statment is filed, to the application of section 341(f)(2) with respect to any dispositions of its subsection (f) assets (see paragraph (j) or this section), and, if so, the district director with whom such consent was filed and the date on which such consent was filed.

(ii) If, during the 6-month period beginning on the date on which the statement is filed, the consenting corporation becomes the owner of 5 percent or more in value of the outstanding stock of another corporation or becomes connected to another corporation through a chain of stock ownership described in paragraph (j) (4) of this section, then the consenting corporation shall, within 5 days after such occurrence, notify the district director with whom it filed the statement of the name, address, and employer identification number of such corporations.

(3) A consent under section 341(f) (1) may be filed at any time and there is no limit as to the number of such consents that may be filed. If a consent is filed by a corporation under section 341(f)(1) and if a shareholder sells stock (i) in such corporation, or (ii) in another corporation a sale of whose stock is treated under section 341(f)(6) as a sale of stock in such corporation, at any time during the applicable 6-month period, then the consent cannot thereafter be revoked or withdrawn by the corporation. However, a consent may be revoked or withdrawn at any time prior to a sale during the applicable 6-month period. If no sale is made during such period, the consent will have no effect on the corporation. See paragraph (g) of this section.

(c) Consenting corporation. (1) A consenting corporation at the time that it files a consent under section 341(f)(1) shall notify its shareholders that such consent is being filed. In addition, the consenting corporation shall, at the request of any shareholder, promptly supply the shareholder with a copy of the consent.

(2) A consenting corporation shall maintain records adequate to permit identification of its subsection (f) assets.

(d) Shareholders of consenting corporation. (1) A shareholder who sells stock in a consenting corporation within the 6-month period beginning on the date on which the consent is filed shall—

(i) Notify the corporation, within 5 days after such sale, of the date on which such sale is made, and

(ii) Attach a copy of the corporation's consent to the shareholder's income tax return for the taxable year in which the sale is made.

(2) If the sale of stock in a consenting corporation is treated under section 341(f)(6) as the sale of stock in any other corporation, the consenting corporation shall notify such other corporation, within 5 days after receiving notification of a sale of its stock, of the date on which such sale was made.

(e) Recognition of gain under section 341(f)(2). (1) Under section 341(f)(2), if a subsection (f) asset (as defined in paragraph (g) of this section) is disposed of at any time by a consenting corporation, then, except as provided in section 341(f)(3) and paragraph (f) of this section, the amount by which—

(i) The amount realized (in the case of a sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion), or

(ii) The fair market value of such asset (in the case of any other disposition), exceeds the adjusted basis of such asset is treated as gain from the sale or exchange of such asset. Such gain is recognized notwithstanding any contrary nonrecognition provision of subtitle A of the Code, but only to the extent such gain is not recognized under any other provision of subtitle A of the Code (for example, section 1245(a)(1) or 1250(a)). Gain recognized under section 341(f)2) with respect to a disposition of a subsection (f) asset has the same character (i.e., ordinary income or capital gain) that such gain would have if it arose from a sale of such asset.

(2) The nonrecognition provisions of subtitle A of the Code which section 341(f)(2) overrides include, but are not limited to, sections 311(a), 332(c), 336, 337, 351, 361, 371(a), 374(a), 721, 1031, 1033, 1071, and 1081.

(3) In the case of a foreign corporation which files a statement of consent pursuant to paragraph (b) of this section, such statement, in addition to the information required in paragraph (b) of this section, shall also contain a declaration that the corporation consents that any gain upon the disposition of a subsection (f) asset which would otherwise be recognized under section 341(f)(2) will, for purposes of section 882(a) (2), be considered as gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business which is conducted through a permanent establishment within the United States.

(4) The provisions of subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Corporation X, a consenting corporation, distributes a subsection (f) asset to its shareholders in complete or partial liquidation of the corporation. The asset, at the time of the distribution, is held by the corporation primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of business and has an adjusted basis of $1,000 and a fair market value of $2,000. Under section 341(f)(2), the excess of the fair market value of the asset over its adjusted basis, or $1,000, is treated as ordinary income. Assuming the gain is not recognized by corporation X under another provision of the Code, corporation X recognizes the $1,000 gain as ordinary income under section 341(f)(2) even though, in the absence of section 341(f)(2), section 336 would preclude the recognition of such gain.

Example (2). Corporation Y, a consenting corporation, distributes a subsection (f) asset to its shareholders as a dividend. The asset at the time of the distribution is properly described in section 1231 and has an adjusted basis of $6,000 and a fair market value of $8,000. Assuming that no other section of the Code would require recognition of gain, under section 341 (f)(2) the excess of the fair market value of the asset over its adjusted basis, or $2,000, is recognized by corporation Y as gain from the sale or exchange of property described in section 1231 even though, in the absence of section 341(f)(2), section 311(a) would preclude the recognition of such gain.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (2) except that the subsection (f) asset is section 1245 property having a "recomputed basis" (as defined in section 1245(a)(2)) of $7,200. Since the recomputed basis of the asset is lower than its fair market value, the excess of the recomputed basis over the adjusted basis, or $1,200, is recognized as ordinary income under section 1245(a)(1). The remaining amount, or $800, is recognized under section 341(f)(2) as gain from the sale or exchange of property described in section 1231.

(5) The provisions of section 341 (f)(2) apply whether or not (i) on the date on which a consent is filed or at any time thereafter, the consenting corporation was in fact a collapsible corporation within the meaning of section 341(b), or (ii) on the date of any sale of stock of the consenting corporation, the purchaser of such stock was aware that a consent had been filed under section 341(f)(1) within the 6-month period ending on the date of such sale.

(6) Section 341(f)(2) does not apply to losses. Thus, section 341(f)(2) does not apply if a loss is realized upon a sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion of a subsection (f) asset nor does the section apply to a disposition other than by way of sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion if at the time of the disposition the fair market value of such property is not greater than its adjusted basis.

(7) For purposes of this paragraph, the term "disposition" includes an abandonment or retirement, a gift, a sale in a sale-and-leaseback transaction, and a transfer upon the foreclosure of a security interest. Such term, however, does not include a mere transfer of title to a creditor upon creation of a security interest or to a debtor upon termination of a security interest. Thus, for example, a disposition occurs upon a sale of property pursuant to a conditional sales contract even though the seller retains legal title to the property for purposes of security, but a disposition does not occur when the seller ultimately gives up his security interest following payment by the purchaser.

(8) The amount of gain required to be recognized by section 341(f)(2) shall be determined separately for each subsection (f) asset disposed of by the corporation. For purposes of applying section 341(f)(2), the facts and circumstances of each disposition shall be considered in determining whether the transaction involves more than one subsection (f) asset or involves both subsection (f) and nonsubsection (f) assets. In appropriate cases, several subsection (f) assets may be treated as a single asset as long as it is reasonably clear, from the best estimates obtainable on the basis of all the facts and circumstances, that the amount of gain required to be recognized by section 341(f)(2) is not less than the total gain under section 341(f)(2) which would be computed separately for each subsection (f) asset.

(9) In the case of a sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion of a subsection (f) asset and a nonsubsection (f) asset in one transaction, the total amount realized upon the disposition shall be allocated between the subsection (f) asset and the nonsubsection (f) asset in proportion to their respective fair market values. In general, if a buyer and seller have adverse interests as to the allocation of the amount realized between the subsection (f) asset and the nonsubsection (f) asset, any arm's-length agreement between the buyer and the seller will establish the allocation. In the absence of such an agreement, the allocation shall be made by taking into account the appropriate facts and circumstances. Some of the facts and circumstances which shall be taken into account to the extent appropriate include, but are not limited to, a comparison between the subsection (f) asset and all the property disposed of in such transaction of (i) the original cost and reproduction cost of construction, erection, or production, (ii) the remaining economic useful life, (iii) state of obsolescence, and (iv) anticipated expenditures to maintain, renovate, or modernize.

(10) See subparagraph (c)(1) of § 1.1502-14 for the deferral of gain recognized upon a distribution other than in complete liquidation made by one member of a group which files a consolidated return to another such member.

(f) Exception for certain tax-free transactions. (1) Under section 341(f)(3), no gain is taken into account under section 341(f)(2) by a transferor corporation on the transfer of a subsection (f) asset to another corporation (other than a corporation exempt from tax imposed by chapter 1 of the Code) if—

(i) The basis of such asset in the hands of the transferee corporation is determined by reference to its basis in the hands of the transferor by reason of the application of section 332 (relating to distributions in liquidation of an 80-percent-or-more controlled subsidiary corporation), section 351 (relating to transfers to a corporation controlled by the transferor), section 361 (relating to exchanges pursuant to certain reorganizations), section 371(a) (relating to exchanges pursuant to certain receivership and bankruptcy proceedings), or section 374(a) (relating to exchanges pursuant to certain railroad reorganizations), and

(ii) The transferee corporation agrees (as provided in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph) to have the provisions of section 341(f)(2) apply to any disposition by it of such asset.

(2) The provisions of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Corporation M, in exchange for its voting stock worth $20,000 and $1,000 in cash, acquires the entire property of corporation N (an unencumbered apartment building) in a transaction which is described in section 368(a)(2)(B) and which, therefore, qualifies as a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(C). The apartment building, which in the hands of corporation N, a consenting corporation, is a subsection (f) asset, has an adjusted basis of $15,000 and a fair market value of $21,000. The basis of the apartment house in the hands of corporation M is determined by reference to its basis in the hands of corporation N by reason of the application of section 361. Thus, under section 341(f)(3), if corporation M agrees to have the provisions of section 341(f)(2) apply to any disposition by it of the apartment house, then corporation N will recognize no gain under section 341(f)(2) but will recognize $1,000 gain under section 361(b) (assuming the cash it receives is not distributed in pursuance of the plan of reorganization). However, if corporation M does not so agree, the gain recognized by corporation N will be $6,000, that is, the gain of $1,000 recognized under section 361(b) plus $5,000 gain recognized under section 341(f)(2). In either case, if section 1245, 1250, or 1251 applies, some or all of the gain may be recognized under such sections in lieu of sections 341(f)(2) and 361(b).

Example (2). Corporation Y, a consenting corporation, is a wholly owned subsidiary of corporation X. In the complete liquidation of Y it distributes to X a subsection (f) asset which is section 1245 property. The asset at the time of the distribution has an adjusted basis of $10,000, a recomputed basis of $14,000, and a fair market value of $16,000. The basis of the asset in the hands of X is determined by reference to its basis in the hands of corporation Y by reason of the application of section 332. Thus, under section 341(f)(3), if corporation X agrees to have the provisions of section 341(f)(2) apply to any disposition by it of the subsection (f) asset, then Y will recognize no gain under section 341(f)(2) and will recognize no gain under section 1245(a)(1) by reason of the application of section 1245(b)(3). Under section 334(b)(1), the basis of the subsection (f) asset to corporation X will be the same as it would be in the hands of Y, or $10,000. However, if corporation X does not so agree, then under section 341(f)(2) $6,000 (the excess of the fair market value of the asset over its adjusted basis) will be treated as gain from the sale or exchange of the asset. Moreover, under section 1245(a)(1) $4,000 (the excess of the recomputed basis over the adjusted basis) of the $6,000 will be recognized as ordinary income. The basis of the asset to corporation X is $16,000, i.e., the same as it would be in the hands of Y ($10,000) increased in the amount of gain recognized by Y on the distribution ($6,000).

(3) The agreement of a transferee corporation referred to in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph shall be filed, on or before the date on which the subsection (f) assets are transferred, with the district director having jurisdiction over its income tax return for the taxable year during which the transfer is to be made. The agreement shall be signed by any officer who is duly authorized to act on behalf of the transferee corporation (if the transfaction is one to which section 371(a) or 374(a) applies, the fiduciary for the transferee corporation, in appropriate cases, may sign the agreement) and shall apply to all the subsection (f) assets to be transferred pursuant to the applicable transaction described in section 341(f)(3). The agreement shall identify the transaction by which the subsection (f) assets will be acquired, including the names, addresses, and employer identification number of the transferor and transferee corporations, and shall contain a schedule of the subsection (f) assets to be acquired. The agreement shall also state that the transferee corporation (i) agrees to have the provisions of section 341(f)(2) apply to any disposition by it of the subsection (f) assets acquired, and (ii) agrees to maintain records adequate to permit identification of such subsection (f) assets.

(4) The transferor corporation shall attach a copy of the agreement to its income tax return for the taxable year in which the subsection (f) assets are transferred.

(g) Subsection (f) asset defined. (1) Under section 341(f)(4), a subsection (f) asset is any property which, as of the date of any sale of stock to which paragraph (a) or (j)(3) of this section applies, is not a capital asset and is property owned by, or subject to a binding contract or an option to acquire held by, the consenting corporation. Land or any interest in real property (other than a security interest) is treated as property which is not a capital asset. Also, unrealized receivables or fees (as defined in section 341(b)(4)) are treated as property which are not capital assets.

(2) If, with respect to any property described in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, manufacture, construction, or production has been commenced by either the consenting corporation or another person before any date of sale of stock described in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, a consenting corporation's subsection (f) assets include any property resulting from such manufacture, construction, or production. Thus, for example, if, on the date of any sale of stock within the 6-month period, manufacture, construction, or production has been commenced on a tract of land to be used for residential housing or on a television series, the term "subsection (f) asset" includes the residential homes or the television tapes resulting from such manufacture, construction, or production by the consenting corporation (or by a transferee corporation which has agreed to the application of section 341(f)(2)). If land or any interest in real property (other than a security interest) is owned or held under an option by the consenting corporation on the date of any sale of stock described in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, the term "subsection (f) asset" includes any improvements resulting from construction with respect to such property (by the consenting corporation or by a transferee corporation which has agreed to the application of section 341(f)(2)) if such construction is commenced within 2 years after the date of any such sale. The property or improvements resulting from any manufacture, construction, or production is a question to be determined on the basis of the particular facts and circumstances of each individual case. Thus, for example, a building which is a part of an integrated project is a subsection (f) asset if construction of the project commenced before the date of sale or within 2 years thereafter even if construction of the building commenced more than 2 years thereafter. Similarly a television tape which is part of a series is a subsection (f) asset if production of the series was commenced on the date of sale even if production of the tape commenced after the sale.

(3) The provisions of subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Corporation X files a consent to the application of section 341(f)(2) on January 1, 1965. Shareholder A owns 100 percent of the oustanding stock of the consenting corporation on January 1, 1965, and sells 5 percent of the stock on January 2, 1965, 10 percent on February 10, 1965, and 1 percent on May 1, 1965. No other sales of X stock were made during the 6-month period beginning on January 1, 1965. On such date X owns an apartment building and on March 1 X purchases an office building. X's subsection (f) assets include the apartment building owned on January 1 and the office building purchased on March 1.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that on January 1, 1965, X also owns a tract of raw land. On April 1, 1965, construction of a residential housing project is commenced on the tract of land. Corporation X's subsection (f) assets will include the tract of land plus the resulting improvements to the land. This result would not be changed if construction of the residential housing project were not commenced until July 1, 1966, since the construction would have been commenced within 2 years after May 1, 1965.

Example (3). Corporation Y files a consent to the application of section 341(f)(2) on January 1, 1965. Shareholder B owns 100 percent of the outstanding stock of the consenting corporation on January 1, 1965, and sells 10 percent of the stock on June 1, 1965. On April 1, 1965, Y acquires an option to purchase a motion picture when completed. On May 1, 1965, production is started on the motion picture. On February 1, 1967, production is completed, and Y exercises its option. Y holds the option and the motion picture for use in its trade or business. Y's subsection (f) asset initially include the option and ultimately include the motion picture. However, the exercise of the option is not a disposition of the option within the meaning of section 341(f)(2).

(h) Five-year limitation as to shareholder. Under section 341(f)(5), section 341(f)(1) does not apply to the sale of stock of a consenting corporation if, during the 5-year period ending on the date of such sale, such shareholder (or any person related to such shareholder within the meaning of section 341(e)(8)(A)) made a sale (as defined in paragraph (a)(2) of this section) of any stock of another consenting corporation within any 6-month period beginning on a date on which a consent was filed under section 341(f)(1) by such other corporation. Section 341(f)(5) does not prevent a shareholder of a consenting corporation from receiving the benefit of section 341(f)(1) on the sale of additional shares of the stock of the same consenting corporation.

(i) [Reserved]

(j) Special rule for stock ownership in other corporations. (1) Section 341(f)(6) provides a special rule applicable to a consenting corporation which owns 5 percent or more in value of the outstanding stock of another corporation. In such a case, a consent filed by the consenting corporation shall not be valid with respect to a sale of its stock during the applicable 6-month period unless each corporation, 5 percent or more in value of the outstanding stock of which is owned by the consenting corporation on the date of such sale, files (within the 6-month period ending on the date of such sale) a valid consent under section 341(f)(1) with respect to sales of its own stock.

(2) The provisions of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Corporation X files a consent under section 341(f)(1) on November 1, 1965. On January 1, 1966, the date on which a shareholder of corporation X sells stock of X, X owns 80 percent in value of the outstanding stock of corporation Y. In order for the consent filed by corporation X to be valid with respect to the sale of its stock on January 1, 1966, corporation Y must have filed, during the 6-month period ending on January 1, 1966, a valid consent under section 341(f)(1) with respect to sales of its stock.

(3) For purposes of applying section 341(f)(4) (relating to the definition of a subsection (f) asset) to a corporation 5 percent or more in value of the outstanding stock of which is owned by the consenting corporation, a sale of stock of the consenting corporation to which section 341(f)(1) applies shall be treated as a sale of stock of such other corporation. Thus, in the example in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, the subsection (f) assets of corporation Y would include property described in section 341(f)(4) owned by or held under an option by corporation Y on January 1, 1966.

(4) In the case of a chain of corporations connected by the 5-percent ownership requirement described in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, rules similar to the rules described in subparagraphs (1) and (3) of this paragraph shall apply. Thus, in the example in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, if corporation Y owned 5 percent or more of the stock of corporation Z on January 1, 1966, then Z must have filed a valid consent during the 6-month period ending January 1, 1966, in order for the consent filed by X to be valid with respect to the sale of its stock on January 1, 1966. In such case any sale of stock of either X or Y is treated as a sale of stock of Z for purposes of applying section 341(f)(4) to Z.

(5) If a corporation is a member of an affiliated group (as defined in section 1504(a)) that files a consolidated return, a corporation will be considered to have filed a consent if a consent is filed on its behalf by the common parent under § 1.1502-77(a).

(k) Effective date. Paragraphs (b), (c), (e)(3), and (f)(3) of this section apply only with respect to statements and notifications filed more than 30 days after July 6, 1977. Paragraph (d) applies only with respect to sales of stock made more than 30 days after July 6, 1977. All other provisions of this section apply with respect to transactions after August 22, 1964.

Par. 4. Section 1.1502-32(d)(6) is amended by deleting "August 6, 1979," and inserting in its place "August 9, 1979,".

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in sections 341(f), 1502 and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (78 Stat. 596, 68A Stat. 637, 68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 341(f), 1502, 7805).

26 CFR 1.164-3: Definitions and special rules.

Sales tax; California. The sales tax imposed by California on the retailer and paid to the retailer by the consumer is includible in the retailer's gross income. The tax is deductible by the consumer when paid to the retailer and by the retailer when accrued or paid to the State.

Rev. Rul. 80-1

The California State sales tax levied under section 6051 of the Cal. Rev. & Tax Code (West Supp. 1978) (California Code) is imposed on the retailer for purposes of section 164(a) (4) of the Internal Revenue Code and section 1.164-1(a) of the Income Tax Regulations. Thus, the sales tax paid to the retailer by the consumer must be included in the retailer's gross income for federal income tax purposes and is deductible by the retailer (when paid or accrued by the retailer) as a tax under section 164(a)(4).

Although the California State sales tax is imposed on the retailer, sections 6052 and 6052.5 of the California Code provide for its collection from the consumer. The law provides that the retailer have a separate statement of the sales tax in a "sales tax reimbursement schedule" available for inspection by the consumer or post a notice to consumers that the sales tax computed on the basis of such schedule is included in the posted or advertised price of an item. Therefore, the tax is a separately stated general sales tax within the meaning of section 164(b)(5) of the Code. Thus, when the sales tax is paid to the retailer by the consumer (other than in connection with his or her trade or business), the consumer may deduct such tax if either the consumer itemizes deductions or the sales tax is attributable to property held for the production of rents or royalties. See sections 62(5) and 63 of the Code.

In Diamond National Corp. v. State Board of Equalization, 425 U.S. 268 (1976) (per curiam), the Supreme Court of the United States held that the incidence of the California sales tax was on the purchaser national bank, and not the retailer because the California sales tax required the retailer to pass on the tax to the consumer. In Diamond National the issue was whether the California sales tax was imposed on a purchaser national bank in the violation of the bank's immunity from state taxation under the former 12 U.S.C. section 548 (1964) (current version at 12 U.S.C. section 548 (1976)). The Diamond National case does not involve the incidence of a state sales tax for purposes of section 164(a)(4) of the Code and thus does not control the incidence of the California sales tax for purposes of section 164(a)(4) of the Code.

For a statement of the tax results when the sales tax is paid by a consumer with respect to items used in connection with the consumer's trade or business, see Rev. Rul. 77-465, 1977-2 C.B. 61 at 63.

Intangible drilling and development costs; option to deduct. Section 263 of the Code, as amended by the Energy Tax Act of 1978 to grant an option to deduct intangible drilling and development costs incurred with respect to geothermal wells, does not permit a new election for the treatment of such costs for oil and gas wells.

FACTS

Section 263(c) of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended by the Energy Tax Act of 1978, section 402(a), 1978-3 (Vol. 2) C.B. 27, provides that the Secretary shall prescribe regulations that grant an option to deduct intangible drilling and development costs (IDC) incurred by an operator in the drilling of geothermal wells. The election to charge to capital or to expense IDC incurred in the drilling of geothermal wells is separate from the election provided for oil and gas wells. *S. Rep. HOLDING

Section 263(c) of the Code, as amended, grants an option to charge to capital or to expense IDC incurred in the drilling and development of geothermal wells, but does not permit a new election for the treatment of IDC for oil and gas wells. Title insurance company; title or abstract plant. A domestic title insurance company may deduct recurring expenses incurred to update its title plants.

Rev. Rul. 80-3

ISSUE

Are payments made by a title insurance company to update title and abstract plants deductible by the title company under section 832(c) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

T, a domestic corporation taxable under section 831 of the Code, was in the business of insuring title to real property in 1977. As a title insurance underwriter, T must search the title to real property before issuing a policy thereon.

To obtain necessary information, T utilizes title or abstract plants, which are an integral part of T's operations. Title plants contain the records, proofs, abstracts, legal opinions and surveys that T has accumulated. These materials are carefully indexed in order to facilitate a rapid and accurate search of history of title to a particular parcel of real estate.

T incurs recurring updating expenses to microfilm, post, index and file data on a daily basis with respect to transactions affecting title to all real estate located within designated localities, whether or not there is a request for a title insurance policy. When issuing title policies, it is common for title examiners to make use of any previously prepared title reports as a starting point and to update them to the current period.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 162(a) of the Code allows a deduction for ordinary and necessay expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year to carry on any trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered.

Section 263(a)(1) of the Code provides that no deduction shall be allowed for any amount paid out for permanent improvements made to increase the value of any property. Section 263(a)(2) provides that no deduction shall be allowed for any amount expended in restoring property or in making good the exhaustion thereof for which an allowance is or has been made.

Section 832(c)(1) of the Code provides that all ordinary and necessary expenses incurred, as provided in section 162, shall be allowed as a deduction under section 832(c) in computing the taxable income of an insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 831.

Section 1.263(a)-1(b) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the amounts referred to in section 263(a) of the Code include amounts paid or incurred to add to the value, or to substantially prolong the useful life, of property owned by the taxpayer such as plant or equipment, or to adapt property to a new or different use. Amounts paid or incurred for incidental repairs and maintenance of property are not capital expenditures.

In Bay Counties Title Guaranty Co. v. Commissioner, 34 T.C. 29 (1960), aff'd, 288 F.2d 187 (9th Cir. 1961), a title insurance company had established a title plant, which is a complex of the records that a title insurance company owns and uses in making searches of titles and preparing abstracts of titles to all of the real estate within the area of a company's operations. In addition to its regular accumulation of records of various matters affecting title to real property, the company followed the practice of purchasing copies of preliminary, or "starter" reports and of old title policies from real estate concerns, real estate brokers, lending institutions, and others. The title reports and title policies did not directly relate to any current searches and examinations of title insurance policies; therefore, such documents were filed for such future use, if any, as might develop. The company deducted the cost of these "starter" reports on its federal income tax return.

In holding that these expenditures were made for the purchase of business assets, rather than for maintenance of the title plant, the Tax Court of the United States said:

> It is admitted that the value of the starter reports extends beyond the year of purchase and continues until such time in some indeterminate future year as petitioner shall have the occasion to write an abstract on a title covered up to a point by a starter report. . . . We think it is clear beyond any doubt that the starter reports have an economic life extending beyond the year of purchase and that they represented additions and supplements to the plant which increased its value. It is a generally accepted rule that an amount expended for an asset having a useful life which is not consumed in the year of the expenditure is usually to be classified as a capital item.

In Bay Counties, the expenditures were incurred for the purchase of starter reports and old policies of real estate title insurance that represented the acquisition of substantial new capital assets. The expenditures incurred by T, however, were for updating existing records, similar to maintenance costs incurred to keep the title plants in normal working order. The amounts expended merely permitted the title plants to continue operating at a current level.

HOLDING

T's recurring payments to update the plants are ordinary and necessary business expenses deductible under section 832(c)(1) of the Code.

Foreign tax credit; Netherlands Antilles; payment pursuant to legal liability. A payment to the Netherlands Antilles pursuant to the election described in Rev. Rul. 65-16 is a payment made pursuant to a legal liability for purposes of section 901(b) of the Code; Rev. Rul. 65-16 amplified.

Rev. Rul. 80-4

ISSUE

Is a payment to the Netherlands Antilles pursuant to the election described in Rev. Rul. 65-16, 1965-1 C.B. 626, a payment made pursuant to a legal liability for purposes of the foreign tax credit provided in section 901(b) of the Internal Revenue Code?

LAW

Rev. Rul. 65-16 holds that a Netherlands Antilles corporation electing to be taxed under Article 8A of the National Ordinace on Profit Tax of 1940 of the Netherlands Antilles, as added by the National Ordinance of December 30, 1963, may be entitled to the tax benefits that are accorded by Articles VII, VIII, and IX of the United States-Netherlands Income Tax Convention, 1950-1 C.B. 92, as extended to the Netherlands Antilles, 1956-2 C.B. 1116.

Section 901(b) of the Code generally allows qualifying United States taxpayers to claim a foreign tax credit for the amount of any income taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year to any foreign country subject to certain limitations.

Section 902(a) of the Code provides generally that domestic corporations owning at least 10 percent of the stock of a foreign corporation from which it receives dividends paid out of accumulated profits shall be deemed to have paid a certain portion of any creditable foreign income tax paid or deemed to have been paid by such foreign corporation on or with respect to such accumulated profits.

For purposes of claiming a credit under section 901(b) of the Code for the payment or accrual of an amount to a foreign government, such payment or accrual must constitute a tax liability to the foreign government. See Rev. Rul. 76-215, 1976-1 C.B. 194. Only the taxpayer liable for the tax may claim a credit under section 901 and only in the amount for which the taxpayer is liable. See Rev. Ruls. 72-370, 1972-2 C.B. 437 and 59-101, 1959-1 C.B. 189. When a credit is being claimed pursuant to section 902 (a) by a domestic parent corporation for amounts paid or accrued to a foreign government by its foreign subsidiary, such amounts must also constitute a tax liability to the foreign government. A payment of an amount to a foreign government that is not made pursuant to a legal tax liability could be a contribution to such government rather than a payment of a tax. See Rev. Rul. 76-508, 1976-2 C.B. 225.

HOLDING

A payment to the Netherlands Antilles pursuant to the election described in Rev. Rul. 65-16 will be considered a payment made pursuant to a legal liability for purposes of the foreign tax credit provided in section 901 (b) of the Code under the United States-Netherlands Income Tax Convention as extended to the Netherlands Antilles.

Section 6013.—Joint Returns of Income Tax by Husband and Wife

(Also Section 1034; 1.1034-1.)

Sale of residence; amended joint return without spouse's signature. A taxpayer and the taxpayer's spouse filed a joint return deferring the gain on the sale of their personal residence under section 1034 of the Code. They subsequently obtained a divorce. The former spouse reinvested the amount required under section 1034 and refused to sign an amended return with the taxpayer, who failed to purchase a new residence within the 18-month period. The taxpayer must file an amended joint return for the year of the sale with a letter explaining why the spouse's signature is missing.

Rev. Rul. 80-5

ISSUE

What type of return must be filed by a taxpayer who previously filed a joint return without reporting the gain on the sale of a residence and subsequently failed to meet the reinvestment requirement of section 1034 of the Internal Revenue Code when the taxpayer is now divorced and the ex-spouse refuses to sign an amended return?

FACTS

A taxpayer and spouse filed a joint federal income tax return without reporting the gain on the sale of their jointly-owned principal residence because they expected to purchase a new principal residence within 18 months of the sale and defer recognition of the gain under section 1034 of the Code. They were divorced in the next year and the ex-spouse purchased a new principal residence within the 18 month period and reinvested the amount required to defer the ex-spouse's portion of the gain realized on the sale of the old residence. The taxpayer, however, did not purchase a new residence within the 18 month period. The ex-spouse refused to sign an amended joint return.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1034 of the Code provides that no gain from the sale of property used by a taxpayer as a principal residence shall be recognized if the taxpayer purchases and uses as a principal residence a new residence within 18 months of the sale at a cost equal to or in excess of the sales price realized by the taxpayer on the old residence, less the aggregate of the expenses for work performed on the old residence to assist in its sale.

Section 1.1034-1(i) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that if a taxpayer fails to purchase a new residence within the 18 month period, any gain from the sale of the old residence that is required to be recognized shall be included on an amended return for the year in which the gain from the sale of the old residence was realized in order to reflect the inclusion in gross income for that year of gain required to be recognized in connection with such sale.

Section 1.6013-1(a)(1) of the regulations provides that for any taxable year with respect to which a joint return has been filed, separate returns shall not be made by the spouses after the time for filing the return of either has expired.

HOLDING

The taxpayer must file an amended joint income tax return, using the joint return tax rates for the year of the original return, and paying the additional tax with the amended return. The taxpayer should attach a letter to the amended return explaining why the spouse's signature cannot be obtained.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER C, PART 31.—EMPLOYMENT TAXES; APPLICABLE ON OR AFTER JANUARY 1, 1955

Wage and tax statements furnished to employees

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to the requirement that employers furnish Form W-2, Wage and Tax Statement, to employees whose employment is terminated before the end of the year.

DATE: The amendments are effective November 29, 1979.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: David B. Cubeta of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of the Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224 (Attention: CC:LR:T) (202-566-3926).

BACKGROUND AND EXPLANATION

On July 2, 1979, the Federal Register published a proposed amendment to the Employment Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 31) under section 6051 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 concerning the time within which employers must furnish Forms W-2 to employees whose employment is terminated before the end of the calendar year. The amendment was proposed to change the rule that the employer must furnish the form to the employee within 30 days of the last payment of wages. The rule contained in the proposed regulations provides that the employer may furnish the form at any time after the termination of employment but no later than January 31 of the following calendar year. However, if the employee requests that the form be furnished at an earlier time, the rule requires that the form be furnished within 30 days of the request or within 30 days after the last payment of wages, whichever is later.

Although no public hearing was requested or held, numerous written comments were received. Nearly all of the commentators supported the new rule and urged its adoption because of the reduction in paperwork and cost that would result from the preparation and mailing of the form at the end of the year. However, a few comments were critical of the proposed rule for requiring the employer to comply with an employee's request that the form be furnished at an earlier time. This requirement has been retained in the final regulations because it appears that Congress in enacting section 6051(a) contemplated that an employee whose employment is terminated before the end of the calendar year should be able to obtain the Form W-2 prior to the end of the year.

Another comment suggested that the proposed rule be changed to require the employee's request to be in writing in order to enable the employer to document his compliance with the rules. This suggestion has not been adopted because it is believed that the potential benefits of a written request requirement are outweighed by the paperwork burden that the rule would impose.

Therefore, after consideration of all comments received, this Treasury decision adopts the amendments as proposed. The effectiveness of this regulation will be monitored through comments received from the public and from within the Internal Revenue Service.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is David B. Cubeta of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 31 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. Section 31.6051 is deleted.

Par. 2. Paragraph (d) of § 31.6051-1 is amended by deleting subparagraph (2)(ii), by redesignating subparagraph (2)(i) as subparagraph (2), and by revising subparagraph (1) to read as follows:

(d) Time for furnishing statements—(1) In general. Each statement required by this section for a calendar year and each corrected statement required for the year shall be furnished to the employee on or before January 31 of the year succeeding such calendar year. If an employee's employment is terminated before the close of such calendar year, the employer, at his option, shall furnish the statement to the employee at any time after the termination but no later than January 31 of the year succeeding such calendar year. However, if an employee whose employment is terminated before the close of such calendar year requests the employer to furnish him the statement at an earlier time, and if there is no reasonable expectation on the part of both employer and employee of further employment during the calendar year, then the employer shall furnish the statement to the employee on or before the later of the 30th day after the day of the request or the 30th day after the day on which the last payment of wages is made. For provisions relating to the filing of the Internal Revenue Service copies of the statement, see § 31.6051-2.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in sections 6051(c) and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

26 CFR 301.6402-1: Authority to make credits or refunds.

Joint return; net operating loss for separate return year. The proper method is provided for computing the amount to be refunded to an unmarried taxpayer who incurred a net operating loss that was carried back or carried over to a year in which the taxpayer was married and filed a joint return; Rev. Rul. 75-368 modified.

Rev. Rul. 80-6

ISSUE

What is the proper method of determining the amount of a spouse's individual refund, if the spouse incurs a net operating loss in a separate return year that is carried back or carried over to a year in which a joint return was filed?

FACTS

The taxpayer and spouse were divorced in 1969. Prior to their divorce, they had always filed joint income tax returns. In 1970, the taxpayer filed a return as an unmarried individual. During that year, the taxpayer sustained a net operating loss. In 1973, the taxpayer remarried and filed a joint tax return. In 1973, the taxpayer filed claims for refund of taxes paid in 1967, 1968 and 1971.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

In Rev. Rul. 75-368, 1975-2 C.B. 480, which is based on the same set of facts, the penultimate paragraph states:

> In the instant case, the net operating loss occurred in 1970, when the taxpayer filed his return as an unmarried individual. The net operating loss deduction for 1967, 1968, and 1971 will be carried back and carried over only to the taxpayer's portion of the income shown on his joint returns. The joint tax rates will be applied to the reduced taxable income. The amount of the taxpayer's overpayment on each return will be the excess of the tax paid on these returns over the recomputed tax for that return, limited to the amount of the tax actually paid by the taxpayer that is attributable to his portion of the taxable income originally reported on the return.

The method of calculating the taxpayer's individual refund in Rev. Rul. 75-368 is inconsistent with the method employed in Rev. Rul. 80-7 for determining a spouse's individual interest in an overpayment, if both spouses file a joint return. In order to be consistent with Rev. Rul 80-7, the Internal Revenue Service will apply the separate tax method of allocation in order to determine a spouse's individual refund, if a separate net operating loss is carried back or carried over to a joint return year.

In Rev. Rul. 67-431, 1967-2 C.B. 411, the Service stated that the taxpayer may carry back an investment tax credit attributable to investments made by the taxpayer that was reported on a joint return filed by the taxpayer and his second wife to that portion of the tax attributable to him on a joint return filed by the taxpayer and his first wife. The Service stated that the refund with respect to the joint return filed by the taxpayer and his first wife will be made to the taxpayer because the Service has no knowledge of circumstances indicating that taxes were paid by anyone other than the taxpayer. Rev. Rul. 80-7 amplifies Rev. Rul. 67-431 by providing the method for determining the amount of the joint taxes attributable to the taxpayer and by providing a method for determining the amount to be refunded to the taxpayer.

HOLDING

The penultimate paragraph of Rev. Rul. 75-368 is modified to state as follows:

> In the instant case, the net operating loss occurred in 1970, when the taxpayer filed a return as an unmarried individual. The net operating loss deduction will be carried back and carried over only to the income that would have been reported by the taxpayer, if a separate return would have been filed. The joint rates will be applied to the reduced joint taxable income. The amount of the taxpayer's individual refund will be calculated by determining the taxpayer's recomputed share of the joint liability according to the separate tax formula:
> and subtracting that amount from the taxpayer's contribution determined in accordance with Rev. Rul. 80-7. The amount of the overpayment refunded to the taxpayer will be limited to the amount of the joint overpayment. In computing each taxpayer's separate tax liability, the tax rates for married individuals filing separate returns should be used. See section 1(d) of the Code for such rates.

Rev. Rul. 75-368 is modified.

26 CFR 301.6402-1: Authority to make credits or refunds.

Joint return; overpayment; credit against separate tax liability. The proper method is provided for computing the amount of an overpayment shown on a joint return that may be credited to one spouse's unpaid separate tax liability from a prior year; Rev. Rul. 67-431 amplified.

Rev. Rul. 80-7

ISSUE

If a taxpayer and spouse file a joint return in which an overpayment is reported, what is the proper method of determining the amount that may be credited to a spouse's separate liability?

FACTS

A and B are married and filed a joint 1977 Federal income tax return showing a liability of $13,004. A reported $20,000 of wages, from which $6,000 was withheld, and $10,000 of other income. B reported $10,000 of wages, from which $2,000 was withheld, and $5,000 of other income. A and B filed a joint estimated tax declaration and paid $8,000 in estimated tax payments. A has an unpaid separate liability of $5,000 from a prior year.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 6402(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that in the case of any overpayment, the Secretary may within the applicable period of limitations credit the amount of the overpayment including any interest allowed thereon, against any liability in respect of an Internal Revenue tax on the part of the person who made the overpayment and shall refund the balance to such person.

In Rev. Rul. 74-611, 1974-2 C.B. 399, the Internal Revenue Service ruled that when a husband and wife file a joint return each spouse has a separate interest in the jointly reported income and a separate interest in any overpayment.

Section 20.2053-6(f) of the Estate and Gift Tax Regulations provides the method for determining the estate tax deduction allowed for income taxes paid on a decedent's final income tax return. Section 20.2053-6(f) provides that if the decedent's final return is a joint return, then the decedent's liability will be determined according to the following formula:

Section 1.6654-2(e) of the Income Tax Regulations, relating to declarations of estimated tax by individuals and the applicability of exceptions to an underpayment of estimated tax, contains the same separate tax formula for allocating the tax shown on the joint return for the preceding taxable year, and for allocating the tax computed on the basis of the facts shown on a joint return for the preceding taxable year but using current year's rates and exemptions, in the event joint returns were filed in the preceding year and separate returns are filed for the current taxable year. Therefore, if a husband and wife file a joint return, the Service, in order to be consistent with similar allocation provisions, will apply the separate tax formula in section 20.2053-6(f) of the Estate Tax Regulations and section 1.6654-2(e) of the Income Tax Regulations in order to determine each spouse's share of the joint tax liability.

Section 20.2053-6(f) of the Estate Tax Regulations also provides that if the decedent and his spouse are entitled to a refund, then, in the absence of a provision of local law providing to the contrary, the decedent's share of the refund shall be the amount by which the decedent's contribution toward the payment of the joint tax exceeds the decedent's liability determined in accordance with the separate tax formula. Again, in order to be consistent, the Service will also determine a spouse's individual refund in accordance with the method in section 20.2053-6(f). Therefore, a spouse's individual refund will be determined by subtracting the spouse's individual liability determined in accordance with the separate tax formula from the spouse's contribution toward that liability.

Section 20.2053-6(f) of the regulations does not provide a method for determining a spouse's contribution toward the payment of the joint liability. However, sections 1.31-1 and 1.6015(b)-1(b) of Income Tax Regulations provide a method for allocating payments made by a taxpayer in certain situations. Therefore, the Service will determine a spouse's contribution toward the payment of the joint liability by reference to sections 1.31-1 and 1.6015(b)-1(b).

Section 1.31-1 of the regulations provides that the recipient of wages upon which a withholding tax was deducted shall be allowed a credit for the taxes withheld. In a community property state, each spouse is considered the recipient of one-half of the wages upon which taxes are withheld and thus is entitled to a credit for one-half of the taxes that are withheld. Since withholding tax credits can be attributed directly to the recipient of income, a spouse's contribution will include the withholding tax credits reported by the spouse with respect to the spouse's income. Therefore, if a husband and wife file a joint return and do not file an estimated declaration and/or make a payment with their joint return, then each spouse's contribution toward the joint liability will be equal to the withholding tax credits attributed to the spouse, plus any applicable section 6401(b) credits.

Section 6401(b) of the Code provides that any withholding tax credit under section 31, earned income credit under section 43, and gasoline credit under section 39, in excess of tax imposed by subtitle A are to be treated as overpayments of tax. Consequently, in addition to the withholding tax credit, an attributable portion of both the earned income credit and the gasoline credit may comprise part of a spouse's contribution for purposes of determining an individual's share of a joint overpayment.

If a husband and wife file a joint return and file an estimated declaration of tax and/or make a payment with their return, then each spouse's contribution will be determined, in part, by an analogy to section 20.2053-6(f) of the Estate Tax Regulations and section 1.6015(b)-1(b) of the Income Tax Regulations. Section 1.6015(b)-1(b) provides the method for allocating joint estimated tax payments between a husband and wife in the event they file separate income tax returns. It provides that in the event the spouses cannot agree on the allocation of the estimated tax payments, the estimated tax payments will be allocated according to the following formula:

In Rev. Rul. 76-140, 1976-1 C.B. 376, the Service stated that section 1.6015(b)-1(b) would also apply if a husband and wife filed a joint income tax return and elected under section 301.6402-3(b)(2) of the Administrative and Procedural Regulations to have their overpayment credited to their estimated tax liability for the subsequent year but failed to file a declaration of estimated tax for the subsequent year and filed separate returns in the subsequent year. Therefore, if neither spouse reports any income subject to withholding and the spouses file a joint declaration of estimated income tax and/or make a payment with their joint return, then in the absence of clear and convincing evidence to the contrary, each spouse's contribution will be determined in accordance with the formula in section 1.6015(b)-1(b) of the Income Tax Regulations.

If the spouses have income subject to withholding and they file a joint declaration of estimated tax and/or make a payment with their joint return then each spouse's contribution should be determined by combining the two contribution methods. Each spouse's contribution will include the withholding tax credits reported by the spouse on the joint return. In addition, in the absence of clear and convincing evidence to the contrary, the formula in section 1.6015(b)-1(b) of the regulations shall be used to allocate to the spouses the estimated tax payments and/or payments with the joint return.

Applying the above principles to the spouses' joint liability of $13,004, the total refund due the spouses is $2,996 ($16,000 — $13,004). If the spouses filed separate returns, A's liability would have been $10,302 and B's liability would have been $3,334, if the tax is calculated in accordance with section 1(d) of the Code. Each spouse's contribution will be determined as follows:

A's deemed portion of the estimated tax payments.

$$\frac{$10{,}302}{$10{,}302 + $3{,}334} \times $8{,}000 = $6{,}044$$

B's deemed portion of the estimated tax payments.

$$\frac{$3{,}334}{$10{,}302 + $3{,}334} \times $8{,}000 = $1{,}956$$

A's total contribution is $12,044 ($6,000 + $6,044).

B's total contribution is $3,956 ($2,000 + $1,956).

Having thus determined each spouse's contribution, each spouse's share of the joint overpayment will be the difference between each spouse's liability and each spouse's contribution as determined above. However, the overpayment credited to a spouse in the spouse's individual capacity can not exceed the joint overpayment. See section 6013(d) of the Code.

A's share of the joint liability

$$\frac{$10,302}{$10,302 + $3,334} \times $13,004 = $9,825$$

B's share of the joint liability

$$\frac{$3,334}{$10,302 + $3,334} \times $13,004 = $3,179$$

A's individual credit or refund is $2,219 ($12,044 — $9,825).

B's individual credit or refund is $777 ($3,956 — $3,179).

HOLDING

If the spouses file a joint return showing an overpayment then the amount that may be credited to one spouse's separate liability is computed by subtracting the spouse's share of the joint liability, determined in accordance with the separate tax formula, from the spouse's contribution toward the joint liability. The amount credited cannot exceed the amount of the joint overpayment. In this case, $2,219 of the $2,996 joint overpayment will be credited against A's outstanding separate liability. The balance of the joint overpayment will be refunded.

In Rev. Rul. 67-431, 1967-2 C.B. 411, the Service stated that the taxpayer may carry back an investment tax credit attributable to investments made by the taxpayer that was reported on a joint return filed by the taxpayer and his second wife to that portion of the tax attributable to him on a joint return filed by the taxpayer and his first wife. The Service stated that the refund with respect to the joint return filed by the taxpayer and his first wife will be made to the taxpayer because the Service has no knowledge of circumstances indicating that taxes were paid by anyone other than the taxpayer.

Rev. Rul. 67-431 is amplified.

26 CFR 6402-1: Authority to make credits or refunds.

Joint return; amended; overpayment; single signature. The Service will accept a claim for credit or refund filed by a divorced taxpayer on a Form 1040X with respect to a joint return if the Form 1040X is signed by only one of the taxpayers and will issue a refund check in that taxpayer's name alone. The proper method is provided for computing the refund that may be made to the individual taxpayer.

Rev. Rul. 80-8

ISSUES

(1) Whether the Internal Revenue Service will accept a claim for credit or refund filed by a divorced taxpayer on a Form 1040X, Amended U.S. Individual Income Tax Return, with respect to a jointly filed return, if the Form 1040X is signed by only one of the taxpayers and whether the refund can be isued only in the name of the taxpayer who filed the Form 1040X.

(2) What is the proper method of determining the amount of a taxpayer's individual refund, if only the taxpayer signs a Form 1040X, Amended U.S. Individual Income Tax Return, with respect to the joint return year and the taxpayer requests the refund be issued in his name alone?

FACTS

A and B, a married couple residing in a noncommunity property state, filed a joint 1977 Federal income tax return reporting a tax liability of $6,668. B reported $20,000 of wages and withholding tax credits of $5,028. A erroneously reported a $10,000 tax-free stipend and reported withholding tax credits of $1,640. In 1978, A and B were divorced. Subsequent to their divorce A filed a Form 1040X for 1977, showing a tax liability of $3,484, which correctly reported the tax-free stipend A received in 1977. Only A signed the Form 1040X and A requested the refund check be issued in A's name alone.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 6402(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides in the case of any overpayment, the Secretary may within the applicable period of limitations credit the amount of the overpayment, including any interest allowed thereon, against any liability in respect of an Internal Revenue Tax on the part of the person who made the overpayment and shall refund the balance to such person.

In Rev. Rul. 74-611, 1974-2 C.B. 399, the Service ruled that when a husband and wife file a joint return each spouse has a separate interest in the jointly reported income and a separate interest in any overpayment.

Rev. Rul. 80-7 holds that a spouse's share of a joint overpayment will be determined by subtracting the spouse's share of the joint liability, determined in accordance with the separate tax formula, from the spouse's contribution toward the joint liability. However, the ruling states that the amount of the overpayment paid to any one spouse can not exceed the amount of the joint overpayment.

In order to be consistent with Rev. Rul. 80-7 the Service will apply the separate tax method of allocation in order to determine a spouse's share of a joint overpayment that results from the filing of a separate claim for refund. Therefore, the taxpayer's individual refund will be calculated by determining the taxpayer's individual liability according to the separate tax formula: and subtracting the taxpayer's individual liability from the taxpayer's contribution determined in accordance with Rev. Rul. 80-7. The amount of the overpayment refunded to the taxpayer will be limited to the amount of the joint overpayment.

HOLDINGS

(1) The Service will accept a claim for credit or refund filed by a divorced taxpayer on a Form 1040X with respect to a jointly filed individual income tax return if the Form 1040X is signed by only one of the taxpayers, and the Service will issue a refund check in the name of the taxpayer that filed the Form 1040X.

(2) The amount of the taxpayer's individual refund will be determined by recomputing the taxpayer's share of the joint liability and subtracting that amount from the taxpayer's contribution toward the joint liability. The amount of the overpayment refunded to the taxpayer will be limited to the amount of the joint overpayment.

In the present case, A's and B's joint tax liability as originally reported was $6,668. A's and B's joint liability as reported on the Form 1040X, filed by A is $3,484. The total joint refund is $3,184 ($6,668 — $3,484). B's recomputed separate tax liability is $5,350 and A's recomputed separate liability is zero.

A's recomputed individual liability is

$$\frac{0}{0 + $5{,}350} \times $3{,}484 = 0$$

B's recomputed individual liability is

$$\frac{$5{,}350}{0 + $5{,}350} \times $3{,}484 = $3{,}484$$

A's individual refund is $1,640 ($1,640 — 0).

B's individual refund would be $1,544 ($5,028 — $3,484).

The total of A's and B's individual refunds equals the amount of the joint refund. The Service will issue A an individual refund of $1,640.00 upon the filing of a Form 1040X with only A's signature. Upon the filing of a Form 1040X by B, the Service will issue an individual refund to B of $1,544.

Part IV. Items of General Interest

Form 1041-A, U.S. Information Return—Trust Accumulation of Charitable Amounts, Revised

Announcement 80-1

Form 1041-A, U.S. Information Return—Trust Accumulation of Charitable Amounts, has been revised as of October 1979. This latest revision contains a number of changes (terminology, etc.) similar to those made to the 1979 Form 1041, U.S. Fiduciary Income Tax Return. For example, line 5 was changed from gross to net rent and royalty income. Also, the sequence of lines 14 and 15 was reversed to follow the sequence on Form 1041.

The revised Form 1041-A will be available in most Service offices in January 1980. It should be filed for tax years ending on or after December 31, 1979. The prior version, dated October 1978, should not be used.

New Form 6251, Alternative Minimum Tax Computation

A new Form 6251, Alternative Minimum Tax Computation, has been developed for use by individuals, estates, and trusts to figure their alternative minimum tax. The alternative minimum tax was enacted by the Tax Reform Act of 1978, Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1.

Individuals may be liable for the Alternative Minimum Tax if the total of (a) their entry on Form 1040, line 34, and (b) tax preference items for excluded capital gains and adjusted itemized deductions, is more than $23,300 ($12,700 if married filing separately). An estate or trust may be liable if its taxable income plus its tax preference items is more than $10,000.

Taxpayers with other tax preference items may find that they are liable for both the alternative minimum tax and the regular minimum tax.

The form is now available at Internal Revenue Service offices.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants and Enrolled Agents from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

Armed Forces readjustment payment; retroactive disability determination. A taxpayer received a lump-sum readjustment payment under 10 U.S.C. section 687(a). Later, the Veterans' Administration awarded the taxpayer retroactive disability compensation, which will be withheld until the Veterans' Administration has recouped 75 percent of the readjustment payment. The taxpayer may not exclude any portion of the readjustment payment from gross income under section 104(a)(4) of the Code and may not deduct any portion of the amount recouped by the Veterans' Administration as a loss under section 165. Rev. Rul. 78-161 distinguished.

Rev. Rul. 80-10, page 6.
Industrial development bonds; use of proceeds. A political subdivision proposes to issue $750,000 of industrial development bonds to finance the $500,000 rehabilitation of an individual's substandard rental units and the removal of an existing $250,000 lien against the property. Substantially all of the proceeds will not be used to provide an exempt facility, the exception of section 103(b)(4)(A) of the Code will not apply, and the bond interest will not be excludable under section 103(a)(1).

Industrial development bonds; gas distribution system; additions, improvements, and replacements. Certain specified additions, improvements, and replacements relating to an existing gas distribution system qualify as facilities for the local furnishing of gas within the meaning of section 103(b)(4)(E) of the Code, and the interest on industrial development bonds issued to finance these items is excludable from gross income.

Industrial development bonds; exempt small issue; capital expenditures. A proposed exempt small issue of industrial development bonds will be used to finance an interstate motor vehicle transportation company's maintenance and service center, at which it will overhaul its tractors and trailers that are used in numerous states. None of the tractors or trailers are assigned to a particular terminal or service center, and trailers are interchanged with other companies. The overhauling expenditures will not be considered capital expenditures within the meaning of section 103(b)(6)(D) of the Code.

Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue Rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the entire state of facts involved. In those that are based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and confidential information are deleted to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on Subpart A, Tax Conventions and related Treasury Decisions and Revenue Rulings; Subpart B, Legislation and related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical Indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Price: $1.00 (single copy). Subscription price: $50.00 a year; $12.50 additional for foreign mailing.

Italy; foreign corporation's domestic trust; suit to recover U.S. royalties. An Italian corporation set up a domestic trust to commence and conduct a civil suit against a domestic corporation to recover patent royalties payable by the domestic corporation. The trustee received and remitted to the Italian corporation a sum of money in settlement of the claim. The trust is not a permanent establishment under Article II(1)(c) of the United States-Italy Income Tax Convention, and the payment to the trust is treated as royalties within the meaning of Article VIII.

Section 61.—Gross Income Defined

26 CFR 1.61-2: Compensation for services, including fees, commissions, and similar items.
(Also Sections 104, 165; 1.104-1, 1.165-1.)

Armed Forces readjustment payment; retroactive disability determination. A taxpayer received a lump-sum readjustment payment under 10 U.S.C. section 687(a). Later, the Veterans' Administration awarded the taxpayer retroactive disability compensation, which will be withheld until the Veterans' Administration has recouped 75 percent of the readjustment payment. The taxpayer may not exclude any portion of the readjustment payment from gross income under section 104(a)(4) of the Code and may not deduct any portion of the amount recouped by the Veterans' Administration as a loss under section 165. Rev. Rul. 78-161 distinguished.

Rev. Rul. 80-9

ISSUES

1. May a taxpayer by reason of a retroactive disability compensation determination by the Veterans' Administration, exclude from gross income in 1976, under section 104(a)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code, any part of a lump-sum readjustment payment?

2. Are any deductions allowable under section 165 of the Code in computing the taxpayer's income tax liability for the taxable years in which the Veterans' Administration deducts amounts from the disability compensation?

FACTS

A taxpayer who served as a reserve officer on active duty with the United States Army for eight years was involuntarily released on January 2, 1976, and received a lump-sum readjustment payment based on years of service. On January 3, 1976, the taxpayer filed a claim with the Veterans' Administration for disability compensation. On December 12, 1976, the taxpayer was awarded compensation based on 20 percent disability retroactive to January 3, 1976. However, pursuant to law and an agreement with the Veterans' Administration, the taxpayer will not receive the disability payments until the Veterans' Administration has recouped 75 percent of the readjustment payment.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 687(a) of title 10 U.S.C. provides for a lump-sum readjustment payment based on years of service where a reserve member is involuntarily released from active service provided such member has completed at least five years continuous active duty prior to release.

Section 687(b)(6) of title 10 U.S.C. provides that section 687(a) does not apply to a member who, upon release from active duty, is immediately eligible for disability compensation under a law administered by the Veterans' Administration and who elects to receive that compensation. However, a member covered by section 687(b)(6) may receive a readjustment payment under this section and disability compensation if an amount equal to 75 percent of the readjustment payment is deducted from the disability compensation. In addition, a member who elects to receive a readjustment payment under this section is not prevented from becoming entitled to disability compensation after making that election.

Section 3010(a) of title 38 U.S.C. provides, in part, that payments due or to become due under any law administered by the Veterans' Administration shall be exempt from taxation.

With respect to 10 U.S.C. section 687(b)(6), in S. Rep. No. 1096, 87th Cong., 1st Sess. 4 (1961), the Senate Finance Committee states, in part:

> Under existing law a reserve is required to choose between readjustment pay and disability compensation from the Veterans' Administration. This election has been held to be irrevocable so that a person who has received readjustment pay cannot receive compensation from the Veterans' Administration to which he may subsequently become entitled. Since at the time of their release from active duty some persons have latent disabilities without realizing that these disabilities will later be found to be service connected, this irrevocable election has created hardships. The proposed solution is to permit receipt of the VA compensation after deduction of three-fourths of the readjustment pay previously received. The fractional recovery is proposed in order to take into account the tax paid on the original payment and to avoid recoupment of an amount in excess of the net received as readjustment pay. Section 3 of this bill prevents retroactive payments of compensation from the Veterans' Administration but permits prospective receipt of this compensation subject to the deduction of three-fourths of the readjustment pay previously received.

Section 61(a) of the Code provides that unless otherwise excluded by law, gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including compensation for services.

Rev. Rul. 67-350, 1967-2 C.B. 58, holds that the readjustment pay received by a member of the armed forces who is involuntarily released from active duty is includible in gross income in the taxable year received.

Section 104(a)(4) of the Code and the regulations thereunder provide, with certain exceptions not pertinent to this case, that gross income does not include amounts received as a pension, annuity, or similar allowance for personal injuries or sickness resulting from active service in the armed forces of any country.

Section 104(b)(2)(B) of the Code provides, for tax years beginning after December 31, 1975, that section 104(a)(4) shall continue to apply to an individual who, on September 24, 1975, was a member of any organization referred to in section 104(a)(4) or under a binding commitment to become such a member.

Section 104(b)(4) of the Code, effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1975, provides that in the case of any individual described in section 104(b)(2), the amount excludable under section 104(a)(4) for any period with respect to any individual shall not be less than the maximum amount which such individual, on application therefor, would be entitled to receive as disability compensation from the Veterans' Administration.

Section 165(a) of the Code allows a deduction for any loss sustained during the taxable year which is not compensated for by insurance or otherwise.

With respect to individuals, section 165(c) of the Code limits the deduction under section 165(a) to losses incurred in a trade or business, losses incurred in transactions entered into for profit, and casualty losses.

The United States Tax Court has consistently held that a taxpayer may not take a loss with respect to an income item, as distinguished from a capital item, unless the income has been actually received and previously reported on a tax return. See e.g. Alsop v. Commissioner, 34 T.C. 606 (1960), aff'd, 290 F.2d 726 (2d Cir. 1961); and O'Meara v. Commissioner, 8 T.C. 622 (1947).

Rev. Rul. 78-161, 1978-1 C.B. 31, announced that the Internal Revenue Service will follow the decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit in Strickland v. Commissioner, 540 F.2d 1196 (4th Cir. 1976), as precedent in the disposition of similar cases involving section 104(a)(4) of the Code.

In Strickland, the court held that the Veterans' Administration's retroactive determination that the taxpayer was eligible for disability benefits was controlling. Thus, the taxpayer was entitled to exclude from gross income, under section 104(a)(4) of the Code, part of the payments previously received as retirement pay based on the rank and length of service.

This case is distinguishable from Strickland because the readjustment pay was not intended by the military and the taxpayer to be one of a series of periodic payments. Section 104(a)(4) of the Code does not exclude amounts if they are not received as a pension, annuity, or similar allowance; and an amount is not received for the purposes of section 104(a)(4), as a pension, annuity, or similar allowance if it was not intended by its payor to be one of a series of periodic payments.

This case is also distinguishable from Strickland because with respect to readjustment pay, the legislative history of 10 U.S.C. section 687(b)(6) indicates that Congress intended that a retroactive award of Veterans' Administration disability compensation would not allow a taxpayer to obtain a double tax benefit by excluding from gross income any readjustment pay received from the military. See S. Rep. No. 1096. There is no such language in the case of retirement pay.

Finally, section 104(b)(4) of the Code does not apply to this case because the reference in that section to amounts that are excludable for any period does not include an amount that is not intended by the payor and recipient to be one of a series of periodic payments.

The taxpayer is considered as never having received the withheld disability compensation. This position is consistent with Rev. Rul. 67-350, 1967-2 C.B. 58, which deals with a reduction in military retirement pay to offset a previously received lump-sum readjustment payment, under a law similar to 10 U.S.C. 687(b)(6). It was there held that there was no constructive receipt of the withheld retirement pay. Because the disability compensation is not received by the taxpayer, the taxpayer cannot take a loss deduction as a result of the withholding of any disability compensation.

Furthermore, even if the withheld disability compensation were regarded as the taxpayer's repayment pro tanto of the severance pay previously received and subjected to tax, a loss may nevertheless not be allowed.

S. Rep. No. 1096 indicates that Congress intended that taxpayers would not be able to take any deductions as a result of the recoupment of readjustment pay. Congress limited the recoupment to 75 percent of the readjustment pay so as to avoid recoupment of an amount in excess of the net amount after tax received by a taxpayer, assuming an average tax bracket of 25 percent. Such a limitation would not have been necessary if the recoupment were to give rise to a loss deduction.

The taxpayer may not exclude from gross income under section 104(a)(4) of the Code, as a result of the Veterans' Administration award, any portion of the readjustment pay that was received from the military.

ISSUE 2

Because the taxpayer has suffered no deductible loss as a result of the Veterans' Administration recoupment provision, the taxpayer is not allowed any deduction under section 165 of the Code.

Industrial development bonds; use of proceeds. A political subdivision proposes to issue $750,000 of industrial development bonds to finance the $500,000 rehabilitation of an individual's substandard rental units and the removal of an existing $250,000 lien against the property. Substantially all of the proceeds will not be used to provide an exempt facility, the exception of section 103(b)(4)(A) of the Code will not apply, and the bond interest will not be excludable under section 103(a)(1).

Rev. Rul. 80-10

ISSUE

Will section 103(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code exclude from the gross incomes of the bondholders the interest on industrial development bonds to be issued to finance the rehabilitation of rental property under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

A, an individual taxpayer, owns 50 substandard rental units situated on land within city M. There is an outstanding lien of $250,000 against the property. A desires to rehabilitate the rental units at an estimated cost of $10,000 per unit and rent the units to low-income families. A requested M to issue bonds to finance the cost of rehabilitation. M agreed to provide financing but will require that the existing lien be removed so that M will hold the first lien.

M proposes to issue $750,000 of industrial development bonds described in section 103(b)(2) of the Code and to loan the bond proceeds to A for removal of the existing lien and rehabilitation of the rental units. The security for the bonds will be the rehabilitated property and the loan payments to be made by A. M proposes to treat the bonds as issued to provide exempt facilities described in section 103(b)(4)(A) (residential real property for family units). The bonds are not arbitrage bonds as defined in section 103(c)2). Because certain prior exempt small issues issued in 1975 are outstanding, M did not elect to issue an exempt small issue under section 103(b)(6).

On May 1, 1979, M took "some other similar official action," within the meaning of section 1.103-8(a)(5) of the Income Tax Regulations, toward the issuance of the bonds. M proposes to issue the bonds on July 2, 1979, and rehabilitation will commence on August 1, 1979.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 103(a)(1) of the Code provides that gross income does not include interest on obligations of a political subdivision of a state.

Section 103(b)(1) of the Code provides that, with certain exceptions, the interest on "industrial development bonds" is not excludable from gross income.

Section 103(b)(4)(A) of the Code provides that section 103(b)(1) shall not apply to industrial development bonds if substantially all of the bond proceeds are to be used to provide residential real property for family units.

The "substantially all" test in section 103(b)(4) of the Code will be satisfied if 90 percent or more of the proceeds of an issue of governmental obligations are used to provide an exempt facility. Section 1.103-8(a)(1)(i) of the regulations.

In Situation 2 of Rev. Rul. 77-317, 1977-2 C.B. 32, a political subdivision proposes to issue $4,800,000 of industrial development bonds, $4,000,000 of which will be used to acquire facilities to be leased to a nonexempt lessee, unrelated to the previous owner, and $800,000 of which will be used to retire the lessee's existing indebtedness. The political subdivision proposes to elect to treat the bonds as an exempt small issue under section 103(b)(6)(D) of the Code. The Revenue Ruling concludes that because $800,000 of the bond proceeds will be used to provide the lessee with working capital by retirement of the lessee's debt, substantially all (90 percent or more) of the bond proceeds will not be used to acquire land and property subject to depreciation. Therefore, the bonds will not qualify as an exempt small issue under section 103(b)(6)(D) and the interest on the bonds will not be excludable from the gross incomes of the bondholders under section 103(a)(1).

In this case, 33⅓ percent ($250,000/$750,000) of the bond proceeds will be used to remove A's outstanding lien against the rental units. This amount of the bond proceeds will be used to refinance A's debt and not to provide an exempt facility within the meaning of section 103(b)(4)(A) of the Code. Therefore, because substantially all (90 percent or more) of the bond proceeds will not be used to provide an exempt facility, the bonds will not qualify for the exception provisions of section 103(b)(4)(A).

HOLDING

The interest on M's bonds will not be excludable from the gross incomes of the bondholders under the provisions of section 103(a)(1) of the Code.

26 CFR 1.103-8: Interest on bonds to finance certain exempt facilities.

Industrial development bonds: gas distribution system; additions, improvements, and replacements. Certain specified additions, improvements, and replacements relating to an existing gas distribution system qualify as facilities for the local furnishing of gas within the meaning of section 103(b)(4)(E) of the Code, and the interest on industrial development bonds issued to finance these items is excludable from gross income.

Rev. Rul. 80-11

ISSUE

Are certain specified additions, improvements, and replacements of portions of an existing gas distribution system facilities for the local furnishing of gas within the meaning of section 103(b)(4)(E) of the Internal Revenue Code so that interest on industrial development bonds that finance these items is excludable from gross income?

FACTS

The Development Authority of county X (the Authority), a political subdivision of state Y, is authorized under state law to issue revenue bonds for the purpose of promoting industrial development in the county.

The Authority issued industrial development bonds for the purpose of acquiring and constructing property to be used by the local public utility in its business of furnishing gas to its customers that are located solely within two contiguous counties. All property acquired or constructed will be of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation provided in section 167 of the Code. A financing agreement between the county and the local public utility provides for aggregate basic payments sufficient to pay the principal and interest on the bonds. In addition, the taxpayer has complied with the timing limitations of section 1.103-8(a)(5)(iii) of the Income Tax Regulations. Construction will be done under the supervision of the public utility.

The bond proceeds will be expended for the following items, all of which are capital expenditures:

(1) Improvement and expansion of the distribution system due to demands for new service.

(2) Relocation of existing main and service pipelines where the old piping systems have to be removed or abandoned due to conflict with local zoning or building codes.

(3) Installation of measuring, regulating, and pressure control equipment. Included herein is electronic telemetry equipment to allow remote control of the regulators in the distribution system, as well as gas meters and regulators for customer service.

(4) Installation of cathodic protection for corrosion control as required by the office of pipeline safety. This includes a new rectifier system and newly installed anodes as protective devices on both a new and previously installed pipe.

(5) Improvements to the propane-air peak shaving plant. This includes additional protective structures, as required by local governmental agencies, as well as additional electronic and telemetry equipment to facilitate remote control of the plant.

(6) Miscellaneous line stopping equipment and tools purchased for use in the expansion and improvement of the system.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 103(a)(1) of the Code provides that gross income does not include the interest on the obligations of a state, or any of its political subdivisions.

Section 103(b)(1) of the Code provides that industrial development bonds shall not be treated as an obligation described in section 103(a)(1) unless substantially all of the proceeds are used to provide the facilities exempt by section 103(b)(4).

Section 103(b)(4)(E) of the Code designates one of the exempt categories as those used for the local furnishing of gas.

Section 1.103-8(f)(2)(iii) of the regulations defines "facilities for the local furnishing of electric energy or gas" as property that:

> (a) Is either property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation provided in section 167 or land,
> (b) Is used to produce, collect, generate, transmit, store, distribute, or convey electric energy or gas,
> (c) Is used in the trade or business of furnishing electric energy or gas, and
> (d) Is a part of a system providing service to the general populace of one or more communities or municipalities, but in no event more than two contiguous counties. . . .

Section 1.103-8(a)(3) of the regulations provides that an exempt facility includes land, buildings, and other property functionally related and subordinate to the facility.

In the instant case, the items of property financed with bond proceeds will become part of the existing system used to produce, collect, generate, transmit, store, distribute, or convey gas. Each item of property qualifies under section 1.103-8(f)(2)(iii) of the regulations as a facility for the local furnishing of gas or as property that is functionally related and subordinate to such a facility within the meaning of section 1.103-8(a)(3).

HOLDING

The specified additions, improvements, and replacements of portions of the existing gas distribution system described above are facilities for the local furnishing of gas within the meaning of section 103(b)(4)(E) of the Code. The interest on industrial development bonds that finance these items is excludable from gross income under the provisions of section 103.

26 CFR 1.103-10: Exemption for certain small issues of industrial development bonds.
(Also Section 61; 1.61-7, 1.103-1.)

Industrial development bonds; exempt small issue; capital expenditures. A proposed exempt small issue of industrial development bonds will be used to finance an interstate motor vehicle transportation company's maintenance and service center, at which it will overhaul its tractors and trailers that are used in numerous states. None of the tractors or trailers are assigned to a particular terminal or service center, and trailers are interchanged with other companies. The overhauling expenditures will not be considered capital expenditures within the meaning of section 103(b)(6)(D) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-12

ISSUE

Does section 103(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code exclude from the gross incomes of bondholders the interest on industrial development bonds to be issued to finance a major maintenance and service center for road tractors and trailers under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

Corporation X is engaged in the business of transportation of general commodities by motor vehicle in interstate commerce. X operates a large fleet of road tractors and trailers throughout numerous states. None of the tractors or trailers are assigned to any of the numerous terminals or service centers operated by X. Trailers belonging to X may be interchanged with trailers owned by others in the transportation business in accordance with industry practice.

X desires to acquire land and construct and operate a major maintenance and service center in city M. Approximately 60 percent of X's tractors and trailers will be routed periodically to the center for minor maintenance or major overhauling. The expenditures for the major overhauling of tractors and trailers will be chargeable to X's capital account.

M proposes to issue industrial development bonds to finance the construction of X's major maintenance and service center. Prior to the issuance of the bonds, M will elect to treat the issue as a $10,000,000 exempt small issue under section 103(b)(6)(D) of the Code. There will be no prior exempt small issues outstanding at the time the bonds will be issued and no capital expenditures will have been paid or incurred by M or X with respect to the proposed center or other facilities of X located in M during the 3-year period prior to the issuance of the bonds. The bonds will not be arbitrage bonds within the meaning of section 103(c).

On May 31, 1979, the governing body of M adopted a resolution to have bonds issued. M proposes to issue the bonds on July 31, 1979, and acquisition of land and construction of the center will begin on August 31, 1979.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 103(a)(1) of the Code provides that gross income does not include interest on obligations of a state or political subdivision thereof.

Section 103(b)(1) of the Code provides that, except as otherwise provided in section 103(b), any industrial development bond shall be treated as an obligation that is not described in section 103(a)(1).

Section 103(b)(6)(D) of the Code provides that, at the election of the issuer, section 103(b)(1) shall not apply to obligations issued in an aggregate face amount of $10,000,000 or less and substantially all of the proceeds of which are to be used for the acquisition or construction of land or property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation. For purposes of determining the aggregate face amount of such bond issue, there must be taken into account the face amount of the bonds to be issued, the outstanding face amount of any prior exempt small issues, and the aggregate amount of capital expenditures with respect to certain facilities.

Section 1.103-10(b)(2)(ii) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that an expenditure (regardless of how paid, whether in cash, notes, or stock in a taxable or nontaxable transaction) is a section 103(c)(6)(D) (redesignated as section 103(b)(6)(D)) capital expenditure if:

(a) The capital expenditure was financed other than out of the proceeds of issues taken into account.

(b) The capital expenditures were paid or incurred during the 6-year period that begins 3 years before the date of issuance of the issue and ends 3 years after such date.

(c) The principal user of the facility in connection with which the property resulting from the capital expenditures is used and the principal user of the facility financed by the proceeds of the issue in question is the same person or are two or more related persons.

(d) Both facilities referred to in (c) were located in the same incorporated municipality or in the same county (outside of the incorporated municipality in such county), and

(e) The capital expenditures were properly chargeable to the capital account of any person or state or local governmental unit (whether or not such person is the principal user of the facility or a related person).

In Rev. Rul. 77-281, 1977-2 C.B. 31, a city proposed to issue industrial development bonds to finance the acquisition of railroad rolling stock for use by a nonexempt corporation in its rail operation. The rolling stock would be used to provide rail service between two cities located in different states and may be interchanged with other railroads throughout the country. The revenue ruling sets forth two preconditions for qualifying as an exempt small issue under section 103(b)(6)(D) of the Code: (1) the location of facilities to be financed with an exempt small issue must be established within an incorporated municipality or within a county, and (2) the facility financed by the bonds must be located within the boundaries of the issuer (or within the boundaries of the political subdivision in which the issuer is located). A facility will be regarded as being located within the boundaries of the issuer if it has a substantial connection therein. The revenue ruling concludes that the proposed bonds will not qualify as an exempt small issue under section 103(b)(6)(D) because the rolling stock will not satisfy the two preconditions.

In this case, substantially all of the bond proceeds will be used to acquire land and construct property subject to the allowance for depreciation. Therefore, the bonds will qualify for the exception provisions of section 103(b)(6)(D) of the Code as an exempt small issue.

Contrast Example (11) of section 1.103-10(f) of the regulations in which the purchase of tractor-trailers and other automotive equipment that were based in the same city as the bond-financed facilities was considered to be a capital expenditure within the meaning of section 103(b)(6)(D) of the Code.

Because the tractors and trailers owned by X are constantly used throughout X's operating system and the trailers are interchanged with other transportation companies, the location of X's tractors and trailers cannot be established in M or in any other political subdivision. Further, the tractors and trailers have no substantial connection within M. See Rev. Rul. 77-281. Therefore, the expenditures made at X's major maintenance and service center with respect to overhauling tractors and trailers will not be considered capital expenditures, within the meaning of section 103(b)(6)(D) of the Code and section 1.103-10(b)(2)(ii) of the regulations, for purposes of determining if the aggregate face amount of the bonds will exceed the exempt small issue limitation of $10,000,000.

HOLDING

The interest on M's bonds will be excludable from the gross incomes of the bondholders under the provisions of section 103(a)(1) of the Code.

26 CFR 1.103-13: Arbitrage bonds.

Arbitrage bonds; yield restrictions; state funds and bond proceeds. A political subdivision of a state proposes to issue certain bonds to finance a feasibility study.

The state is expected to appropriate funds yearly, in an amount at least equal to the cost of the study for that year, that will be placed in an escrow fund. Both the bond proceeds and the escrow fund amounts will be invested in acquired obligations yielding a materially higher amount than the bonds. Such investment earnings may be used to finance the study. The issue by the subdivision will not comply with the arbitrage yield restrictions of section 103(c) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-13

ISSUE

Will an authority that is a political subdivision of a state fail to comply with the arbitrage yield restrictions of section 103(c) of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to an issue of its obligations in the circumstances described below?

FACTS

Authority A is a political subdivision of the state of M that was created by M to construct, acquire, finance and operate power facilities in M. Under the law of M, A may issue bonds to finance power projects, but such bonds are not permitted to be secured by the full faith and credit of M.

Since A is a newly created political subdivision of M, A has no revenues or assets. The first project that will be undertaken by A is a study that will determine the feasibility of constructing a hydroelectric power plant in M. A plans to finance the feasibility study through the issuance of $50,000,000 of its eight-year term bonds. Since A has no revenues with which it may pay interest on the bond issue, $23,000,000 of bond proceeds will be used to pay the annual interest due on the bonds. The remaining bond proceeds will be used to pay for the costs of the feasibility study.

In addition, the legislature of M will be requested, in each of its annual sessions, to appropriate funds in an amount at least equal to the cost of the feasibility study for that year. A will place the amounts it receives from the annual appropriations made by the legislature of M in an escrow fund. A anticipates that the initial state appropriation will be made concurrently with the issuance of the bonds. The bond indenture states that no funds appropriated by the legislature of M may be used to conduct the feasibility study. The amounts deposited in the escrow fund and that portion of the $50,000,000 of bond proceeds not used to pay for the cost of the feasibility study will be used to repay the bondholders if A defaults on its bond issue, or if as a result of the study, A determines that the hydroelectric power plant should not be built.

Both the original proceeds of the bonds and the amounts deposited in the escrow fund will be invested in acquired obligations, the yield on which will be materially higher, within the meaning of section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) of the Income Tax Regulations, than the yield on the bonds. The investment earnings from the bond proceeds and the escrow fund will be deposited in bond accounts and may be used to finance the cost of the feasibility study. However, the bond indenture provides that the original proceeds of the bonds may be used to pay for the feasibility study only so long as the sum of (1) the balance of original and investment bond proceeds and (2) the balance of the escrow fund and earnings thereon total not less than the principal amount of the bonds outstanding.

The bonds will not be industrial development bonds within the meaning of section 103(b)(2) of the Code.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 103(a)(1) of the Code provides that gross income does not include interest on the obligations of a state, a territory, or a possession of the United States, or any political subdivision of the foregoing, or of the District of Columbia.

Section 103(c)(1) of the Code provides that, with certain minor exceptions, the interest on any arbitrage bond will not be excludable from gross income.

Section 103(c)(2) of the Code provides that the term "arbitrage bond" means any obligation that is issued as part of an issue all or a major portion (more than 15 percent) of the proceeds of which are reasonably expected to be used directly or indirectly (A) to acquire securities or obligations that may be reasonably expected at the time of issuance of such issue, to produce a yield over the term of the issue that is materially higher than the yield on obligations of such issue, or (B) to replace funds that were used directly or indirectly to acquire securities or obligations described in section 103(c)(2)(A).

Section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) of the regulations defines the term "materially higher" in those situations in which it is reasonably expected that the original proceeds of an issue will exceed the amount necessary for the governmental purpose or purposes of the issue by more than 5 percent of such amount. Any portion of the issue issued solely for the purpose of investing such portion at a materially higher yield as less than a major portion is not issued for a governmental purpose. The yield produced by acquired obligations acquired with the proceeds of such issue (including any acquired obligations held during the temporary periods described in section 1.103-14(b), any amounts invested in the reserve or replacement fund as defined in section 1.103-14(d), and any investments of less than a major portion of such proceeds as described in section 1.103-13(b)(1)) is materially higher than the yield produced by an issue of governmental obligations if the yield produced by the acquired obligations is higher than $Y + [($5{,}000 \times Y) \div P]$ where "Y" stands for the yield on the issue and "P" stands for the amount of the original proceeds of the issue. Nothing in this subdivision implies that a deliberate over-issuance of less than 5 percent will not be treated as an artifice or device in section 1.103-13(j).

Section 1.103-13(j) of the regulations provides that if an artifice or device is employed in connection with the issuance of a governmental obligation, such obligation will be considered an arbitrage bond within the meaning of section 103(c)(2) of the Code. For purposes of this section, the term "artifice or device" means a transaction or a series of transactions that attempts to circumvent the provisions of section 103(c) of the Code or sections 1.103-13, -14, or -15 of the regulations—(1) enabling the issue to exploit the difference between tax-exempt and taxable interest rates to gain a material financial advantage and (2) increasing the burden on the market for tax-exempt obligations.

Section 1.103-13(j) of the regulations further provides that examples of increased burdens on the market for tax-exempt obligations include selling obligations that would not otherwise be sold, selling more obligations than would otherwise be necessary, and issuing obligations sooner or allowing them to remain outstanding longer than would otherwise be necessary.

Rev. Rul. 78-348, 1978-2 C.B. 95, discusses the application of the replacement theory of section 103(c)(2)(B) of the Code. The replacement theory is based on the principle that an issuer that borrows to invest in higher yielding securities and one that borrows against such securities already owned are in virtually the same position. The revenue ruling provides that a requisite nexus or sufficiently direct relationship must exist between the bonds and higher yielding securities in order to apply section 103(c)(2)(B). Such a nexus or relationship does exist where the securities are pledged as collateral for the bonds. Although a pledge of collateral need not be cast in a particular legal form, there must be a reasonable assurance that the collateral will be available if needed to pay debt service even if the issuer encounters financial difficulties.

Section 1.103-13(b)(1)(i)(B) of the regulations refers to example (1) in section 1.103-14(e)(7)(ii) to illustrate the application of the replacement theory of section 103(c)(2)(B) of the Code. In that example, a city issued $11,000,000 in bonds to refund a prior issue of $10,000,000 for which there was no reserve or replacement fund. However, the city accumulated a reserve fund of $800,000 for the refunding issue that was pledged as collateral for that issue. In addition the city could not withdraw amounts from the reserve fund during the term of the refunding issue except to pay debt service on the issue. Based on these facts, the regulation concludes that the bond proceeds replace the amounts held in the reserve fund and that the amounts held in the reserve fund are subject to the same arbitrage yield restrictions and generally have the same status as proceeds of the refunding issue. See also Rev. Rul. 78-348, for similar examples of the replacement theory under section 103(c)(2)(B).

M has provided A with an Escrow Fund that may be used only to pay the holders of A's bonds if A defaults on the bonds or if A concludes that the power plant should not be built. Therefore, under section 103(c)(2)(B) of the Code, A's bonds will be issued to replace the amounts in the escrow fund. The fact that the escrow fund will not be fully funded at the time the bonds are issued is not distinguishable from Rev. Rul. 78-348 in which the bond proceeds replaced investment securities already owned by the governmental units.

Under section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) of the regulations, the issuance of bonds solely to derive an arbitrage profit is not for a governmental purpose. See Rev. Rul. 79-108, 1979-1, C.B. 75, which concludes that a city issued bonds solely to derive an arbitrage profit and thus made an overissuance of bonds when it obtained from a securities dealer a 60-day loan of 300*x* dollars that was secured by city-owned U.S. Treasury Notes and invested the proceeds of the loan in a local government investing pool that paid interest at a yield higher than the rate of interest the city paid on its obligation to the securities dealer. Similarly, the issuance of bonds solely to replace funds that are used solely to derive an arbitrage profit is not for a governmental purpose.

In this case, the bond indenture restricts use of original proceeds for the feasibility study to the amount by which the balance of original and investment bond proceeds and the balance in the escrow fund and earnings thereon exceeds the principal amount of the bonds outstanding. During each of the years that the bonds are outstanding only that portion of the original bond proceeds that is matched by investment proceeds and funds appropriated by the legislature and deposited in the escrow fund and the earnings thereon may be used to finance the annual cost of the study. Thus, at no time after the bonds are issued will the sum of the amounts held in the bond accounts and escrow fund, be less than $50,000,000, the face amount of the bonds. In addition, the bondholders will look to the escrow fund and the bond funds and not A for payment of principal and interest on the bonds as is evidenced by the fact that A has no revenues or assets with which it may pay the bondholders in the event of default or a decision not to build the power plant. Therefore, although the form of the transaction is that the bond proceeds will be used to fund the feasibility study, the substance of the transaction is that the feasibility study will be funded only by the earnings on the original bond proceeds and amounts appropriated by the legislature of M and the earnings thereon, and none of the original bond proceeds will be spent for the study. Thus the transaction is the equivalent of M issuing the bonds and placing the proceeds in escrow and financing the feasibility study on a year to year basis with the amounts appropriated by the legislature and the earnings on both the appropriations and the original bond proceeds.

If M had actually issued bonds, and placed the bond proceeds in escrow and invested them for the purpose of obtaining arbitrage profits, the issuance would be considered to have no governmental purpose within the meaning of section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) of the regulations. See Rev. Rul. 79-108. The fact that the form of the transaction is that A is issuing the bonds does not change the substance of the transaction that the bonds are being issued for no governmental purpose.

Consequently, it is reasonably expected that the issuance by A of $50,000,000 of its bonds to replace the amounts deposited in the escrow fund will exceed the amount necessary for the governmental purpose of such issue by more than 5 percent of such amount within the meaning of section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) of the regulations. Further, A is investing the bond proceeds at a materially higher yield within the meaning of section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv). Thus, A has failed to comply with the arbitrage yield restrictions of section 103(c)(2)(A) of the Code.

Further, because the expected annual legislative appropriations of M will be sufficient to conduct the feasibility study, the bonds will not be issued for a governmental purpose, and issuance of the bonds is not necessary. Under section 1.103-13(j) of the regulations, the issuance of bonds that are not necessary creates a burden on the market for tax-exempt bonds. Because the bond proceeds will be invested at a materially higher yield, A will be able to exploit the difference between tax-exempt and taxable interest rates to gain a material financial advantage. Therefore, A is employing an artifice or device in connection with the issuance of the bonds.

Because the amounts deposited in the escrow fund will be replaced by the proceeds of A's bonds, the amounts invested in the escrow fund have the same status and are subject to the same yield restrictions as the bond proceeds. In this case, since the bond proceeds are subject to the yield restrictions of section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) of the regulations the amounts deposited in the escrow fund are subject to the same yield restrictions. Since amounts in the escrow fund will be invested at a yield materially higher than that of the bonds, A has failed to comply with the arbitrage yield restrictions of section 103(c)(2)(B).

HOLDING

The issue of A's obligations will not comply with the arbitrage yield restrictions of section 103(c)(2) of the Code, and thus the bonds will be arbitrage bonds within the meaning of section 103(c)(2). Accordingly, interest on the issue of A's obligations will not be excludable from gross income under section 103(a)(1). The result would be the same if M had made an appropriation for the entire cost of the feasibility study on the date of issue.

Section 104.—Compensation for Injuries or Sickness

26 CFR 1.104-1: Compensation for injuries or sickness.
(Also Section 61; 1.61-2.)

Disability benefits; firefighters. Duty disability payments paid under a municipal statute to disabled firefighters prior to their reaching normal retirement age are excludable from gross income under section 104(a)(1) of the Code. If the disabled firefighter dies prior to normal retirement age the benefits paid under the statute to the surviving spouse are also excludable for the surviving spouse's life.

Rev. Rul. 80-14

ISSUES

1. Are benefits paid to disabled firefighters, under the circumstances described below, excludable from gross income under section 104(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code?

2. Are benefits paid to a firefighter's surviving spouse, under the circumstances described below, excludable from gross income under section 104(a)(1) of the Code?

FACTS

Under statutes adopted by City M, any firefighter in active service who becomes permanently and totally incapacitated for duty as the natural and proximate result of an injury occurring in the actual performance of duty will, upon filing a request for retirement, be entitled to a duty disability retirement allowance provided the medical council after a medical examination of the firefighter certifies that the firefighter is mentally or physically incapacitated for further duty as a result of the injury, the incapacity is likely to be permanent, and the firefighter should be retired.

The statutes provide that any firefighter eligible for duty disability retirement will have the right to receive a benefit during the period of such disability of an amount equal to 75 percent of the current actual salary for the position the firefighter held at the time of the injury. If the firefighter dies while receiving the duty disability allowance, the firefighter's spouse will receive 70 percent of the amount of the allowance the firefighter received at the time of death.

Disabled firefighters continue to receive a duty disability allowance during their period of eligibility until they reace age 62, at which time they begin to receive a normal retirement pension based on years of service with service credit given for time spent on duty disability.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61(a) of the Code provides that gross income means all income from whatever source derived, unless otherwise excluded by law, including compensation for services.

Section 104(a)(1) of the Code provides, with certain exceptions not relevant to this case, that gross income does not include amounts received under workmen's compensation acts as compensation for personal injuries or sickness.

Section 1.104-1(b) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that section 104(a)(1) of the Code excludes from gross income amounts received by an employee under a workmen's compensation act, or a statute in the nature of a workmen's compensation act which provides compensation to employees for personal injuries or sickness incurred in the course of employment. Section 104(a)(1) also applies to compensation that is paid under a workmen's compensation act to the survivor or survivors of a deceased employee. However, section 104(a)(1) does not apply to a retirement pension or annuity to the extent that it is determined by reference to the employee's age or length of service, or the employee's prior contributions, even though the employee's retirement is occasioned by an occupational injury or sickness.

The disability benefits in this case are authorized by a statute that provides benefits to a class restricted to employees with service-incurred disabilities. These benefits are thus payments for those disabilities. Therefore, the statute qualifies as a statute in the nature of a workmen's compensation act. Compare Rev. Rul. 72-291, 1972-1 C.B. 36; Rev. Rul. 72-44, 1972-1 C.B. 31.

Disability benefits received by a disabled firefighter prior to conversion to normal retirement benefits therefore qualify for exclusion under section 104(a)(1). Benefits received after conversion, however, do not qualify for exclusion from gross income because they are determined with reference to years of service and age.

If a disabled firefighter dies while receiving duty disability benefits, the statutes of M authorize payment of a percentage of those benefits to the surviving spouse. The spouse's payments are merely a continuation of the excludable disability benefits received by the decedent and are part of the benefit package granted to an employee as compensation for the employee's occupational disability.

Duty disability benefits paid by M to disabled firefighters prior to the time of their conversion to normal retirement are excludable from gross income under section 104(a)(1) of the Code. Benefits paid to disabled firefighters after their conversion to normal retirement are not excludable under section 104(a)(1).

Issue 2

If a disabled firefighter dies prior to the firefighter's conversion to normal retirement the benefits paid to the surviving spouse during that spouse's lifetime are excludable from gross income under section 104(a)(1) of the Code.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Treatment of losses from certain guarantee agreements

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to the treatment of losses resulting from payments made in discharge of certain guarantee agreements. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. Vol. 1) 1]. These regulations would provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with the changes.

DATES: The new regulations are effective for losses incurred on guarantee agreements made after December 31, 1975, in taxable years beginning after that date.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On September 15, 1978, proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 166 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 were published in the Federal Register (43 F.R. 41237). These amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 605 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1575) (hereinafter referred to as "the Act") and are issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805). No public hearing was requested or held. After consideration of all comments received regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

DESCRIPTION OF CHANGES

Certain technical changes have been made to the proposed amendments in response to public comments. Paragraphs (a) and (b) of § 1.166-9 are amended to clarify several points. This section applies to taxpayers who enter into an agreement in the course of their trade or business to act as a guarantor, endorser, or indemnitor, or to act in a manner essentially equivalent to a guarantor, endorser, or indemnitor or other secondary obligor. Both the principal and interest amounts of a debt on which the taxpayer is a guarantor, endorser, or indemnitor are subject to this section. The interest on the debt may not be deducted under section 163 of the Code.

Paragraph (c) is amended to make clear that the rules of paragraph (c) relating to obligations issued by corporations apply to payments whenever made, and not just to payments resulting in losses incurred on guarantee agreements made after December 31, 1975. Paragraph (d)(3) is amended to make clear that an agreement is considered as entered into before the obligation became worthless (or partially worthless) if, at the time the agreement was entered into, there was a reasonable expectation on the part of the taxpayer that the taxpayer would not be called upon to pay the debt (subject to such agreement) without full reimbursement. A new paragraph (e)(4) is added to make clear that the regulations under section 166 apply to all taxpayers, and not just to taxpayers who are individuals.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these final regulations is Douglas W. Charnas of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the final regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the following amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are hereby adopted:

Paragraph 1. Section 1.166 and the historical note are deleted.

Par. 2. Section 1.166-5 is amended by revising paragraph (c) to read as follows:

§ 1.166-5 Nonbusiness debts.

(c) Guaranty of obligations. For provisions treating a loss sustained by a guarantor of obligations as a loss resulting from the worthlessness of a debt, see §§ 1.166-8 and 1.166-9.

Par. 3. Section 1.166-8 is amended by revising the caption and adding a new paragraph (d) at the end of the section. As revised, the section reads as follows:

§ 1.166-8 Losses of guarantors, endorsers, and indemnitors incurred on agreements made before January 1, 1976.

* * * * *

(d) Effective date. This section applies only to losses, regardless of the taxable year in which incurred, on agreements made before January 1, 1976.

Par. 4. The following new section is added immediately after § 1.166-8:

§ 1.166-9 Losses of guarantors, endorsers, and indemnitors incurred, on agreements made after December 31, 1975, in taxable years beginning after such date.

(a) Payment treated as worthless business debt. This paragraph applies to taxpayers who, after December 31, 1975, enter into an agreement in the course of their trade or business to act as (or in a manner essentially equivalent to) a guarantor, endorser, or indemnitor of (or other secondary obligor upon) a debt obligation. Subject to the provisions of paragraphs (c), (d), and (e) of this section, a payment of principal or interest made during a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1975, by the taxpayer in discharge of part or all of the taxpayer's obligation as a guarantor, endorser, or indemnitor is treated as a business debt becoming worthless in the taxable year in which the payment is made or in the taxable year described in paragraph (e)(2) of this section. Neither section 163 (relating to interest) nor section 165 (relating to losses) shall apply with respect to such a payment.

(b) Payment treated as worthless nonbusiness debt. This paragraph applies to taxpayers (other than corporations) who, after December 31, 1975, enter into a transaction for profit, but not in the course of their trade or business, to act as (or in a manner essentially equivalent to) a guarantor, endorser, or indemnitor of (or other secondary obligor upon) a debt obligation. Subject to the provisions of paragraphs (c), (d), and (e) of this section, a payment of principal or interest made during a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1975, by the taxpayer in discharge of part or all of the taxpayer's obligation as a guarantor, endorser, or indemnitor is treated as a worthless nonbusiness debt in the taxable year in which the payment is made or in the taxable year described in paragraph (e)(2) of this section. Neither section 163 nor section 165 shall apply with respect to such a payment.

(c) Obligations issued by corporations. No treatment as a worthless debt is allowed with respect to a payment made by the taxpayer in discharge of part or all of the taxpayer's obligation as a guarantor, endorser, or indemnitor of an obligation issued by a corporation if, on the basis of the facts and circumstances at the time the obligation was entered into, the payment constitutes a contribution to capital by a shareholder. The rule of this paragraph (c) applies to payments whenever made (see paragraph (f) of this section).

(d) Certain payments not treated as worthless debts. A payment in discharge of part or all of a taxpayer's agreement to act as guarantor, endorser, or indemnitor of an obligation is to be treated as a worthless debt only if—

(1) The agreement was entered into in the course of the taxpayer's trade or business or a transaction for profit;

(2) There was an enforceable legal duty upon the taxpayer to make the payment (except that legal action need not have been brought against the taxpayer); and

(3) The agreement was entered into before the obligation became worthless (or partially worthless in the case of an agreement entered into in the course of the taxpayer's trade or business). See §§ 1.166-2 and 1.166-3 for rules on worthless and partially worthless debts. For purposes of this paragraph (d)(3), an agreement is considered as entered into before the obligation became worthless (or partially worthless) if there was a reasonable expectation on the part of the taxpayer at the time the agreement was entered into that the taxpayer would not be called upon to pay the debt (subject to such agreement) without full reimbursement from the issuer of the obligation.

(e) Special rules—(1) Reasonable consideration required. Treatment as a worthless debt of a payment made by a taxpayer in discharge of part or all of the taxpayer's agreement to act as a guarantor, endorser, or indemnitor of an obligation is allowed only if the taxpayer demonstrates that reasonable consideration was received for entering into the agreement. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(1), reasonable consideration is not limited to direct consideration in the form of cash or property. Thus, where a taxpayer can demonstrate that the agreement was given without direct consideration in the form of cash or property but in accordance with normal business practice or for a good faith business purpose, worthless debt treatment is allowed with respect to a payment in discharge of part or all of the agreement if the conditions of this section are met. However, consideration received from a taxpayer's spouse or any individual listed in section 152 (a) must be direct consideration in the form of cash or property.

(2) Right of subrogation. With respect to a payment made by a taxpayer in discharge of part or all of the taxpayer's agreement to act as a guarantor, endorser, or indemnitor where the agreement provides for a right of subrogation or other similar right against the issuer, treatment as a worthless debt is not allowed until the taxable year in which the right of subrogation or other similar right becomes totally worthless (or partially worthless in the case of an agreement which arose in the course of the taxpayer's trade or business).

(3) Other applicable provisions. Unless inconsistent with this section, other internal revenue laws concerning worthless debts, such as section 111 relating to the recovery of bad debts, apply to any payment which, under the provisions of this section, is treated as giving rise to a worthless debt.

(4) Taxpayer defined. For purposes of this section, except as otherwise provided, the term "taxpayer" means any taxpayer and includes individuals, corporations, partnerships, trusts and estates.

(f) Effective date. This section applies to losses incurred, on agreements made after December 31, 1975, in taxable years beginning after such date. However, paragraph (c) of this section also applies to payments, regardless of the taxable year in which made, under agreements made before January 1, 1976.

26 CFR 1.671-1: Grantors and others treated as substantial owners; scope.

Whether a domestic trust set up to commence and conduct a civil suit is a "permanent establishment" under Article II(1) (c) of the United States-Italy Income Tax Convention (the Convention), 1956-2 C.B. 1096, and whether an amount received in a settlement agreement involving a contract suit to receiver patent royalties is treated as the payment of "royalties" within the meaning of Article VIII of the Convention. See Rev. Rul. 80-15, page 16.

Section 676.—Power to Revoke

26 CFR 1.676(a)-1: Power to revest title to portion of trust property in grantor; general rule.

Whether a domestic trust set up to commence and conduct a civil suit is a "permanent establishment" under Article II(1)(c) of the United States-Italy Income Tax Convention (the Convention), 1956-2 C.B. 1096, and whether an amount received in a settlement agreement involving a contract suit to recover patent royalties is treated as the payment of "royalties" within the meaning of Article VIII of the Convention. See Rev. Rul. 80-15, page 16.

Part II. Treaties and Tax Legislation

Subpart A.—Tax Conventions

United States-Italy Income Tax Convention

(Also Part I, Sections 671, 676; 1.671-1, 1.676(a)-1.)

Italy; foreign corporation's domestic trust; suit to recover U.S. royalties. An Italian corporation set up a domestic trust to commence and conduct a civil suit against a domestic corporation to recover patent royalties payable by the domestic corporation. The trust agreement limits the authority of the trustee, a U.S. citizen and resident, to commencing and maintaining the legal action, settling the claim, and receiving all sums of money due as a result of the claim. The trustee received and remitted to the Italian corporation a sum of money in settlement of the claim. The trust is not a permanent establishment under Article II(1)(c) of the United States-Italy Income Tax Convention, and the payment to the trust is treated as royalties within the meaning of Article VIII.

Rev. Rul. 80-15

ISSUES

(1) Whether a domestic trust set up to commence and conduct a civil suit is a "permanent establishment" under Article II(1)(c) of the United States-Italy Income Tax Convention (the Convention), 1956-2 C.B. 1096.

(2) Whether an amount received in a settlement agreement involving a contract suit to recover patent royalties is treated as the payment of "royalties" within the meaning of Article VIII of the Convention.

FACTS

A is a citizen and resident of the United States. X is an Italian corporation that has its principal place of business in Italy. Y is a domestic corporation engaged in manufacturing. In 1970 X and Y entered into a written agreement that described the procedure to be used for the payment by Y to X of patent royalties as they accrue.

At the request of X, A, acting as trustee, and X, acting as settlor, executed a trust agreement to institute a legal claim by X against Y for certain patent royalties. The trust agreement provides that the settlor may revoke, modify or amend the trust in whole or in part. The authority of A as trustee is limited to (1) commencing and maintaining a legal action against Y on behalf of X; (2) settling the claim of X against Y; and (3) receiving all sums of money due as a result of such claim.

Subsequent to the execution of the trust, A, as trustee, instituted a civil action against Y for recovery of the patent royalties that were subject to the trust. Later, X and Y entered into a settlement agreement and A, as trustee, received a check from Y for the sum of 12*x* dollars. A remitted the 12*x* dollars to X.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 676 of the Code provides that a grantor of a trust shall be treated as owner of any portion of a trust, where at any time the power to revest title in the trust to the grantor is exercisable by the grantor.

Section 671 of the Code provides that when the grantor of a trust is treated as the owner of the trust, items of taxable income of the trust are included in computing the taxable income of the grantor.

Article VIII of the Convention provides that royalties and other amounts received as consideration for the right to use copyrights, patents and other like property from sources within the United States by an Italian corporation not having a permanent establishment in the United States shall be exempt from taxation within the United States.

Article II(1)(g) of the Convention defines the term "Italian corporation" to mean a corporation created or organized in Italy or under Italian laws.

Article II(1)(c) of the Convention defines the term "permanent establishment" to mean a branch, office, factory, warehouse or other fixed place of business. The term "permanent establishment" does not include an agency unless the agent has and exercises a general authority to negotiate and conclude contracts on behalf of an enterprise.

In Rev. Rul. 64-206, 1964-2 C.B. 591, a citizen and a resident of Switzerland, who did not maintain a place of business in the United States or conduct any business through a "permanent establishment" situated in the United States, owned a United States patent. That citizen was awarded a judgment for damages and interest for the infringement of this patent within the United States. Rev. Rul. 64-206 holds that the damages awarded were amounts received as consideration for the right to use the patent, and thus were exempt as royalties from United States income tax under Article VIII of the United States-Swiss Confederation Income Tax Convention.

Under Article II(1)(c) of the Convention, an agency will not constitute a "permanent establishment" in the United States unless the agent has and exercises a general authority to negotiate and conclude contracts. In this revenue ruling, A, as trustee for X, does not have the general authority to negotiate or conclude contracts on behalf of X. Rather, A's authority is limited by the terms of the trust agreement.

Because X is treated as owner of the trust under section 676 of the Code, any income paid to the trust is taxable to X under section 671 unless otherwise excluded by law or treaty provision.

The amount paid to the trust under the settlement agreement between X and Y was in lieu of the amount X would have realized under the patent agreement between X and Y.

HOLDINGS

(1) The domestic trust established by an Italian corporation (X) for the limited purpose of conducting a breach of contract suit to recover patent royalties is not a "permanent establishment" within the United States under Article II(1)(c) of the Convention.

(2) The amount paid to the trust on X's behalf under the settlement agreement between X and Y is treated as the payment of royalties within the meaning of Article VIII of the Convention and therefore is exempt from United States income tax.

FISCAL DOMICILE

1. For purposes of this Convention, the term "resident of a Contracting State" means any person who, under the law of that State, is liable to taxation therein by reason of his domicile, residence, citizenship, place of management, place of incorporation, or any other criterion of a similar nature; provided, however, that:

(a) This term does not include any person who is liable to tax in that Contracting State in respect only of income from sources therein or capital situated in that State; and

(b) In the case of income derived or paid by a partnership, estate, or trust, this term applies only to the extent that the income derived by such partnership, estate, or trust is subject to tax as the income of a resident of the Contracting State, either in its hands or in the hands of its partners or beneficiaries.

2. Where by reason of the provisions of paragraph 1 an individual is a resident of both Contracting States, then the individual's tax status shall be determined as follows:

(a) The individual shall be deemed to be a resident of the Contracting State in which the individual has a permanent home available to him. If the individual has a permanent home available to him in both Contracting States or in neither Contracting State, the individual shall be deemed to be a resident of the Contracting State in which the individual's center of vital interests is located;

(b) If the Contracting State in which the individual's center of vital interests is located cannot be determined, the individual shall be deemed to be a resident of that Contracting State in which the individual has an habitual abode;

(c) If the individual has an habitual abode in both Contracting States or in neither of them, the individual shall be deemed to be a resident of the Contracting State of which the individual is a national; and

(d) If the individual is a national of both Contracting States or of neither of them, the competent authorities of the Contracting States shall settle the question by mutual agreement.

3. Where by reason of the provisions of paragraph 1 a company is a resident of both Contracting States, then if it is created or organized under the laws of a Contracting State or a political subdivision thereof, it shall be treated as a resident of that State.

4. Where by reason of the provisions of paragraph 1 a person other than an individual or a company is a resident of both Contracting States, the competent authorities of the Contracting States shall by mutual agreement endeavor to settle the question and to determine the mode of application of the Convention to such person.

5. For purposes of this Convention, an individual who is a national of a Contracting State shall also be deemed to be a resident of that State if (a) the individual is an employee of that State or an instrumentality thereof in the other Contracting State or in a third State; (b) the individual is engaged in the performance of governmental functions for the first-mentioned State; and (c) the individual is subjected in the first-mentioned State to the same obligations in respect of taxes on income as are residents of the first mentioned State. The spouse and minor children residing with the employee and subject to the requirements of (c) above shall also be deemed to be residents of the first-mentioned State.

PERMANENT ESTABLISHMENT

1. For the purposes of this Convention, the term "permanent establishment" means a fixed place of business or production through which the activities of an enterprise are wholly or partially carried on.

2. The term "permanent establishment" shall include especially:

(a) A place of management;

(b) A branch;

(c) An office;

(d) A factory;

(e) A workshop; and

(f) A mine, an oil or gas well, a quarry, or any other place of extraction of natural resources.

3. A building site or construction or installation project, or an installation or drilling rig or ship used for the exploration or development of natural resources, shall constitute a permanent establishment only if it lasts more than 24 months.

4. Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this Article, the term "permanent establishment" shall be deemed not to include:

(a) The use of facilities solely for the purpose of storage, display or delivery of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise;

(b) The maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise solely for the purpose of storage, display or delivery;

(c) The maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise solely for the purpose of processing by another enterprise;

(d) The maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for the purpose of purchasing goods or merchandise, or for collecting information, for the enterprise;

(e) The maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for the purpose of carrying on for the enterprise any other activity if it has a preparatory or auxiliary character; and

(f) The maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for any combination of the activities mentioned in subparagraphs a) to e) of this paragraph.

5. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2, where a person—other than an agent of an independent status to whom paragraph 6 applies—is acting on behalf of an enterprise and has, and habitually exercises in a Contracting State, an authority to conclude contracts in the name of such enterprise, that enterprise shall be deemed to have a permanent establishment in respect of any activities which that person undertakes for the enterprise, unless the activities of such person are limited to those mentioned in paragraph 4 which, if exercised at a fixed place of business, would not make this place of business a permanent establishment under the provisions of that paragraph.

6. An enterprise shall not be deemed to have a permanent establishment in a Contracting State merely because it carries on business in that State through a broker, general commission agent or any other agent of an independent status, provided that such persons are acting in the ordinary course of their business.

7. The fact that a company which is a resident of a Contracting State controls or is controlled by a company which is a resident of the other Contracting State, or which carries on business in that other State (whether through a permanent establishment or otherwise), shall not of itself constitute either company a permanent establishment of the other.

INCOME FROM IMMOVABLE PROPERTY (REAL PROPERTY)

1. Income derived by a resident of a Contracting State from immovable property (real property) situated in the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other State.

2. The term "immovable property" shall have the meaning which it has under the law of the Contracting State in which the property in question is situated. The term shall in any case include property accessory to immovable property, livestock and equipment used in agriculture and forestry, rights to which the provisions of general law respecting land property apply, usufruct of immovable property and rights to variable or fixed payments as consideration for the working of, or the right to work, mineral deposits, sources and other natural resources; ships, boats and aircraft shall not be regarded as immovable property.

3. The provisions of paragraph 1 shall apply to income derived from the direct use, letting, or use in any other form of immovable property.

4. The provisions of paragraphs 1 and 3 shall also apply to the income from immovable property of an enterprise and to income from immovable property used for the performance of independent personal services.

BUSINESS PROFITS

1. The business profits of an enterprise of a Contracting State shall be taxable only in that State unless the enterprise carries on business in the other Contracting State through a permanent establishment situated therein. If the enterprise carries on business as aforesaid, the business profits of the enterprise may be taxed in that other State but only so much of them as is attributable to that permanent establishment.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, where an enterprise of a Contracting State carries on business in the other Contracting State through a permanent establishment situated therein, there shall in each Contracting State be attributed to that permanent establishment the business profits which it might be expected to make if it were a distinct and independent enterprise engaged in the same or similar activities under the same or similar conditions.

3. In the determination of the business profits of a permanent establishment, there shall be allowed as deductions those expenses which are incurred for the purposes of the permanent establishment, including a reasonable allocation of executive and general administrative expenses, research and development expenses, interest, and other expenses incurred for the purposes of the enterprise as a whole (or the part thereof which includes the permanent establishment), whether incurred in the State in which the permanent establishment is situated or elsewhere.

4. No business profits shall be attributed to a permanent establishment by reason of:

(a) The mere purchase by that permanent establishment of goods or merchandise for the enterprise, or

(b) The mere delivery to the permanent establishment of goods or merchandise for its use.

5. Where business profits include items of income which are dealt with separately in other Articles of this Convention, then the provisions of those Articles shall not be affected by the provisions of this Article.

Article 8

SHIPPING AND AIR TRANSPORT

1. Profits of an enterprise of a Contracting State from the operation in international traffic of ships or aircraft shall be taxable only in that State.

2. For purposes of this Article, profits from the operation of ships or aircraft in international traffic include profits derived from the rental on a full or bareboat basis of ships or aircraft operated in international traffic if such rental profits are incidental to other profits described in paragraph 1.

3. Profits of an enterprise of a Contracting State from the use, maintenance or rental of containers (including trailers and related equipment for the transport of containers) used for the transport of goods or merchandise in international traffic shall be taxable only in that State.

4. The provisions of this Article shall also apply where the enterprise has an agency in the other State for the transportation of goods or persons, but only to the extent of activities directly connected with the business of shipping and aircraft transportation, including auxiliary activities connected therewith.

DIVIDENDS

1. Dividends paid by a company which is a resident of a Contracting State to a resident of the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other State.

2. However, such dividends may be taxed in the Contracting State of which the company paying the dividends is a resident, and according to the law of that State, but if the beneficial owner of the dividends is a resident of the other Contracting State, the tax so charged shall not exceed:

(a) Five percent of the gross amount of the dividends if the beneficial owner is a company which owns, directly or indirectly, at least 10 percent of the voting stock of the company paying the dividends;

(b) In all other cases, 15 percent of the gross amount of the dividends.

This paragraph shall not affect the taxation of the company in respect of the profits out of which the dividends are paid.

3. The term "dividends" as used in this Article means income from shares or other rights, not being debt-claims, participating in profits, as well as income from other corporate rights which is subjected to the same taxation treatment as income from shares by the taxation law of the State of which the company making the distribution is a resident.

4. The provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2 shall not apply if the recipient of the dividends, being a resident of a Contracting State, carries on business in the other Contracting State, of which the company paying the dividends is a resident, through a permanent establishment situated therein, or performs in that other State independent personal services from a fixed base situated therein, and the holding in respect of which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base. In such case, the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits) or Article 13 (Independent Personal Services), as the case may be, shall apply.

5. Where a company is a resident of a Contracting State, the other Contracting State may not impose any tax on the dividends paid by the company, except insofar as:

(a) Such dividends are paid to a resident of that other State,

(b) The holding in respect of which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or a fixed base situated in that other State, or

(c) Such dividends are paid out of profits attributable to a permanent establishment which such company had in that other State, provided that at least 50 percent of such company's gross income from all sources was attributable to a permanent establishment which such company had in that other State.

Where subparagraph (c) applies and subparagraphs (a) and (b) do not apply, any such tax shall be subject to the limitations of paragraph 2.

Article 10

INTEREST

1. Interest arising in a Contracting State and paid to a resident of the other Contracting State shall be taxable only in that other State.

2. The term "interest" as used in this Convention means income from debt-claims of every kind, whether or not secured by mortgage, and whether or not carrying a right to participate in the debtor's profits, and in particular, income from government securities and income from bonds or debentures, including premiums or prizes attaching to bonds or debentures.

3. The provisions of paragraph 1 shall not apply if the person deriving the interest, being a resident of a Contracting State, carries on business in the other Contracting State through a permanent establishment situated therein, or performs in that other State independent personal services from a fixed base situated therein, and the debt claim in respect of which the interest is paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base. In such a case, the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits) or Article 13 (Independent Personal Services), as the case may be, shall apply.

Royalties

1. Royalties arising in a Contracting State and paid to a resident of the other Contracting State shall be taxable only in that other State.

2. The term "royalties" as used in this Article means payments of any kind received as a consideration for the use of, or the right to use, any copyright of literary, artistic or scientific work, including cinematographic films or films or tapes used for radio or television broadcasting, any patent, trade mark, design or model, plan, secret formula or process, or other like right or property, or for information concerning industrial, commercial or scientific experience.

3. The provisions of paragraph 1 shall not apply if the person deriving the royalties, being a resident of a Contracting State, carries on business in the other Contracting State in which the royalties arise through a permanent establishment situated therein, or performs in that other State independent personal services from a fixed base situated therein, and the right or property in respect of which the royalties are paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base. In such a case the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits) or Article 13 (Independent Personal Services), as the case may be, shall apply.

Capital Gains

1. Gains derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the alienation of immovable property, as defined in paragraph 2 of Article 6 (Immovable Property), situated in the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other State.

2. Gains from the alienation of movable property forming part of the business property of a permanent establishment which an enterprise of a Contracting State has in the other Contracting State or of movable property pertaining to a fixed base available to a resident of a Contracting State in the other Contracting State for the purpose of performing independent personal services, including such gains from the alienation of such a permanent establishment (alone or together with the whole enterprise) or of such a fixed base, may be taxed in the other State. However, gains derived by an enterprise of a Contracting State from the alienation of ships, aircraft or containers operated by such enterprise in international traffic shall be taxable only in that State.

3. Gains from the alienation of any property other than those mentioned in paragraphs 1 and 2, shall be taxable only in the Contracting State of which the alienator is a resident.

Independent Personal Services

1. Income derived by an individual who is a resident of a Contracting State from the performance of personal services in an independent capacity shall be taxable only in that State unless such services are performed in the other Contracting State and—

(a) The individual is present in that other State for a period or periods aggregating more than 183 days in the taxable year concerned, or

(b) The individual has a fixed base regularly available to him in that other State for the purpose of performing his activities, but only so much of the income as is attributable to that fixed base.

2. The term "personal services" includes, especially, independent scientific, literary, artistic, educational or teaching activities as well as the independent activities of physicians, lawyers, engineers, architects, dentists, artistes, athletes and accountants.

Dependent Personal Services

1. Subject to the provisions of Article 15 (Pensions) and 16 (Government Service), salaries, wages and other similar remuneration derived by a resident of a Contracting State in respect of an employment shall be taxable only in that State unless the employment is exercised in the other Contracting State. If the employment is so exercised, such remuneration as is derived therefrom may be taxed in that other State.

2. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 1, remuneration derived by a resident of a Contracting State in respect of an employment exercised in the other Contracting State shall be taxable only in the first-mentioned State if:

(a) The recipient is present in the other State for a period or periods not exceeding in the aggregate 183 days in the taxable year concerned, and

(b) The remuneration is paid by, or on behalf of, an employer who is not a resident of the other State, and

(c) The remuneration is not borne by a permanent establishment or a fixed base which the employer has in the other State.

3. Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this Article, remuneration in respect of an employment as a member of the regular complement of a ship or aircraft operated by an enterprise of a Contracting State in international traffic may be taxed only in that Contracting State.

Pensions

Subject to the provisions of paragraph 2 of Article 16 (Government Services),

1. Pensions and other similar remuneration beneficially derived by a resident of a Contracting State in consideration of past employment shall be taxable only in that State, and

2. Social security payments and other public pensions paid by a Contracting State to an individual who is a resident of the other Contracting State or a citizen of the United States shall be taxable only in the first-mentioned Contracting State.

GOVERNMENT SERVICES

1(a) Remuneration other than a pension, paid by a Contracting State or a political subdivision or a local authority thereof to any individual in respect of services rendered to that State or subdivision or local authority thereof shall be taxable only in that State.

(b) However, such remuneration shall be taxable only in the other Contracting State if the services are rendered in that State and the recipient is a resident of that other Contracting State who:

(i) Is a national of that State; or

(ii) Did not become a resident of that State solely for the purpose of performing the services.

2(a) Any person paid by, or out of funds created by, a Contracting State or a political subdivision or a local authority thereof to any individual in respect of services rendered to that State or subdivision or local authority thereof shall be taxable only in that State.

(b) However, such pension shall be taxable only in the other Contracting State if the recipient is a national of and a resident of that State.

3. The provisions of Article 13 (Independent Personal Services), 14 (Dependent Personal Services), and 15 (Pensions), as the case may be, shall apply to remuneration and pensions in respect of services rendered in connection with any business carried on by a Contracting State or a political subdivision or a local authority thereof.

TEACHERS

1. Where a resident of one of the Contracting States is invited by the Government of the other Contracting State, a political subdivision or a local authority thereof, or by a university or other recognized educational institution in that other Contracting State to come to that other Contracting State for a period not expected to exceed 2 years for the purpose of teaching or engaging in research, or both, at a university or other recognized educational institution, and such resident comes to that other Contracting State primarily for such purpose, his income from personal services for teaching or research at such university or educational institution shall be exempt from tax by that other Contracting State for a period not exceeding 2 years from the date of his arrival in that other Contracting State.

2. This Article shall not apply to income from research if such research is undertaken not in the public interest but primarily for the private benefit of a specific person or persons.

STUDENTS AND TRAINEES

1. Payments which a student, apprentice or business trainee who is, or was immediately before visiting a Contracting State, a resident of the other Contracting State and who is present in the first-mentioned Contracting State for the purpose of his full-time education or training receives for the purposes of his maintenance, education or training shall not be taxed in that State provided that such payments are made to him from sources outside that State.

2. An individual to whom paragraph 1 applies may elect to be treated for tax purposes as a resident of the first-mentioned State. The election shall apply to all periods during the taxable year of the election and subsequent taxable years during which the individual qualifies under paragraph 1, and may not be revoked except with the consent of the competent authority of that State.

ALL OTHER INCOME

Items of income of a resident of a Contracting State, wherever arising, not dealt with in the foregoing Articles of this Convention shall be taxable only in that State.

RELIEF FROM DOUBLE TAXATION

1. In the case of the United States, double taxation shall be avoided as follows: In accordance with the provisions and subject to the limitations of the law of the United States (as it may be amended from time to time without changing the general principle hereof), the United States shall allow to a resident or citizen of the United States as a credit against the United States tax on income the appropriate amount of tax paid to the Hungarian People's Republic; and, in the case of a United States company owning at least 10 percent of the voting stock of a company which is a resident of the Hungarian People's Republic from which it receives dividends in any taxable year, the United States shall allow as a credit against the United States tax on income the appropriate amount of income tax paid to the Hungarian People's Republic by that company with respect to the profits out of which such dividends are paid. Such appropriate amount shall be based upon the amount of income tax paid to the Hungarian People's Republic, but the credit shall not exceed the limitations (for the purpose of limiting the credit to the United States tax on income from sources outside of the United States) provided by United States law for the taxable year. For purposes of applying the United States credit in relation to tax paid to the Hungarian People's Republic, the taxes referred to in paragraphs 2(b) and 3 of Article 2 (Taxes Covered) shall be considered to be income taxes.

2. In the case of the Hungarian People's Republic, double taxation shall be avoided as follows:

(a) Where a resident of the Hungarian People's Republic:

(i) Derives income which, in accordance with the provisions of this Convention other than paragraph 2 of Article 1 (Personal Scope), may be taxed in the United States, or

(ii) Derives income from sources within the United States which may be taxed only by reason of paragraph 2 of Article 1 (Personal Scope), the Hungarian People's Republic shall, subject to the provisions of subparagraphs (b) and (c), exempt such income from tax.

(b) Where a resident of the Hungarian People's Republic derives items of income which, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 2 of Article 9, may be taxed in the United States, the Hungarian People's Republic shall allow as a deduction from the tax on the income of that resident an amount equal to the tax paid in the United States. Such deduction shall not, however, exceed that part of the tax, as computed before the deduction is given, which is attributable to such items of income derived from the United States.

(c) Where in accordance with any provision of the Convention income derived by a resident of the Hungarian People's Republic is exempt from tax in the Hungarian People's Republic, the Hungarian People's Republic may nevertheless, in calculating the amount of tax on the remaining income of such resident, take into account the exempted income.

NON-DISCRIMINATION

1. The nationals of a Contracting State, whether or not they are residents of one of the Contracting States, shall not be subjected in the other State to any taxation or any requirement connected therewith, which is more burdensome than the taxation and connected requirements to which nationals of that other State in the same circumstances are or may be subjected. For purposes of the preceding sentence, nationals who are subject to tax by a Contracting State on worldwide income are not in the same circumstances as nationals who are not so subject.

2. The taxation on a permanent establishment which an enterprise of a Contracting State has in the other Contracting State shall not be less favorably levied in that other State than the taxation levied on enterprises of that other State carrying on the same activities. This Article shall not be construed as obliging a Contracting State to grant to residents of the other Contracting State any personal allowances, reliefs and reductions for taxation purposes on account of civil status or family responsibilities which it grants to its own residents.

3. Interest, royalties and other disbursements paid by an enterprise of a Contracting State to a resident of the other Contracting State shall, for the purpose of determining the taxable profits of such enterprise, be deductible under the same conditions as if they had been paid to a resident of the first-mentioned State. Similarly, any debts of an enterprise of a Contracting State to a resident of the other Contracting State shall, for the purpose of determining the taxable capital of such enterprise, be deductible under the same conditions as if they had been contracted to a resident of the first-mentioned State.

4. Enterprises of a Contracting State, the capital of which is wholly or partly owned or controlled, directly or indirectly by one or more residents of the other Contracting State, shall not be subjected in the first-mentioned Contracting State to any taxation or any requirement connected therewith which is more burdensome than the taxation and connected requirements to which other similar enterprises of the first-mentioned State are or may be subjected.

5. In this Article the term "taxation" means taxes of every kind and description imposed by a Contracting State or a political subdivision or local authority thereof.

MUTUAL AGREEMENT PROCEDURE

1. Where a resident or national of a Contracting State considers that the actions of one or both of the Contracting States result or will result for it in taxation not in accordance with this Convention, it may, notwithstanding the remedies provided by the national laws of those States, present its case to the competent authority of the Contracting State of which it is a resident or national.

2. The competent authority shall endeavor, if the objection appears to it to be justified and if it is not itself able to arrive at an appropriate solution, to resolve the case by mutual agreement with the competent authority of the other Contracting State with a view to the avoidance of taxation not in accordance with the Convention. Any agreement reached shall be implemented notwithstanding any time limits in the national laws of the Contracting States.

3. The competent authorities of the Contracting States shall endeavor to resolve by mutual agreement any difficulties or doubts arising as to the interpretation or application of the Convention. They may also consult together for the elimination of double taxation in cases not provided for in the Convention.

4. The competent authorities of the Contracting States may communicate with each other directly for the purpose of reaching an agreement in the sense of the preceding paragraphs.

5. The competent authorities of the Contracting States may prescribe regulations to carry out the purposes of this Convention.

EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION

1. The competent authorities of the Contracting States shall exchange such information as is necessary for the carrying out of this Convention or of the domestic laws of the Contracting States concerning taxes covered by this Convention insofar as the taxation thereunder is not contrary to this Convention. The exchange of information is not restricted by Article 1 (Personal Scope). Any information received by a Contracting State shall be treated as secret in the same manner as information obtained under the domestic laws of that State and shall be disclosed only to persons or authorities (including courts and administrative bodies) involved in the assessment or collection of, the enforcement or prosecution in respect of, or the determination of appeals in relation to, the taxes which are the subject of the Convention. Such persons or authorities shall use the information only for such purposes. These persons or authorities may disclose the information in public court proceedings or in judicial decisions.

2. In no case shall the provisions of paragraph 1 be construed so as to impose on one of the Contracting States the obligation:

(a) To carry out administrative measures at variance with the laws and administrative practice of that or of the other Contracting State;

(b) To supply particulars which are not obtainable under the laws or in the normal course of the administration of that or of the other Contracting State;

(c) To supply information which would disclose any trade, business, industrial, commercial or professional secret or trade process, or information, the disclosure of which would be contrary to public policy (order public).

3. If information is requested by a Contracting State in accordance with this Article, the other Contracting State shall obtain the information to which the request relates in the same manner and to the same extent as if the tax of the first-mentioned State were the tax of that other State and were being imposed by that other State. If specifically requested by the competent authority of a Contracting State, the competent authority of the other Contracting State shall provide information under this Article in the form of depositions of witnesses and copies of unedited original documents (including books, documents, statements, records, accounts, or writings), to the same extent such depositions and documents can be obtained under the laws and administrative practices of such other State with respect to its own taxes.

EFFECT OF CONVENTION ON DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR OFFICIALS, DOMESTIC LAWS, AND OTHER TREATIES

1. Nothing in this Convention shall affect the taxation privileges of diplomatic or consular officials under the general rules of international law or under the provisions of special agreements.

2. This Convention shall not restrict in any manner any exclusion, exemption, deduction, credit, or other allowance now or hereafter accorded—

(a) By the laws of either Contracting State, or

(b) By any other agreement between the Contracting States.

ENTRY INTO FORCE

1. This Convention shall be subject to ratification or approval in accordance with the applicable procedures of the Governments of the Contracting States and it shall enter into force as soon as the parties have notified one another that their respective constitutional requirements have been met.

2. The provisions of this Convention shall have effect:

(a) In respect of tax withheld at the source, to amounts paid or credited on or after the first day of the second month next following the date on which this Convention enters into force,

(b) In respect of other taxes, to taxable periods beginning on or after the first day of January next following the date on which this Convention enters into force.

TERMINATION

This Convention shall remain in force until terminated by the Government of one of the Contracting States. The Government of either Contracting State may terminate the Convention at any time after 5 years from the date on which this Convention enters into force provided that at least 6 months' prior notice of termination has been given through diplomatic channels. In such event, the Convention shall cease to have effect:

1. In respect of tax withheld at the source, to amounts paid or credited on or after the first day of January next following the expiration of the 6 months' period;

2. In respect of other taxes, to taxable periods beginning on or after the first day of January next following the expiration of the 6 months' period.

For the Government of the Hungarian People's Republic:

LAJOS FALUVEGI,

FEBRUARY 12, 1979.

His Excellency
W. MICHAEL BLUMENTHAL,
Secretary of the Treasury,
United States of America.

EXCELLENCY: In connection with the Income Tax Convention signed today, I should like to state our understanding of the agreement reached by the delegations of the United States of America and of the Hungarian People's Republic concerning the application of certain provisions of the Convention:

1. In connection with Article 9, subparagraph 5(c), it is understood that Hungary will not impose a tax in such cases.

2. Income (other than income from immovable property) will be taxed in accordance with the provisions of Article 7 and Article 13, rather than in accordance with the provisions of Article 19, if the person deriving the income, being a resident of one Contracting State, carries on business in the other Contracting State through a permanent establishment situated therein, or performs in that other State independent personal services from a fixed base situated therein, and the right or property in respect of which the income is paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base.

3. In the case of dealings between an enterprise of one Contracting State and a related enterprise of the other Contracting State that involve conditions that differ from those that would have been made between independent enterprises, each Contracting State may apply its internal law to distribute, apportion or allocate income, deductions, credits and allowances between the related enterprises, to reflect any profits which would, but for those conditions, have accrued to one of the enterprises. The internal law of each Contracting State may also be applied to restrict the exemption of interest provided in paragraph 1 of Article 10 and of royalties provided in paragraph 1 of Article 11 to the amount of interest and royalties that would have been agreed upon between unrelated parties in cases where interest and royalties are paid by an enterprise of one Contracting State to a related enterprise in the other Contracting State.

4. It is agreed that each of the Contracting States shall endeavor to collect on behalf of the other Contracting State such amounts as may be necessary to ensure that relief granted by the present Convention from taxation imposed by such other Contracting State does not enure to the benefit of persons not entitled thereto. This agreement shall not impose upon either of the Contracting States the obligation to carry out administrative measures which are of a different nature from those used in the collection of its own tax, or which would be contrary to its sovereignty, security, or public policy.

I have the honor to propose to you that the present note and Your Excellency's reply thereto constitute the agreement of our two Governments on these points.

Accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Sincerely yours,

LAJOS FALUVEGI,
Minister of Finance,
Hungarian People's Republic.

TAX CONVENTION WITH THE HUNGARIAN PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC

JUNE 15, 1979

Mr. CHURCH, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, submitted the following report to accompany Ex. X, 96th Cong., 1st sess.

The Committeee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the Tax Treaty with the Hungarian People's Republic ("Hungary")[1] for the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of fiscal evasion with respect to taxes on income (Executive X), as amplified by a concurrent Exchange of Notes (collectively referred to as the proposed treaty), having considered the same, reports favorably thereon without reservation and recommends that the Senate give its advice and consent to ratification thereof.

I. PURPOSE

There is presently no income tax treaty in force between the United States and Hungary. The proposed treaty is intended to reduce or eliminate double taxation of income earned in one country by residents of the other country and deals with administrative matters between the United States and Hungary, and to promote closer economic cooperation and more active trade between the two countries.

The proposed treaty with Hungary was signed on February 12, 1979, and was amplified by an Exchange of Notes signed the same day. The Tax Treaty and the Exchange of Notes were transmitted to the Senate on May 9, 1979.

[2] III. SUMMARY OF TREATY

The proposed treaty is similar to other recent U.S. income tax treaties and to the model income tax treaty of the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) in virtually all respects.

As in other U.S. tax treaties, the objectives of the treaty are principally achieved by each country's agreeing to limit, in certain specified situations, its right to tax income derived from its territory by residents of the other. For example, the treaty contains the standard tax treaty provision that neither country will tax the business income derived from sources within that country by residents of the other unless the business activities in the taxing country are substantial enough to constitute a branch or other permanent establishment or fixed base (Article 7). Similarly, the treaty contains standard "commercial visitor" exemptions under which residents of one country performing personal services will not be required to file tax returns and pay tax in the other unless their contacts with the other exceed certain specified minimums (Articles 13 through 18). Also, the proposed treaty provides that interest, royalties, capital gains and certain other income derived by residents of either country from sources within the other are generally to be taxed only by the country of residence and not by the country of source (Articles 10, 11, 12 and 19), and that dividends received by residents of one country from sources within the other are to be taxed at reduced rates by the country of source (Article 9).

In situations where the country of source retains the right under the proposed treaty to tax income derived by residents of the other country, the treaty generally provides for the relief by the country of residence of the potential double taxation (Article 20) through a foreign tax credit (in the case of the United States) or an exemption (in the case of Hungary).

The treaty contains the standard provision (the "saving clause") contained in U.S. tax treaties that each country retains the right to tax its citizens and residents as if the treaty had not come into effect (Article 1). In addition, it contains the standard provision that the treaty will not be applied to deny any taxpayer any benefits he would be entitled to under the domestic law of either country or under any other agreement between the two countries (Article 24); that is, the treaty generally will be applied only to the benefit of taxpayers.

The treaty also contains standard nondiscrimination provisions and provides for exchanges of information and administrative cooperation between the tax authorities of the two countries to avoid double taxation and prevent fiscal evasion with respect to income taxes.

[3] IV. DATE OF ENTRY INTO FORCE AND TERMINATION

Entry into force

The proposed treaty will enter into force as soon as the United States and Hungary notify each other that their constitutional requirements for ratification have been met (in the case of the United States, upon its presentation of an instrument of ratification). With respect to taxes withheld at source, it will apply to income paid or credited on or after the first day of the second month following the date on which it enters into force. This would apply to dividends (Article 9), interest (Article 10), royalties (Article 11), and annuities and other fixed and determinable annual or periodic income which is not specifically covered by any article (Article 19). With respect to all other taxes, it will become effective for taxable years beginning on or after January 1 of the year following the date on which the proposed treaty comes into force.

Termination

The proposed treaty will continue in force indefinitely, but either country may terminate it at any time after 5 years from its entry into force by giving at least 6 months' prior notice through diplomatic channels. If terminated, the termination will be effective with respect to income of taxable years beginning (or, in the case of withholding taxes, payments of income made) on or after January 1 next following the expiration of the 6-month period.

V. COMMITTEE ACTION

The Committee on Foreign Relations held a public hearing on the proposed treaty and other tax treaties on June 6, 1979. The Committee considered the proposed treaty on June 12, 1979 and ordered it favorably reported by a vote of 13 yeas, no nays, with the recommendation that the Senate give its advice and consent to ratification of the treaty.

VI. BUDGET IMPACT

The Committee estimates that the effect of the proposed treaty on budget receipts will be negligible.

In accordance with the objectives of section 403 of the Budget Act, the Committee advises that the Director of the Congressional Budget Office has examined the Committee's budget estimate and agrees that the effect on budget receipts will be negligible. In keeping with section 308(a) of the Budget Act, and after consultation with the Director of the Congressional Budget Office, the Committee states that the treaty does not provide any new budget authority or any new or increased tax expenditures.

[4] VII. EXPLANATION OF TREATY PROVISIONS

Set forth below is a comprehensive article-by-article explanation of the proposed income tax treaty between the United States and Hungary.

Article 1. Personal scope

The proposed treaty applies generally to residents of the United States and to residents of Hungary, with specific exceptions designated in other articles. This follows other U.S. income tax treaties and the OECD model income tax treaty.

The proposed treaty contains the "saving clause" contained in all U.S. income tax treaties which provides, with specified exceptions, that the treaty is not to affect the taxation by the United States of its citizens and residents or the taxation by Hungary of its citizens and residents. Residents for purposes of the treaty (and thus for purposes of the saving clause) include corporations and other entities as well as individuals (Article 4. Fiscal domicile). In the case of the United States, the saving clause also extends to former citizens. (Under section 877 of the Internal Revenue Code, an individual who gives up U.S. citizenship is subject to U.S. tax on his U.S.-source income as if he were still a U.S. citizen if one of his principal purposes in giving up U.S. citizenship was to avoid U.S. tax.)

Exceptions to the saving clause are provided for the benefits conferred by the articles dealing with pensions (Article 15), relief from double taxation (Article 20), nondiscrimination (Article 21), and mutual agreement procedures (Article 22); thus, the benefits of those articles will be conferred by each country on its own citizens and residents as well as the citizens and residents of the other. In addition, the benefits conferred by the articles dealing with the taxation of income received by government employees (Article 16), teachers (Article 17), students and trainees (Article 18), and diplomatic and consular officials (Article 24) are to be provided for each country to its residents provided those residents are neither citizens of, nor have immigrant status in, that country.

Consequently, except for the exceptions to the saving clause set forth above, U.S. citizens and residents generally benefit under the treaty as the result of the agreement by Hungary to reduce its rate of tax on their income or exempt their income from tax rather than as the result of reductions in tax or exemptions by the United States. Even in this situation, if the tax which is foregone by Hungary could have otherwise been claimed in full by the U.S. taxpayers as a foreign tax credit, the real beneficiary of the reduction or elimination of the Hungarian tax would, as a practical matter, be the U.S. Treasury rather than the U.S. taxpayer. Similarly, except as noted above, Hungarian citizens and residents benefit under the treaty only to the extent that the United States agrees to reduce its tax on their income or to exempt their income from tax.

In the case of the United States, the proposed treaty applies to the Federal income taxes imposed under the Internal Revenue Code and to the excise taxes imposed on insurance premiums paid to foreign insurers and with respect to private foundations. However, it does not apply to the accumulated earnings tax or the personal holding company tax. In the case of Hungary, the treaty applies to the general income tax, the income tax on intellectual activities, the profit tax, the profit tax on economic associations with foreign participation, the enterprises special tax, the levy on dividends and profit distributions of commercial companies, the profit tax on state-owned enterprises, and the contribution to communal development (but only to the extent that the contribution is required in respect of income taxes covered by the treaty).

The proposed treaty also contains a provision generally found in U.S. income tax treaties to the effect that it will apply to substantially similar taxes which either country may subsequently impose. Each country is obligated under the treaty to notify the other of any changes it makes in its tax laws and of any official published material concerning the treaty, including explanations, regulations, rulings, and judicial determinations.

Additionally, the nondiscrimination provisions (Article 21) of the treaty apply to all taxes of every kind imposed at the national, state, or local level by the United States or Hungary. The exchange of information provisions (Article 23) of the proposed treaty will also apply to all taxes of every kind imposed by the two countries at the national level.

Article 3. General definitions

Certain of the standard definitions found in most U.S. income tax treaties are contained in the proposed treaty.

Under the proposed treaty, the term "United States" when used in a geographical sense does not apply to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam or any other possession or territory of the United States.

A "national" of either country is defined to include both a citizen of that country and also any legal entity such as a corporation, trust, estate, partnership, or association which is established under the laws of that country. A "company" is defined as a corporation or other entity treated as a corporation for tax purposes. An enterprise of a country is defined as an enterprise carried on by a resident of that country. Although the treaty does not define the term "enterprise," it would have the same meaning that it has in other U.S. tax treaties—the trade or business activities undertaken by an individual, partnership, corporation, or other entity.

The proposed treaty also contains the standard provision that, unless the context otherwise requires or the competent authorities of the two countries establish a common meaning, any terms are to have the meaning which they have under the applicable tax laws of the country applying the treaty.

Article 4. Fiscal domicile

The benefits of the proposed treaty generally are available only to residents of the two countries. Under the treaty, a person (either an [6] individual or an entity such as a corporation or partnership) is considered to be a resident of either country if, under the laws of that country, the person is subject to taxation by that country because it is the country of domicile, residence, citizenship, place of management, place of incorporation, or other criterion of similar nature. A person will not be considered to be a resident of a country if he is only taxable on his income from sources within that country or on his assets located in that country. A partnership, estate, or trust will be considered to be a resident of either country only to the extent that the income it derives is subject to tax, either in its hands or in the hands of its partners or beneficiaries, as the income of a resident of the country.

This provision of the proposed treaty is generally based on the fiscal domicile article of the OECD model tax treaty and is similar to the provisions found in other U.S. tax treaties. However, a significant difference between the definition of resident in this treaty and the definition in other recent U.S. income tax treaties, and consequently a significant difference in the coverage of the treaty, is that the term resident includes an individual who is subject to worldwide taxation on the basis of citizenship. As a result, U.S. citizens residing overseas (in countries other than Hungary) are entitled to the benefits of the treaty as U.S. residents. (Moreover, if they reside in Hungary, they are still allowed the benefits afforded U.S. residents which are unaffected by the saving clause.) Since Hungary generally taxes on a residency basis rather than on a citizenship basis, this broadened definition of resident does not benefit citizens of Hungary who are not Hungarian residents. However, Hungary does tax certain of its nationals who work overseas for the Hungarian Government (or its instrumentalities), and a special rule is provided under which these individuals and their families are treated as residents of Hungary entitled to the benefits of the treaty.

A set of rules is provided to determine residence in the case of a person who, under the basic treaty definition, would be considered to be a resident of both countries (e.g., a U.S. citizen and resident in Hungary). In the case of a dual resident individual, the individual will be deemed for all purposes of the treaty to be a resident only of the country in which he has his permanent home (where an individual dwells with his family), his center of vital interests (his closest economic and personal relations), his habitual abode, or his citizenship. If the residence of an individual cannot be determined by these tests, applied in the order stated, the competent authorities of the countries will settle the question by mutual agreement. In the case of a dual resident corporation which is created or organized under the laws of either country (or a political subdivision), the corporation will be treated as a resident only of that country. In the case of a dual resident person, other than an individual or a corporation (e.g., a dual resident partnership, trust, or estate), the residence of the person and the mode of application of the treaty will be determined by the competent authorities.

Article 5. Definition of permanent establishment

The proposed treaty contains a definition of permanent establishment which follows the pattern of other recent U.S. income tax treaties and the OECD model tax treaty. The permanent establish-[7]ment concept is one of the basic devices used in income tax treaties to avoid double taxation. Generally, a resident of one country is not taxable on its business profits by the other country unless those profits are attributable to a permanent establishment of the resident in the other country. In addition, the permanent establishment concept is used to determine whether the reduced rates of, or exemptions from, tax provided for dividends, interest, and royalties are applicable.

In general, a fixed place of business through which a resident of one country engages in business in the other country is considered a permanent establishment. This includes a place of management; a branch; an office; a factory; a workshop; or a mine, an oil or gas well, a quarry, or other place of extraction of natural resources. It also includes any building site, construction or installation project, or an installation or drilling rig or ship used for the exploration or development of natural resources, but only if the site, project, etc., lasts for more than 24 months.

This general rule is modified to provide that a fixed place of business which is only used for any or all of a number of specified activities will not constitute a permanent establishment. These activities include the use of facilities for storing, displaying, or delivering merchandise belonging to the resident; the maintenance of a stock of goods belonging to the resident for purposes of storage, display, delivery, or processing by another person, or the purchase of goods or merchandise, collection of information, or any other preparatory or auxiliary activities for the resident.

If a resident of one country maintains an agent in the other country who has, and regularly exercises, the authority to enter into contracts in that other country in the name of the resident, then the resident will be deemed to have a permanent establishment in the other country with respect to the activities which the agent undertakes on its behalf. This rule does not apply where the contracting authority is limited to those activities (described above) such as storage, display, or delivery of merchandise which are excepted from the definition of permanent establishment. The proposed treaty contains the usual provision that the agency rule will not apply if the agent is a broker, general commission agent, or other agent of independent status acting in the ordinary course of its business.

The fact that a company which is a resident of one country controls or is controlled by a company which is a resident of the other country or which carries on business in that other country (whether through a permanent establishment or otherwise), will not of itself constitute either company a permanent establishment of the other.

Article 6. Income from immovable property (real property)

The proposed treaty provides that income from real property may be taxed in the country where the real property or natural resources are located. For purposes of the treaty, real property will generally have the meaning provided under the laws of the country where the property is located, but will in any case include property which is accessory to real property, livestock and equipment used in agriculture and forestry, and rights to real property. Ships, boats, and aircraft will not be considered real property.

[8] Income from real property includes income from the direct use or renting of the property. It also includes royalties and other payments in respect of the exploitation of natural resources (e.g., oil wells) and gains on the sale, exchange, or other disposition of the royalty rights or the underlying natural resources. It does not include interest on loans secured by real property. Under Article 12 (Capital gains), gains on the sale, exchange, or other disposition of the property may also be taxed by the country where the property is located.

Article 7. Business profits

Under the proposed treaty, business profits of an enterprise of one country are taxable in the other country only to the extent they are attributable to a permanent establishment in the other country through which the enterprise carries on business.

The business profits of a permanent establishment are determined on an arm's-length basis. Thus, there is to be attributed to it the business profits which would reasonably be expected to have been derived by it if it were an independent entity engaged in the same or similar activities under the same or similar conditions and dealing at arm's-length with the resident of which it is a permanent establishment.

In computing taxable business profits, deductions are allowed for all expenses, wherever incurred, which are incurred for purposes of the permanent establishment. These deductions include a reasonable allocation of executive and general administrative expenses, interest, and other expenses which are incurred for purposes of the enterprise as a whole (or for purposes of that part of the enterprise which includes the permanent establishment). Thus, for example, a U.S. company which has a branch office in Hungary but which has its head office in the United States will, in computing the Hungarian tax liability of the branch, be entitled to deduct a portion of the executive and general administrative expenses incurred in the United States by the head office for purposes of administering the Hungarian branch. Business profits will not be attributed to a permanent establishment merely by reason of the purchase of merchandise by the permanent establishment for the account of the enterprise, or by reason of the delivery to the permanent establishment of goods or merchandise for its use. Thus, where a permanent establishment purchases goods for its head office, the business profits attributed to the permanent establishment with respect to its other activities will not be increased by a profit element on its purchasing activities.

Where business profits include items of income which are dealt with separately in other articles of the treaty, those other articles, and not this business profits article, will govern the treatment of those items of income.

Article 8. Shipping and air transport

The proposed treaty provides that income which is derived by an enterprise of either country from the operation of ships and aircraft in international traffic shall be exempt from tax by the other country. International traffic means any transportation by ship or aircraft, except where the transportation is solely between places in the other country (Article 3(1)(e). Definitions). The exemption applies whether or not the ships or aircraft are registered in the first country.

[9] The exemption for shipping and air transport profits applies to profits from the rental on a full or bareboat basis of ships or aircraft operated in international traffic if such rental profits are incidental to the actual operation of ships and aircraft in international traffic. (Rental on a full or bareboat basis refers to whether the ships or aircraft are leased fully equipped, manned and supplied or not.) Income from the operation in international traffic of ships or aircraft also includes income derived from the use, maintenance, or rental of containers, trailers for the inland transportation of containers, and other related equipment where the equipment is used to transport goods and merchandise.

The shipping and air transport exemption also applies where an enterprise has an agency in the other country for the transportation of goods or persons (e.g., an airline office), but the exemption only applies to the extent of activities directly connected with the business of shipping and aircraft transportation (including auxiliary activities).

Article 9. Dividends

Each country may tax dividends paid by its companies to shareholders resident in the other (i.e., they may impose a dividend withholding tax on shareholders resident in the other country), but the rate of tax may not exceed 15 percent if the beneficial owner is a resident of the other country. (In the absence of a treaty limitation, the statutory U.S. withholding tax rate on dividends paid by U.S. corporations to foreign shareholders is generally 30 percent.) The withholding tax rate is limited to 5 percent in the case of dividends paid to a company which directly or indirectly owns at least 10 percent of the voting stock of the company making the dividend distribution.

Neither country can tax dividends paid by companies of the other except insofar as (a) the dividends are paid to residents of the country imposing the tax, (b) the dividends are effectively connected with a permanent establishment or a fixed base in the taxing country, or (c) at least 50 percent of the company's gross income was attributable to a permanent establishment in the taxing country. In this last situation, however, the tax can be imposed only to the extent the dividends are paid out of the profits derived from the permanent establishment and, in addition, the rate of tax on the taxable portion is limited to 15 percent or 5 percent under the rules (described above) applicable to dividends paid by companies of the taxing country. As set forth in the Exchange of Notes, this last exception does not apply to Hungary because Hungary does not tax dividends paid for by foreign corporations regardless of the extent to which the dividends were derived from Hungarian source profits of the distributing foreign corporation. The United States, however, does impose its withholding tax on the U.S. source portion of dividends distributed to foreign shareholders by foreign corporations which derive more than 50 percent of their gross income for the preceding 3-year period from U.S. sources. This last exception permits the United States to continue to do so.

The reduced rates of tax on dividends will apply unless the recipient has a permanent establishment (or fixed base in the case of an individual performing independent personal services) in the source country [10] and the dividends are effectively connected with the permanent establishment (or fixed base). Dividends effectively connected with a permanent establishment are to be taxed as business profits (Article 8). Dividends effectively connected with a fixed base are to be taxed as income from the performance of independent personal services (Article 13).

Article 10. Interest

Interest derived by a resident of one country from sources within the other country is generally exempt from tax by the source country. (In the absence of a treaty limitation, the United States generally imposes a 30-percent withholding tax on interest paid by U.S. debtors—other than banks—to foreign lenders.)

The exemption from tax on interest will apply unless the recipient has a permanent establishment or fixed base in the source country and the interest is effectively connected with the permanent establishment or fixed base. In that event, the interest will be taxed as business profits (Article 7) or income from the performance of independent personal services (Article 13).

The proposed treaty defines interest as income from debt claims of every kind, whether or not secured and whether or not carrying a right to participate in profits. In particular, it includes income from government securities and from bonds or debentures, including premiums or prizes attaching to bonds or debentures.

Article 11. Royalties

Under the proposed treaty, royalties derived by a resident of one country from sources within the other are exempt from tax by the source country. (In the absence of a treaty limitation, the United States generally imposes a 30-percent withholding tax on royalties paid to foreigners not engaged in a U.S. business.) Royalties are defined for this purpose as payments of any kind received as consideration for the use of, or the right to use, any copyright of literary, artistic or scientific work, including films, radio or television tapes, any patents, trade marks, designs or models, plans, secret formulas or processes, or any other similar rights or property. Royalties also include payments for information concerning industrial, commercial, or scientific experience (e.g., "know-how"). However, this article does not apply to mineral royalties (which are covered by Article 6).

The exemption does not apply where the recipient is an enterprise with a permanent establishment in the source country or an individual performing personal services in an independent capacity through a fixed base in the source country, and the royalties are effectively connected with the permanent establishment or fixed base. In that event the royalties will be taxed as bussiness profits (Article 7) or income from the performance of independent personal services (Article 13).

Article 12. Capital gains

The proposed treaty generally provides that capital gains derived by a resident of one country will be exempt from tax by the source country. Under the Code, capital gains derived from U.S. sources by foreign investors are generally exempt from U.S. tax.

The exemption does not apply in two situations, and in those situations the gains may be taxed by both countries (with relief from double [11] taxation provided pursuant to Article 20). First, gains from the sale or exchange of real property may be taxed in the country where the property is located. Second, gains on the sale or exchange of property which forms a part of the business property of a permanent establishment or a fixed base (including gains on the disposition of the permanent establishment or the fixed base itself) may be taxed in the country where the permanent establishment or fixed base is located. This second exception does not apply to gains from the sale or exchange of ships, aircraft or containers operated by an enterprise of the other country in international traffic; such gains are only taxable by the country of residence.

Article 13. Independent personal services

Under the proposed treaty, income from the performance of independent personal services (i.e., services performed as an independent contractor, not as an employee) in one country by a resident of the other country is exempt from tax in the country where the services are performed, unless (1) the person performing the personal service is present in the country where the services are performed for more than 183 days during the taxable year or (2) the individual has a fixed base regularly available to him in that country for the purpose of performing the services. If the second requirement (but not the first) is met, the source country can only tax that portion of the individual's income which is attributable to the fixed base. Independent services include independent scientific, literary, artistic, educational or teaching activities as well as the independent activities of physicians, lawyers, engineers, architects, dentists, artistes, athletes and accountants.

Article 14. Dependent personal services

Under the proposed treaty, income from services performed as an employee in one country (the source country) by a resident of the other country will not be taxable in the source country if three requirements are met: (1) the individual is present in the source country for not more than 183 days during the taxable year; (2) his employer is not a resident of the source country; and (3) the compensation is not borne by a permanent establishment or fixed base of the employer in the source country.

Compensation derived by an employee aboard a ship or aircraft operated by a resident of one country in international traffic is exempt from tax by the other country, provided that the compensation is in respect of employment as a member of the regular complement of the ship or aircraft.

This article does not apply to pensions and social security payments (Article 16).

Article 15. Pensions

Under the proposed treaty, private pensions (and other similar compensation for past services) beneficially derived by residents of either country are exempt from tax in the other country, regardless of the source of pensions.

Social security payments and other public pensions paid by either country to a resident of the other (or to U.S. citizens) are only taxable by the country making payments. This rule does not apply in the case [12] of pensions which are paid to resident nationals of one country attributable to service performed by that individual to government entities of the other. (Article 16(2)(b). Government service).

Article 16. Governmental service

Under the proposed treaty, compensation paid by one country, its political subdivisions or local authorities, to an individual for labor or personal services performed for the paying governmental entity is exempt from tax by the other country. However, this exemption does not apply if the services are performed in the other country and the individual is a national of that country or did not become a resident of that country solely for the purpose of performing the service. In that situation, the compensation is only taxable by the country where the services are performed. Thus, an individual performing services for a Hungarian governmental entity ordinarily will only be taxable by Hungary. However, if he performs the services in the United States and is a U.S. citizen, or is a U.S. resident whose reasons for becoming a U.S. resident were not solely to work for that Hungarian governmental agency, he will be taxable by the United States.

Pensions paid for services to a governmental entity of either country will generally only be taxable by that country. However, if the recipient is a resident national of the other country, the pension will only be taxable by that other country.

The governmental service rules do not apply in situations where the compensation or pensions are paid in connection with any business carried on by any governmental entity of either country. In such situations, the provisions applicable to the private sector apply: Article 13 (Independent personal services), 14 (Dependent personal services), and 15 (Pensions).

Article 17. Teachers

The proposed treaty provides that if a teacher or researcher who is a resident of one country is invited to teach or engage in research in the other, he will be exempt from tax by the host country on income from teaching or engaging in research if he is present in that country for a period not expected to exceed 2 years. The exemption only applies if the individual comes to the other country primarily for the purpose of teaching or engaging in research pursuant to an invitation of the host country (or political subdivision or local authority) or a recognized educational institution in the host country. It is not to apply with respect to income from research which is undertaken primarily for the private benefit of a specific person or persons.

If the teacher or researcher remains in the other country for a period exceeding 2 years, the exemption only applies to income earned during the 2-year period. The exemption does not apply if the individual is a citizen of, or acquires immigrant status in, the host country (Article 1(3)). Income may be exempt under this Article even though it would be taxable under Article 13 (Independent Personal Services).

Under the proposed treaty, a resident of one country who becomes a full-time student, apprentice, or business trainee in the other country will generally be exempt from tax in the host country on payments from abroad used for maintenance, education, or training.

[13] A full-time student, apprentice or business trainee who qualifies for the exemption from tax by the host country may instead elect under the treaty to be treated for tax purposes as a resident of the host country. The election applies for the entire period that the individual is a full-time student, apprentice, or business trainee, and it may not be revoked except with the consent of the competent authority of the host country. The purpose of the election is to permit foreign students, apprentices, and business trainees present in the United States to qualify for benefits such as the standard deduction (the zero bracket amount), and for the dependency deductions (if applicable). For example, for U.S. tax purposes nonresident aliens are limited to one personal deduction and they are not permitted to claim the standard deduction or the dependency deduction. By electing to be taxed as U.S. residents, they may claim these deductions but, as a consequence, they are subject to U.S. tax on their worldwide income. This election would generally be advantageous for those foreign students, apprentices, and business trainees who do not have any substantial income from sources without the United States.

Article 19. All other income

Any item of income, regardless of its source, which is derived by a resident of either country and which is not dealt with in one of the other articles of the treaty will be taxable only by the country of residence. However, such an item of income which is received by a resident of one country who is a citizen of the other may be taxed by both countries (Article 1. Personal scope), subject to a foreign tax credit for taxes paid to the other if the other country is the country of source (Article 20. Relief from double taxation). Items covered by this article would include, for example, annuities, alimony, child support, and certain income from the rental of personal property.

Article 20. Relief from double taxation

United States

Under the proposed treaty, the United States agrees to provide its citizens and residents with a foreign tax credit against their U.S. income tax for the appropriate amount of taxes paid to Hungary. The credit allowed for U.S. tax purposes is in accordance with the provisions and subject to the limitations of U.S. law applicable to the year in question. Under present law, the United States only allows a credit for foreign income taxes (sec. 901 of the Internal Revenue Code), or foreign taxes imposed in lieu of income taxes (Code sec. 903), and the credit is limited to the amount of the pre-credit U.S. tax which is attributable to foreign source income (Code secs. 904 and 907).

The proposed treaty also provides that a deemed-paid foreign tax credit will be made available to a U.S. corporation with respect to dividends from a Hungarian corporation in which it owns, directly or indirectly, at least 10 percent of the voting stock. In this case, a credit will be allowed for the Hungarian tax paid by the Hungarian corporation on the earnings out of which the dividend is paid. A deemed-paid foreign tax credit satisfying the treaty requirements is presently provided under the Internal Revenue Code (sec. 902).

[14] This article provides that all the Hungarian taxes covered by the treaty (Article 2. Taxes covered) are to be considered to be income taxes for purposes of the U.S. foreign tax credit. Accordingly, all the Hungarian taxes covered by the treaty will be eligible for the U.S. foreign tax credit. These taxes would probably be creditable for U.S. tax purposes in the absence of the proposed treaty.

Hungary

The treaty generally provides for the relief by Hungary of double taxation of income received by its residents which is taxable under the treaty by the United States through the use of an exemption with progression. Hungary, like the United States and most other countries, has a progressive rate structure for its income tax (i.e., the tax rate becomes higher as taxable income increases). Under the exemption with progression, the exempt income is not subject to Hungarian tax, but it is taken into account in determining the effective rate on the resident's other income which is subject to tax. (By increasing the income taken into account, the effective rate becomes higher because of the progressive rate structure.)

With the exception of dividend income for which a foreign tax credit is allowed (described below), the exemption is available with respect to income derived by the Hungarian residents which under the treaty may be taxed by the United States (other than income which under the treaty may be taxed by the United States solely because the Hungarian resident receiving the income is also a citizen of the United States). Income eligible for the exclusion would include, for example, income from U.S. real property, business profits attributable to a U.S. permanent establishment, or compensation for personal services performed in an independent capacity through a U.S. fixed base. The treaty exemption is also available with respect to income from sources within the United States which would not be taxable by the United States under the treaty but for the fact the recipient is a U.S. citizen. This would include U.S.-source interest and royalties received by U.S. citizens resident in Hungary.

A Hungarian foreign tax credit rather than the exemption with progression will be provided under the treaty with respect to dividends received by Hungarian residents from U.S. companies where the dividends qualify for the reduced 15-percent or 5-percent treaty rate for the U.S. withholding tax (Article 9). Although Hungary does not have a statutory foreign tax credit, the treaty provides that such dividends from U.S. companies will be taxable by Hungary and that the Hungarian residents will be entitled to reduce their Hungarian tax by the 5-percent or 15-percent U.S. withholding tax imposed on the dividends. It was necessary to provide a credit in this situation rather than an exemption because the U.S. withholding tax rate under the treaty is substantially lower than the regular income tax rates of both countries. Therefore, an exemption would have more than offset any potential double taxation of the dividends.

Consequently, the only income received by a U.S. citizen resident in Hungary which would not qualify for either the exemptions from, or the credit against, the Hungarian tax pursuant to this provision would be non-U.S.-source income. There would not be double taxation in this situation, however, because the Hungarian tax could be claimed [15] as a foreign tax credit against the U.S. tax on that foreign source income.

Article 21. Nondiscrimination

The proposed treaty contains a comprehensive nondiscrimination provision relating to all taxes of every kind imposed at the national, state, or local level. It is similar to provisions which have been embodied in other recent U.S. income tax treaties.

Under this provision, neither country can discriminate by imposing more burdensome taxes (or other requirements connected with taxes) on citizens of the other country than it imposes on its own citizens who are in the same circumstances. For this purpose, citizens taxable on their worldwide income are not to be considered to be in the same circumstances as citizens who are not. Thus, for example, the United States would not be required to tax in the same way a U.S. citizen and a Hungarian citizen, neither of whom are residents of the United States, because the U.S. citizen is taxed by the United States on his worldwide income while the Hungary citizen is not. This provision does not, however, require either country to grant to residents of the other country the personal allowances, reliefs, or deductions for taxation purposes on account of personal status or family responsibilities which it grants to its own residents.

Similarly, neither country may tax a permanent establishment of an enterprise of the other country less favorably than it taxes its own enterprises carrying on the same activities. In determining the taxable income of an enterprise of either country, both countries are reqiured to allow the enterprise to deduct interest, royalties, and other disbursements paid by the enterprise to residents of the other country under the same conditions that they allow deductions for such amounts paid to residents of the same country as the enterprise. Similarly, for purposes of determining the taxable capital of an enterprise of one country, debts owed to residents of the other country are to be deductible under the same conditions as if they were owed to residents of the same country as the enterprise. The nondiscrimination provision also applies to corporations of one country which are owned by residents of the other country.

Articles 22 and 23. Administrative provisions

The proposed treaty contains various administrative provisions generally along the lines of the provisions contained in other U.S. tax treaties. In general, the proposed treaty provides—

(1) for consultation and negotiation between the tax authorities of the two countries to resolve differences arising in the application of the proposed treaty and also to resolve claims by taxpayers that they are being subjected to taxation contrary to the terms of the proposed treaty; and

(2) for the exchange between the countries of information pertinent to carrying out the provisions of the proposed treaty and of the domestic laws of the countries concerning taxes covered by the proposed treaty.

Article 24. Diplomatic and consular officials; Domestic laws and other treaties

The proposed treaty contains the rule found in other U.S. tax treaties that its provisions are not to affect the taxation privileges of [16] diplomatic and consular officials under the general rules of international law or the provisions of special agreements.

The proposed treaty also contains the rule found in other U.S. tax treaties that its provisions will not restrict in any manner any exclusion, exemption, deduction, credit or other allowance otherwise accorded by the domestic laws of either country or any other agreement between the two countries. In other words, the treaty (other than the exchange of information provisions) can only be applied to the benefit of taxpayers of the two countries, and the taxing authorities cannot apply it to increase a taxpayer's tax liability.

The proposed treaty will enter into force as soon as the United States and Hungary notify each other that their constitutional requirements for ratification have been met (in the case of the United States, upon its presentation of an instrument of ratification). With respect to taxes withheld at source, it will apply to income paid or credited on or after the first day of the second month following the date on which it enters into force. This would apply to dividends (Article 9), interest (Article 10), royalties (Article 11), and annuities and other fixed and determinable annual or periodic income which is not specifically covered by any article (Article 19). With respect to all other taxes, it will become effective for taxable years beginning on or after January 1 of the year following the date on which the proposed treaty comes into force.

Article 26. Termination

The proposed treaty will continue in force indefinitely, but either country may terminate it at any time after 5 years from its entry into force by giving at least 6 months' prior notice through diplomatic channels. Such a termination will be effective with respect to income of taxable years beginning (or, in the case of withholding taxes, payments of income made) on or after January 1 next following the expiration of the 6-month period.

EXCHANGE OF NOTES

In an exchange of identical letters signed together with the treaty, the two countries set forth certain agreements concerning the application of certain provisions of the treaty. The interpretations and understanding set forth in the Notes have the same force and effect as if they were contained in articles of the treaty.

First, although the dividend article (Article 9(5)(c)) would permit it, Hungary will not impose a tax on dividends paid to U.S. shareholders by corporations deriving more than 50 percent of their profits from Hungary in situations where the distributing corporation is not resident in Hungary. The United States imposes its withholding tax on dividends paid by foreign corporations to foreign investors where the distributing corporation derives 50 percent or more of its income from United States sources during the 3-year period preceding the distribution. Under the treaty, the United States may continue to tax dividends paid by Hungarian corporations in such situations.

Second, where a resident of one country carries on business through a permanent establishment in the other, income (other than income [17] from real property) will be taxed as business profits (Article 7) rather than other income (Article 19) if the right or property in respect of which the income is paid is effectively connected with the permanent establishment. Similarly, where a resident of one country performs independent personal services through a fixed base in the other, income (other than income from real property) will be taxed as independent personal services income (Article 13) rather than other income if the right or property in respect of which the income is paid is effectively connected with the fixed base. The consequences of this understanding is that the income in these situations will be taxed by the country of the permanent establishment or fixed based rather than only by the country of residence.

Third, the Notes recognize the right of each country to apply the provisions of its internal law to distribute, apportion, or allocate income, deductions, credits, and allowances between related enterprises in order to reflect properly their arm's-length profit in situations where the dealings between the related enterprises involve conditions different from those that would have been made between independent enterprises. In addition, the Notes also provide that the internal law of each country may be applied to limit the exemption provided in the treaty for interest (Article 10) and royalties (Article 11) so that it only applies to the extent that the interest or royalty does not exceed the arm's-length amount that would have been paid between unrelated parties. Thus, the treaty does not in any way limit the authority of the Internal Revenue Service to allocate or apportion income, deductions, credits, or allowances between related parties under section 482 of the Internal Revenue Code in situations where it determines that the allocation is necessary in order to prevent the evasion of taxes or clearly to reflect the income of the related parties. This authority is not limited by the treaty even where the allocation is between related parties which are not enterprises or where the related parties have not had dealings with each other.

Finally, the Notes set forth an agreement, similar to provisions in other recent U.S. income tax treaties, that each country will assist the other in collecting taxes imposed by the other country to the extent necessary to insure that the treaty benefits are only enjoyed by persons entitled to them. This agreement does not obligate either country to carry out administrative measures which are of a different nature from those used in the collection of its own tax or measures which would be contrary to its sovereignty, security, or public policy.

[75] APPENDIX C

Written Responses by Treasury to Questions by the Committee Staff

Department of the Treasury,
Washington, D.C., June 8, 1979.

Hon. Frank Church,
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Relations,
U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Chairman: To follow up my testimony at the June 6 hearings concerning the six tax conventions or protocols involving the United Kingdom, France, Hungary and Korea, I want to assure you that Article I of the Third Protocol of the proposed US-UK Income Tax Treaty gives full effect to the Senate's reservation on Article 9(4) of that treaty. Let me also assure you that there is no similar state tax issue in any of the other five treaties which were considered by the Committee yesterday.

Again let me emphasize our view that each of these treaties is important to the United States and that their prompt approval is desirable.

I am also enclosing answers to the written questions submitted to me by your staff at the hearings as well as copies of my answers to questions from Senator Helms and Senator Javits.

Sincerely,

Donald C. Lubick,
Assistant Secretary (Tax Policy).

Enclosures.

Questions for Assistant Secretary for Tax Policy Donald C. Lubick

General Questions*

Question 1. On page three of your testimony, you mentioned that the public was able to make presentations to the Treasury concerning particular private sector concerns in the area of international taxation, could you explain how the notice of such public meetings is made, what the participation level has been and any changes in tax treaties or negotiations that have been affected by this public participation?

Answer. The public meetings, referred to in the testimony, are announced by Treasury Press Releases and notices in the Federal Register. These announcements are reported in publications which are widely read in the international tax community. Public participa-[76]tion in these meetings varies, depending on the degree of interest in the particular country being discussed. The meeting to discuss the Canadian treaty was attended by well in excess of 100 individuals; a recent meeting to discuss a proposed treaty with Norway was attended by about 20 people. All of the reports we have received from the public regarding these meetings have been favorable.

It is difficult to point to particular changes in treaties under negotiations as a result of these meetings. In most cases, there has not yet been a further round of negotiations following the meeting. The meetings have clearly served to sharpen the negotiators' awareness and understanding of some of the complex issues involved.

Questions 2 and 3. The group of six treaties or protocols the Committee is conducting hearings on today, will they result in a net loss or gain for the U.S. from tax revenues? If a loss, how much and why; if again, how much and why?

Answer. In general, these treaties and protocols tend to balance out revenue losses and gains, leaving the overall revenue effect roughly neutral. For example, where the treaty partner is required to reduce or eliminate its tax on U.S. taxpayers, this results in a reduction in the U.S. foreign tax credit and an increase in U.S. revenue. These increases are roughly offset by reductions in U.S. revenues resulting from reductions in U.S. tax on taxpayers resident in the other country.

In most cases, data on international flows and transactions are not available in sufficient detail to permit precise estimation of the revenue effects of particular treaty provisions.

Question 4. Please describe the personnel from the Department of the Treasury and other agencies of the U.S. Government involved in negotiating tax treaties or protocols. Please detail the prospective relationships between the IRS, Department of the Treasury and the Department of State.

Answer. The Office of the Assistant Secretary for Tax Policy in the Treasury has the principal responsibility for the negotiation of tax treaties. The actual negotiations are normally conducted by members of the Office of International Tax Affairs, which combines the Office of International Tax Counsel (Attorneys) and the International Tax Staff of Tax Analysis (Economists). The delegations are headed either by the Assistant Secretary for Tax Policy or by a senior member of the Office of International Tax Affairs.

* The questions and answers relating specifically to the other protocols and treaties considered at the June 6, 1979 hearings are set forth in the committee reports relating to those treaties.

The Internal Revenue Service is often represented on delegations. The nature and extent of this representation depends on the specific issues that are likely to arise. For example, if there are problems regarding the exchange of information, representatives of the IRS Office of International Operations, which is responsible for these exchanges, will participate in the discussions. In many cases, when negotiations are held abroad, the Revenue Service Representative assigned to that country will participate.

The State Department is invited to participate in all discussions. Country desk officers will sometimes attend a part or all of the discussions held in Washington. When negotiations are held abroad, the economic or commercial officers in the U.S. Embassy frequently participate. The State Department generally handles correspondence be-[77]tween the U.S. and foreign negoitators and is often called upon to follow up with representatives of the other country on issues which arise in the negotiations.

There is close coordination between Treasury, IRS and the State Department throughout the negotiating process. The State Department advises the Treasury on political issues and IRS advises on administrative matters. The State Department is responsible for the arrangements for signing treaties and their transmittal to the Senate.

Question 5. The U.S. Treasury, in 1977, finalized a "model convention" for international tax treaties, could you please explain the status of this model and in particular, any changes that have been made to it?

Answer. For many years, the Treasury had used an informal "model" as a basis for negotiations. This model evolved and changed as the negotiators gained experience with it. In 1976 a decision was made to publish the U.S. model. Following the 1977 publication of the revised OECD Model Convention, the Treasury revised its model to conform it to the OECD Model, where possible, and the revised model was published in May of 1977.

The model is sent to potential treaty partners prior to the commencement of negotiations, and it normally serves as the discussion draft during the first round of negotiations. Many changes are made in the model during negotiations to reflect particular problems which arise in attempting to mesh two tax systems. Changes may be made to reflect the needs of the other country. For example, where negotiations are with a developing country, many of the model provisions (designed for treaties between two developed countries) are inappropriate. The U.S. negotiators are generally quite flexible in modifying the model for treaties with developing countries. These changes occur most frequently in the provisions dealing with permanent establishments or the taxation of personal service income, in which cases a somewhat lesser degree of economic contact or penetration is required for the host country to be able to tax the income of a resident of the other country. Similarly, with the taxation of dividends, interest, and royalties, less of a reduction in withholding tax rates is generally required of developing countries. The U.S. interest in these cases is to avoid rates which are so high as to generate excess foreign tax credits for U.S. income recipients.

Questions 6 and 7. In the third protocol proposed to the U.S.-U.K. Income Tax Treaty, the definition of permanent establishment has been changed. Please explain the basis of this change. Were the affected U.S. drilling companies contacted concerning the proposed change? If they were contacted, please give the details of when, by whom, and what resulted from such contact. Why was the permanent establishment definition selected as the item to be changed in the tax area?

Answer. In our discussions with the British subsequent to the Senate reservation on Article 9(4) of the proposed treaty, the United Kingdom specifically requested the inclusion in the protocol of a provision clarifying their taxing rights with respect to exploration and exploitation connected activities. This requested clarification was not unusual in light of the original negotiations in 1975 over the permanent estab-[78]lishment definition. In those negotiations, the United States agreed to delete from the twelve month permanent establishment exclusion contained in subparagraph (2)(f) of the proposed treaty any reference to "an installation or drilling rig or ship used for the exploration or development of natural resources" as a result of the British insistence that there be no limitation on their right to tax such activities. This deletion left the application of the permanent establishment definition to these activities somewhat uncertain, although as the United Kingdom authorities believe, a strong argument exists that these activities could be taxed even without the clarification of the new protocol.

We agreed to the inclusion of this provision in the Third Protocol because it was reasonable to expect the British to request some additional concession for the loss of the benefits of Article 9(4); because the terms of the provision were reasonable in light of our own statutory tax policy (we would generally tax these kinds of activities conducted in the United States, even if they were of a shorter duration than 30 days); and because it could be viewed as little more than a clarification of a reasonable interpretation taken by the British of their taxing rights under the proposed treaty without the protocol provision.

The drilling industry was clearly aware of the precise terms of the protocol provision at least one month prior to the signing of the Protocol on March 15, 1979. On February 16, 1979, Mr. Arnold W. Bramlett, Chairman of the Accounting and Taxation Committee of the International Association of Drilling Contractors (IADC), wrote to the International Tax Counsel, Mr. H. David Rosenbloom, expressing general concern over the provision. Subsequently, there were telephone conversations between Mr. Rosenbloom and Mr. Bramlett in which the Treasury sought specific information as to the nature of the activities and the harm which was alleged would occur. These requests were confirmed in a letter from Mr. Rosenbloom to Mr. Bramlett on March 5, 1979, still 10 days before the Protocol was signed. To date, the Treasury has not received from the IADC, or any of its members, specific information detailing any specific adverse effects of the protocol provision.

QUESTIONS ON THE U.S.-HUNGARY INCOME TAX TREATY

Question 1. How does the 1977 model convention of the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) differ from the U.S. model income tax convention? [1]

Answer: Among the primary differences between the U.S. and OECD models are that the United States reserves its right under its model to tax U.S. citizens in accordance with U.S. law even if they are residents of the other treaty country and that U.S. treaties cover only Federal income taxes except for purposes of nondiscrimination where all taxes are covered. The OECD model deals with taxation of residents of each country and does not make an exception for nonresident citizens, and covers state and local income and capital taxes as well as those at the national level. In addition, the U.S. model provides for exemption at source on interest (taxation only in the country of resi-[79]dence) whereas the OECD model allows a 10 percent tax at source. The U.S. model includes somewhat broader provisions for adjusting the income of related persons and exchanging information and provides for limited assistance in collecting taxes reduced on payments to persons not entitled to the treaty reductions. There are a number of lesser differences, primarily technical in nature. A summary comparison of the two models is given in the attached memorandum.

Question 2. Will the proposed Hungarian Convention result in a net loss or gain to the U.S. tax revenues? If gain, how much? If loss, how much? What are the underlying policy reasons for any projected loss or gain?

Answer. The revenue consequences of the treaty for the foreseeable future are negligible. The reductions in Hungarian tax will primarily benefit U.S. investors by reducing excess credits of joint ventures and eliminating the need to file tax returns by individuals and companies whose contacts with Hungary are limited. The U.S. rate reductions on outgoing dividends, interest and royalties represent a potential revenue cost but the level of such payments is insignificant.

Question 3. The submittal letter from the Secretary of State to the President mentions that the convention provides "for exchange of information and administrative cooperation between the tax authorities of the two countries to avoid double taxation," how, or in what form will this exchange and/or cooperation take place?

Answer. The exchange of information and administrative cooperation provisions are taken from the U.S. model treaty and appear in several other U.S. treaties. The tax authorities agree to cooperate with each other in applying the convention to avoid double taxation and prevent tax evasion. The United States would furnish Hungary with copies of withholding forms on payments of U.S. income, such as dividends and interest subject to withholding, to residents of Hungary (not U.S. citizens). Safeguards are provided to protect secrecy and avoid undue administrative burdens. The tax authorities may consult by letter or in person whenever a question arises.

Question 4. Will the ratification of U.S.-Hungary Income Tax Treaty encourage private U.S. capital investment or activity in Hungary? If yes, have there been any projections or studies as to the level of investment or activities?

Answer. The ratification of the treaty would signal to U.S. and Hungarian investors that familiar tax rules apply and sound tax relations exist between the two countries. This would support and encourage the interest of investors in both countries, but it is one factor and cannot be quantified separately. Interest already exists. For example, Control Data, Katy Industries (shoes) and Levi Strauss are already actively in Hungary and Hungarian companies are producing light bulbs, marketing pharmaceuticals, and engaging in a joint venture with Corning Glass in the United States. The treaty would help the expansion of these activities by clarifying the tax rules in advance.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT TECHNICAL EXPLANATION[1] OF THE CONVENTION BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE GOVERNMENT OF THE HUNGARIAN PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC FOR THE AVOIDANCE OF DOUBLE TAXATION AND THE PREVENTION OF FISCAL EVASION WITH RESPECT TO TAXES ON INCOME[2]

This treaty was negotiated on the basis of the U.S. Model Convention for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Fiscal Evasion with Respect to Taxes on Income and Capital published on May 18, 1976. A revised version of that Model was published on May 1977. In nearly all respects the two versions are substantially the same. The May 1977 version reflects the revised Model Double Taxation Convention on Income and Capital published by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) in January 1977 which modified the 1963 OECD Model. Many of those revisions were available at the time this treaty was negotiated and were also taken into account.

[1] It is the practice of the Treasury Department to prepare for the use of the Senate and other interested persons a Technical Explanation of the tax conventions which are submitted to the Senate for its advice and consent to ratification.

An Income Tax Convention with Hungary was signed February 12, 1979, and submitted by the President to the Senate on May 9, 1979. On June 6, 1979, the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations held hearings and this Technical Explanation was presented. The Senate voted its advice and consent on 1979, and instruments of ratification were exchanged on September 18, 1979.

Article 1. PERSONAL SCOPE

This Article identifies the persons who come within the scope of the Convention (hereinafter referred to as "the treaty").

Paragraph 1 is taken directly from the U.S. Model Income Tax Convention (hereafter "the U.S. Model") of May 1977, but with the wording revised so that the general rule is stated first and the exception follows. The general rule is that the treaty applies to residents of one or both of the Contracting States. The term "resident" is defined in Article 4 (Fiscal Domicile). The exception is that in certain cases the treaty may also apply to residents of third countries because of their relationship to a resident of a Contracting State. For example under paragraph 5 of Article 9 (Dividends) the treaty refers to dividends derived by residents of third countries, and Article 23 (Exchange of Information) may apply to residents of third countries.

Paragraph 2 contains the traditional "saving clause" under which each Cotracting State reserves the right to tax its residents, as determined under Article 4 (Fiscal Domicile), and its citizens as if the treaty had not come into effect. In the case of the United States the "saving clause" applies to former citizens as well as to current citizens. This is standard U.S. treaty policy (see Revenue Ruling 79-152). A former U.S. citizen whose loss of citizenship had as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of income tax will continue to be subject to U.S. income tax, in accordance with the provisions of section 877 of the Internal Revenue Code, for a period of ten years following the loss of citizenship. The substance of this paragraph is the same as that of paragraph 2 of Article 1 of the U.S. Model of May 1977. The saving clause is drafted reciprocally because in certain cases the Hungarian People's Republic also taxes on the basis of citizenship. The Hungarian income tax on intellectual activities applies at graduated rates of 6 to 60 percent on royalties derived by Hungarian citizens wherever resident. However, since the reference to former citizens has no effect under the laws of the Hungarian People's Republic, that clause was simplified by making the reference applicable only to former citizens of the United States.

Paragraph 3 sets forth certain exceptions to the application of the saving clause where other provisions of the treaty reflect overriding policies. For example, the saving clause does not affect the benefits provided under paragraph 2 of Article 15 (Pensions). Social security benefits and other public pensions paid by the Hungarian People's Republic are taxable only by the Hungarian People's Republic even though the recipient may be a resident or citizen of the United States, and conversely. Similarly, the benefits provided under Article 20 (Relief from Double Taxation), Article 21 (Non-Discrimination), and Article 22 (Mutual Agreement Procedure) are available to residents and citizens of the Contracting States notwithstanding the saving clause.

In some other cases the saving clause overrides benefits conferred by the treaty to citizens or persons having immigrant status in a Contracting State, but does not override those benefits as applied to residents who are not citizens and do not have immigrant status in that State. This second category of exceptions to the saving clause refers to the benefits conferred by a Contracting State under Article 16 (Government Service), Article 17 (Teachers), Article 18 (Students and Trainees), and Article 24 (Effect of Convention on Diplomatic and Consular Officials, Domestic Laws and Other Treaties).

This paragraph follows closely paragraph 3 of Article 1 of the U.S. Model of May 1977. It differs only in omitting a cross reference to child support payments under subparagraph (a) and in adding a cross reference to teachers under subparagraph (b). The U.S. Model of May 1977 contains a specific rule on child support payments not found in this treaty, and does not include an article on teachers such as the one found in this treaty.

Paragraph 1 states the general rule that the treaty applies to income taxes imposed on behalf of a Contracting State. Except for Articles 21 (Non-Discrimination) and 23 (Exchange of Information), the Convention does not apply to taxes on capital, and it applies to income taxes imposed only at the national level. Capital taxes were omitted because, since the United States does not have such taxes at the national level there is no double taxation, including them would be non-reciprocal and there is no U.S. tax against which to credit Hungarian taxes on capital. Moreover, the Hungarian taxes on capital are not major taxes; they apply primarily to housing, vacant land and farm property. The Hungarian People's Republic does not now have any local income taxes. Only the national government imposes income taxes, although the revenue from some of those taxes is turned over to the county governments.

Paragraph 2 designates the existing taxes to which the Convention shall apply. In the case of the United States these are the Federal income taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code, the excise tax on insurance premiums paid to foreign insurers (Code section 4371) and the excise tax with respect to private foundations (Code section 4940). The accumulated earnings tax (Code 531) and the personal holding company tax (Code section 541) are not covered by the treaty. These provisions, which are found in subparagraph (a), are identical to paragraph 2(a) of the U.S. Model of May 1977.

In the case of the Hungarian People's Republic, there are eight existing income taxes covered by the treaty: the general income tax, the income tax on intellectual activities, the profit tax, the profit tax on economic associations with foreign participation, the enterprises' special tax, the levy on dividends and profit distributions of commercial companies, the profit tax on state-owned enterprises, and the contribution to communal development to the extent that it is imposed in respect of income taxes covered by the treaty. The contribution to communal development is imposed as a surtax to the general income tax and the income tax on intellectual activities. It was agreed that it will be covered by the treaty to the extent that it is imposed on those or any other income tax covered by the treaty, but not if it should be imposed as a surtax to a tax not so covered. Under paragraph 1 of Article 20 (Relief from Double Taxation), the United States agrees that the Hungarian taxes enumerated in paragraphs 2(b) and 3 of this Article are income taxes for purposes of the U.S. foreign tax credit.

Paragraph 3 provides that the treaty shall also apply to subsequently imposed taxes which are substantially similar to the existing taxes covered by the treaty. The competent authorities agree to notify each other of changes in their respective tax laws and any official published material relating to the application of the treaty. This provision is identical to paragraph 3 of the U.S. Model of May 1977.

Paragraph 4 provides that for some purposes the treaty also applies to taxes other than national income taxes. For the purposes of Article 21 (Non-Discrimination), the treaty applies to taxes of all kinds imposed at all levels of government. For the purposes of Article 23 (Exchange of Information), the treaty applies to taxes of every kind imposed at the national level. These provisions also correspond to those found in the U.S. Model of May 1977.

Article 3. GENERAL DEFINITIONS

Paragraph 1 defines the principal terms used throughout the treaty. Unless the context otherwise requires, the terms defined in this paragraph have a uniform meaning throughout the treaty. It should be noted that a number of important terms are defined in other Articles. For example the terms "resident" and "permanent establishment" are defined in Articles 4 (Fiscal Domicile) and 5 (Permanent Establishment), respectively, and the terms "dividends" and "interest" are defined in Articles 9 (Dividends) and 10 (Interest).

Paragraph 1 follows paragraph 1 of the U.S. Model of May 1977 in defining the terms "person", "company", "enterprise of a Contracting State", "international traffic", "competent authority", and the term "United States". The definition of the United States includes the continental shelf of the United States in accordance with section 638 of the Internal Revenue Code and the regulations thereunder. The term "Hungarian People's Republic" is defined to include the territory of the Hungarian People's Republic. Hungary does not have a territorial sea or continental shelf.

The only departure in this paragraph from the U.S. Model of May 1977 is the definition of the term "nationals," which is relevant for purposes of Article 21 (Non-Discrimination). In this treaty "national" is defined to mean an individual citizen of a Contracting State and any legal person, partnership, and association deriving its status as such from the law in force in a Contracting State. The definition of "national" as an individual citizen is found in the U.S. Model in Article 24 (Non-Discrimination), paragraph 2. The additional definition of legal persons, partnerships and associations as nationals of a Contracting State is taken from the OECD Model Draft Income Tax Convention of January, 1977, where it appears in Article 24 (Non-Discrimination).

Paragraph 2 is from the U.S. Model of May 1977. It provides that terms not defined in the treaty shall have the meaning which they have under the laws of the Contracting State relating to the taxes to which the treaty applies, unless the context of the treaty requires otherwise and unless the competent authorities agree on an acceptable definition under the terms of Article 22 (Mutual Agreement Procedure).

Article 4. FISCAL DOMICILE

This article sets forth rules for determining the residence of individuals, corporations, and other persons for purposes of the treaty. A definition of residence is important because, except as otherwise provided in the treaty, only a resident may claim the benefits of the treaty.

Paragraphs 1 through 5 of this Article correspond to paragraphs 1 through 5 of Article 4 (Resident) of the U.S. Model of May 1977. Paragraph 6 of the U.S. Model does not appear because it is relevant only with respect to countries which impose tax on a remittance basis, and that is not the case in the Hungarian People's Republic.

Paragraph 1 lists a number of criteria which may be used under the laws of a Contracting State to determine residence, such as domicile, residence, citizenship, place of management, or place of incorporation. Thus, a U.S. citizen living in a third country is a resident of the United States under this treaty. A person liable to tax in a Contracting State only on income from sources in that State is not considered to be a resident of that State for purposes of the treaty. For example, a diplomat of the Hungarian People's Republic or of a third country stationed in the United States is not a resident of the United States for purposes of the treaty.

When applied with respect to income derived by a partnership, estate, or trust, the term "resident" applies only to the extent that the income derived by such partnership, estate, or trust is subject to tax as the income of a resident of a Contracting State either in its hands or in the hands of the partners or beneficiaries. For example, if a Hungarian partnership which is comprised of one partner resident in Hungary and another partner resident in a third country derives dividends from the United States, the limitation of U.S. tax under the provisions of Article 9 (Dividends) of this treaty apply only to the portion of the dividend attributable to the partner who is a resident of Hungary.

Paragraph 2 provides a series of tie-breakers for assigning a single residency to a person who under paragraph 1 would be a resident of both countries. The first test is where the individual has a permanent home. If this test is inconclusive because the individual has a permanent home in both countries or in neither of them, the second test is where his center of vital interests is located, in other words, where his personal and economic relations are closer. If this test does not provide a satisfactory answer, the third criterion is where the individual has an habitual abode; and if he has an habitual abode in both countries or in neither of them, he is deemed to be a resident of the State of which he is a national. Should the individual be a national of both countries or of neither of them, then it is left to the competent authorities of the Contracting States to settle the question by mutual agreement.

Paragraph 3 provides that a company, which under paragraph 1 is a resident of both Contracting States, shall be considered a resident only of the Contracting State under the laws of which it is created or organized, whether at the national level or under the laws of a political subdivision. Thus, a corporation incorporated under the laws of a state of the United States is a resident only of the United States for purposes of the treaty.

Paragraph 4 provides that if a person other than an individual or a company is a dual resident of the Contracting States, the competent authorities shall attempt to agree on a single residence in one of the Contracting States for such person.

Paragraph 5 provides that an individual national of one of the Contracting States shall also be considered to be a resident of that State if that individual is employed by that Contracting State or an instrumentality thereof and is engaged in the performance of governmental functions for the employing State and remains subject to income tax by the employing State as if he continued to be a resident thereof. This provision also applies to the spouse and minor children residing with such an employee if they are also subject to income tax by the sending state. This paragraph is not found in the OECD Model. It is provided in the U.S. Model of May 1977. Under its terms, a U.S. diplomat or other employee of the United States government performing governmental functions for the United States outside of the United States is considered to be a resident of the United States for purposes of this treaty and therefore entitled to the benefits provided in the treaty for residents of the United States, such as the reduced rate of Hungarian withholding tax with respect to dividends and the exemption from Hungarian tax of interest and royalties paid to residents of the United States. And conversely, a Hungarian diplomat stationed in the United States is a resident of the People's Republic of Hungary for purposes of the treaty.

Article 5. PERMANENT ESTABLISHMENT

This Article defines the term "permanent establishment," which is relevant to the taxation of business profits under Article 7 (Business Profits). With only a few minor exceptions, this Article is the same as Article 5 (Permanent Establishment) of the U.S. Model of May 1977.

In paragraph 1 the term "or production" was inserted after the phrase "fixed place of business" at the request of the Hungarian delegation, because in the Hungarian language "business" does not encompass all trade or business activities but has a more limited meaning. For the same reason, it was also decided to change the reference "through which the business of an enterprise is wholly or partly carried on" to "through which the activities of an enterprise are wholly or partly carried on." The term "fixed place of business" appears also in subparagraphs (d), (e) and (f) of paragraph 4 and in paragraph 5. However, it was not necessary to insert the term "or production" in those paragraphs because they do not pertain to production activities.

The term "place of management" was inserted in paragraph 2 at the request of the Hungarian delegation to provide greater unifromity with the OECD model. The U.S. Model of May 1977 excludes this term because it lacks clarity and in any event a place of management would normally require an office, which is specifically listed.

Paragraph 3 is the same as in the U.S. Model of May 1977. It provides that a building site or construction or installation project or an installation or drilling rig or ship used for the exploration or development of natural resources constitutes a permanent establishment only if it lasts more than 24 months. In such a case, it constitutes a permanent establishment from the first day.

Paragraph 4 lists a number of exceptions to the general rule that a fixed place of business or production through which the activities of an enterprise are carried on constitutes a "permanent establishment." Paragraph 4 is the same as paragraph 4 of Article 5 of the U.S. Model of May 1977. It is also the same as the comparable paragraph in the 1977 OECD Model, with the exception that subparagraph (f) of this treaty provides that the maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for any combination of the activities mentioned in subparagraphs (a) through (e) does not constitute a permanent establishment, whereas under subparagraph (f) of the OECD Model (paragraph 4 of Article 5) there is an additional condition that the overall activity of the fixed place of business resulting from this combination must be of a preparatory or auxiliary character for the enterprise.

Paragraphs 5 and 6 refer to the use of agents. Under paragraph 5 a dependent agent acting on behalf of an enterprise who habitually exercises an authority to conclude contracts in the name of the enterprise is deemed to constitute a permanent establishment of that enterprise except to the extent that his activities are limited to those mentioned in paragraph 4, which would not constitute a permanent establishment when carried on at a fixed place of business. Paragraph 6 provides that merely because an enterprise of one Contracting State makes use in the other Contracting State of a broker or other agent of independent status acting in the ordinary course of business, it will not therefore be considered to have a permanent establishment in that other State.

Paragraph 7 states that the fact that a corporation which is a resident of one Contracting State is either the subsidiary or the parent of a corporation which is a resident of the other Contracting State is not in itself relevant in determining whether the corporation has a permanent establishment in the other Contracting State. What is relevant is whether the subsidiary or parent corporation carries on an activity which, within the provisions of the article, would constitute a permanent establishment of the other company. The same rules apply to two or more subsidiaries of the same company.

This Article provides that income from real property, including income from agriculture and forestry, may be taxed by the Contracting State where the property is situated. This rule does not confer an exclusive right of taxation to the State where the property is situated, but simply confirms that the situs State has the primary right to tax such income regardless of whether the income is derived through a permanent establishment in that State. This Article is identical to paragraphs 1 through 4 of Article 6 of the U.S. Model of May 1977.

Paragraph 5 of the U.S. model providing for a binding election to be taxed on a net basis was deleted as unnecessary; such an election is available under U.S. law, and the Hungarian People's Republic taxes income from real property on a net basis in any event.

This Article, except for the addition of the parenthetical reference to real property, is identical to Article 6 of the OECD Model of January 1977.

Article 7. BUSINESS PROFITS

This Article provides rules for the taxation by a Contracting State of income from business activity carried on in that State by a resident of the other State.

Paragraph 1 provides that business profits of an enterprise of one Contracting State shall be taxable only in that State except to the extent that such profits are attributable to a permanent establishment through which the enterprise carries on business activities in the other Contracting State. This rule is also found in the U.S. Model of May 1977 and the OECD Model of January 1977.

Paragraphs 2 and 3 are also taken from the U.S. Model of May 1977. Paragraph 2 provides that the profits to be attributed to a permanent establishment are those which it might be expected to make if it were a distinct and independent enterprise engaged in the same or similar activities under the same or similar conditions. Paragraph 3 provides that there shall be allowed as deductions those expenses incurred for the purposes of the permanent establishment, whether incurred in the State where the permanent establishment is located or elsewhere. The deductible expenses include a reasonable allocation of administrative expenses, research and development expenses, interest, and other expenses incurred for the purposes of the enterprise as a whole or the part thereof which includes the permanent establishment.

Paragraph 4(a) is the same as paragraph 4 of Article 7 of the U.S. Model of May 1977. It provides that the mere purchase by a permanent establishment of goods or merchandise for the enterprise shall not result in profiles being attributed to the permanent establishment. Paragraph 4(b) adds that the mere delivery to the permanent establishment of goods or merchandise for its use shall not give rise to the attribution of profit to the permanent establishment. Paragraph 4(b) was added at the request of the Hungarian delegation because they have had difficulty with other countries assessing profits to a permanent establishment in such cases.

Paragraph 5 provides that where business profits include items of income dealt with separately in other Articles of the treaty, then the provisions of those separate articles override the provisions of this Article. Thus, for example, the taxation of income of shipping and aircraft companies dealt with in Article 8 (Shipping and Air Transport) is governed by that Article and not by this Article. Similarly the taxation of dividends, interest, and royalties is controlled by Articles 9 (Dividends), 10 (Interest), and 11 (Royalties): however, the terms of those articles provide that where dividends, interest, or royalties derived by a resident of a Contracting State are effectively connected with a permanent establishment or fixed base of that resident in the other Contracting State, then the provisions of this Article or of Article 13 (Independent Personal Services) shall apply.

This Article does not include two paragraphs which appear in Article 7 of the U.S. Model of May 1977. One such paragraph (paragraph 5) of the U.S. Model provides that the method for determining the profits attributable to a permanent establishment shall be used each year unless there is good and sufficient reason to change. This provision was inserted in the U.S. Model only for uniformity with the OECD Model; its deletion is not of any consequence. The second such deletion is paragraph 7 of Article 7 of the U.S. Model which provides a definition of "business profits". The primary purpose of that definition is to state that film rentals and rentals of tangible personal property are business profits, and therefore subject to the provisions of Article 7, with the result that such income derived by a resident of one Contracting State may not be taxed by the other Contracting State except to the extent attributable to a permanent establishment in the latter State. The Hungarian delegation objected to defining such rentals as business profits. However, they were willing to provide for exemption at source on royalties and on income not expressly mentioned when not attributable to a permanent establishment in Hungary. Consequently, it was agreed to delete the definition of business profits and to deal with film rentals under Article 11 (Royalties) and rentals of tangible personal property under Article 19 (All Other Income).

Article 8. SHIPPING AND AIR TRANSPORT

Paragraph 1 provides that profits of an enterprise of one of the Contracting States from operating ships or aircraft in international traffic shall be taxable only in that Contracting State.

Paragraphs 2 and 3 clarify what income is to be considered profits from the operation of ships or aircraft. Paragraph 2 states that profits from the rental on a full or bareboat basis of ships or aircraft operated in international traffic are covered by the exemption at source provided in paragraph 1 if such rental profits are incidental to operating profits. The lessee need not be a resident of a Contracting State. Paragraph 3 states that profits from the use, maintenance, or rental of containers and related equipment for the transport of goods or merchandise in international traffic are also covered by the exemption at source provided in paragraph 1.

Paragraphs 1 through 3 of this Article are taken directly from the U.S. model income tax convention of May 1976. In the U.S. model of May 1977, the exemption of rental income was broadened to include the rental on a full or bareboat basis of ships or aircraft if such rental profits are incidental to the operating profits or if the lessee operates the ships or aircraft in international traffic, in which case it is not necessary that such profits be incidental to operating profits to qualify for the exemption. That revision had not been made at the time that this treaty was being negotiated.

Paragraph 4 was inserted at the request of the Hungarian delegation to make certain that the income derived from the ticket sales of offices in the United States of Malev Airlines would not be subject to United States tax, although attributable to a permanent establishment in the United States, and conversely for ticket sales of U.S. airlines and shipping companies in Hungary. It is taken from the income tax treaty between Hungary and Austria.

Article 9. DIVIDENDS

Article 9 in the U.S. Model deals with associated enterprises. In this treaty, that topic is dealt with in an exchange of notes accompanying the treaty. Consequently, beginning with Article 9 the numbering of this treaty is not consistent with that of the U.S. Model.

This Article limits the rate of tax which may be imposed by either Contracting State on dividends paid by a company which is a resident of that State to a shareholder resident in the other Contracting State.

Such dividends may be taxed in the State of residence of the recipent. They may also be taxed in the State of which the company paying the dividends is a resident, but at rates which shall not exceed 5 percent of the gross amount of the dividends when the beneficial owner is a company resident in the other Contracting State and owns, directly or indirectly, at least 10 percent of the voting stock of the company paying the dividends, and 15 percent of the gross amount of the dividends in all other cases. These rules are also found in Article 10 of the U.S. Model of May 1977.

The Hungarian People's Republic imposes under its levy on dividends and profit distributions (paragraph 2(b)(vi) of Article 2 (Taxes Covered)) a "remittance" tax on dividends paid by a Hungarian joint venture. The tax is imposed on the distributing entity at a statutory rate of 20 percent. Technically, the definition of dividends does not cover the Hungarian "remittance" tax because it is imposed on the distribution rather than on the receipt of dividends. However, Hungary agrees that under this paragraph the rate of remittance tax will be reduced to 5 percent or 15 percent on distributions to U.S. residents.

Paragraph 3 defines "dividends" as income from shares or other rights participating in profits, but not debt-claims, and income from other corporate rights taxed in the same way as income from shares under the tax law of the State of which the company making the distribution is a resident. This definition is also found in the U.S. Model of May 1977.

Paragraph 4 provides that where the shares or holding in respect of which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or fixed base of the recipient in the country of which the company paying the dividends is a resident, then the dividends are taxable in accordance with the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits) or Article 13 (Independent Personal Services), rather than under the other provisions of this article.

Paragraph 5 provides that, in general, a Contracting State may not impose tax on dividends paid by a company which is a resident of the other Contracting State as a general rule, but that there are three execptions to this rule: (1) where the dividends are paid to a resident of the first-mentioned State, (2) where the holding in respect of which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or fixed base in the first State, or (3) where the dividends are paid out of profits attributable to a permanent establishment in the first State of the company paying the dividends, provided that at least 50 percent of that company's gross income from all sources was attributable to a permanent establishment of the company in that first State. Where only the third of these three conditions applies, the rate of tax which may be imposed on such dividends is subject to the limitations provided in paragraph 2 of this article when the dividends are paid to a resident of the other Contracting State.

For example, if a corporation created under the laws of the Hungarian People's Republic and doing business in the United States pays dividends, those dividends could be taxed by the United States if paid to a resident of the United States. They could also be taxed by the United States if the holding in respect of which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or a fixed base in the United States. And, finally, they could be taxed by the United States if the dividends are paid out of profits attributable to a permanent establishment of the Hungarian corporation in the United States, but only if at least 50 percent of the company's gross income from all sources was attributable to a permanent establishment in the United States. The final case preserves the United States tax on dividends paid by a foreign corporation which are considered to be of U.S. source under section 861(a)(2)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code. If paid to residents of the Hungarian People's Republic, such dividends would be subject to U.S. tax at the reduced rates provided in paragraph 2.

The Hungarian People's Republic

does not have a comparable source rule to that of section 861(a)(2)(B) of the U.S. Internal Revenue Code. To make it clear that Hungary will not impose its remittance tax twice, once on the remittance by a joint venture to a U.S. partner under paragraph 2, and again under paragraph 5(c) on the dividend paid by the U.S. partner to its U.S. parent, a statement was included in the exchange of notes that Hungary will not impose its remittance tax under paragraph 5(c).

Article 10. INTEREST

This article deals with the taxation by one Contracting State of interest derived by a resident of the other Contracting State.

Paragraph 1 provides the rule found in the U.S. Model of May 1977 that interest shall be exempt from tax at source and taxable only in the state of residence. However, the wording of the U.S. Model which refers to interest "derived and beneficially owned" by a resident of a Contracting State was changed at the request of the Hungarian delegation to the language of the OECD Model (Article 11, paragraph 1) which refers to interest "arising in a Contracting State and paid to a resident of the other Contracting State."

Paragraph 2 contains the definition of interest found in the U.S. Model of May 1976. It differs from the U.S. Model of May 1977 and from the OECD Model only by not specifically excluding penalty charges for late payment from the definition of interest. This is not a difference of substance.

Paragraph 3 provides that where the debt claim in respect of which the interest is paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or fixed base which the recipient of the interest maintains in the other Contracting State, then the interest is taxable in accordance with the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits) or Article 13 (Independent Personal Services) rather than under this Article.

The exchange of notes includes a provision with respect to interest not at arm's length paid between related persons.

Paragraph 1 contains the rule found in the U.S. model of May 1977 (Article 12) which gives the exclusive right of taxation of royalties to the state of residence of the recipient. However, the wording was revised to conform to the language of the 1963 OECD Model (Article 12), which parallels the language of the 1977 OECD Model with respect to interest (Article 11), to read "Royalties arising in a Contracting State and paid to a resident of the other Contracting State shall be taxable only in that other State."

Paragraph 2 contains a definition of royalties, taken from the U.S. model of 1977 (Article 12, paragraph 2) but including rather than excluding cinematographic films or films or tapes used for broadcasting. The last sentence of the definition of royalties found in the U.S. Model, relating to gains derived from the alienation of property which are contingent upon the productivity, use or disposition of such rights or property was deleted, at the request of the Hungarian delegation.

Paragraph 3 provides that where the right or property in respect of which the royalties are paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or fixed base maintained by the recipient of the royalties in the other Contracting State, then the royalties shall be taxed in accordance with the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits of Article 13 (Independent Personal Services) rather than in accordance with the provisions of this article.

Paragraph 4 of the U.S. model of May 1977 dealing with royalties paid at other than arm's-length between related persons was deleted because the Article on associated enterprises was deleted. The substance of this paragraph is found in the exchange of notes accompanying the treaty.

Article 12. CAPITAL GAINS

This article contains the same provisions as found in the U.S. Model of May 1977 (Article 13) with the exception that the reference to gains from the disposition of rights or property contingent on the productivity, use or disposition of the property as described in Article 12 (Royalties) was deleted to correspond to the deletion of that sentence from Article 12.

Paragraph 1 provides that gains from the alienation of immovable property are taxable in the state where the property is situated.

Paragraph 2 provides that a Contracting State may tax gains from the alienation of movable property which is part of the property of a permanent establishment or fixed base in that State of a resident of the other Contracting State. However, gains derived by an enterprise of one Contracting State from the alienation of ships, aircraft, or containers which it operates in international traffic are taxable only in the state of residence of that enterprise. This latter provision relating to ships, aircraft and containers is also found in the U.S. Model but in a separate paragraph (paragraph 3 of Article 13).

Paragraphs 1 and 2 do not confer an exclusive right to tax. Such gains may also be taxed by the State of residence, subject to the provisions of Article 20 (Relief from Double Taxation). Paragraph 3 provides that gains from the alienation of any property other than property identified in paragraphs 1 and 2 are taxable only in the State of which the recipient is a resident.

Article 13. INDEPENDENT PERSONAL SERVICES

The treaty provides separate articles dealing with the taxation of income from independent and dependent personal services. Independent personal services are services performed by an individual for his own account where he receives the income and bears the losses arising from such services. Income from services in which capital is a material income-producing factor, however, will generally be governed by the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits). Generally, services rendered as a director of a corporation, or by physicians, lawyers, engineers, architects, dentists, artistes, athletes, and accountants who perform personal services as sole proprietors or partners are independent personal services, whereas services performed as an employee or as an officer of a corporation constitute dependent personal services.

This article is the same as Article 14 of the U.S. Model of May 1977, with the addition of paragraph 2 which illustrates the kinds of services covered by this article. Paragraph 2 is based on paragraph 2 of Article 14 of the OECD Model, but the term used in that model, "professional services" has been changed to "personal services," and artistes and athletes have been added to the list of examples because in this treaty, unlike in the OECD model, they are treated under the general rules for independent or dependent personal services rather than in a special article.

The rule provided in this Article is that income derived by an individual who is a resident of a Contracting State from the performance of personal services in an independent capacity shall generally be taxable only in that State. However, such income may also be taxed in the other Contracting State if such services are performed in that other State and either a) the individual is present in that other state for more than 183 days in the taxable year, or b) the income is attributable to a fixed base in that other state which the individual has regularly available there for the purpose of performing his activities.

Article 14. DEPENDENT PERSONAL SERVICES

This article is the same as Article 15 of the U.S. Model of May 1977. It provides that, subject to the provisions relating to pensions (Article 15) and income for government services (Article 16), remuneration derived by a resident of a Contracting State in respect of an employment may be taxed by that other State only to the extent that the remuneration is for employment exercised in that other State. Even in that event, the remuneration is taxable only in the recipient's state of residence if the recipient is present in the other state for not more than 183 days in the taxable year, is paid by or on behalf of an employer who is not a resident of the other State, and the remuneration is not borne by a permanent establishment or fixed base of the employer in the other State.

Paragraph 3 provides a special rule for crew members of ships or aircraft operated in international traffic. Remuneration for such services is taxable only in the Contracting State of which the enterprise operating the ship or aircraft is a resident.

Article 15. PENSIONS

This article corresponds to paragraph 1 of Article 18 of the U.S. model of May 1977. It provides that, subject to the provisions of paragraph 2 of Article 16 (Government Services), pensions and similar remuneration beneficially derived by a resident of one Contracting State in consideration of past employment are taxable only in the state of residence of the recipient, but that social security payments and other public pensions paid by one of the Contracting States to a resident of the other state or to a United States citizen are taxable only in the paying state. The first paragraph deals with pensions in consideration of private employment. The second paragraph deals with retirement benefits which are not related to prior employment, such as social security payments and U.S. railroad retirement benefits. Pensions in consideration of government employment are covered under Article 16 (Government Services).

The U.S. Model (Article 18) provides additional paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 which deal respectively with annuities, alimony, and child support payments. Those paragraphs were deleted in this treaty. Annuities, alimony, and child support payments therefore come under Article 19 (All Other Income).

Article 16. GOVERNMENT SERVICE

With one exception this article is the same as Article 19 of the U.S. Model of May 1977.

Paragraph 1 provides as a general rule that remuneration other than pensions paid by a Contracting State or a political subdivision or local authority thereof to any individual for services rendered shall be taxable only in that State. It also provides an exception, however. The exception is that such remuneration shall be taxable only in the other Contracting State if the services are rendered in that other State and the individual is a resident of that other State and either is also a national of that State or did not become a resident of that State solely for the purpose of performing the services (for example, if the individual was a local resident when hired by the first State). This rule and the exception to it are also found in the OECD Model of January 1977.

The U.S. Model also includes a special provision for the spouse of dependent children of an individual employed by one of the Contracting States and sent to perform governmental services in the other Contracting State and who is not a national of that other Contracting State. In such a case under the U.S. Model, if the spouse or a dependent child of such an individual were to also become employed by the first Contracting State after having become resident in the other Contracting State that spouse or child would also be exempt from tax by that other Contracting State on the remuneration for those services. The purpose of this special rule is to cover the case where the wife or child of a U.S. embassy employee in Budapest, for example, also becomes employed by the U.S. Embassy in Budapest after having established residence there. However, this relatively modest purpose is not immediately clear from the complicated language inserted in at the end of paragraph 1 in the U.S. Model. Moreover, it is unnecessary in this case because under paragraph 5 of Article 4 (Fiscal Domicile) such an individual would be considered a resident of the United States (the country of nationality) for all purposes of the treaty. Consequently, that additional language was deleted.

Paragraphs 2 and 3 of Article 16 are the same as paragraphs 2 and 3 of the U.S. Model of May 1977. Paragraph 2 provides that a pension paid by a Contracting State or a political subdivision or a local authority thereof to any individual as consideration for services rendered to that State or subdivision or local authority is taxable only in that State unless the recipient is both a national and a resident of the other State, in which case such income is taxable only in the other Contracting State. Paragraph 3 provides that the provisions of this article apply only to remuneration and pensions in respect of governmental services. Remuneration and pensions in respect of services performed in connection with a business carried on by a Contracting State or a political subdivision or local authority thereof are taxable under the provisions of Articles 13 (Independent Personal Services), 14 (Dependent Personal Services), and 15 (Pensions), as the case may be.

At the request of the Hungarian delegation, this article was inserted. It is the same as Article 17 of the income tax treaty between the United States and Poland.

The article provides that when a resident of one of the Contracting States goes to the other Contracting State for a period not expected to exceed two years for the purpose of teaching or engaging in research or both at a university or other recognized educational institution in that other State, at the invitation of that other State or of a recognized educational institution in that State, the income for personal services of teaching or research at that educational institution shall be exempt from tax by the host State for a period not exceeding two years from the date of arrival in that State. This exemption does not apply to income from research carried on primarily for private benefit. If the two year period is exceeded, the exemption is not lost retroactively; it will still apply to the first two years. However, to qualify for the exemption, the individual must have gone to the other Contracting State for a period which was not expected to exceed the two years.

This article is substantially the same as Article 20 in the U.S. Model of May 1977. It provides that a resident of one of the Contracting States who goes to the other Contracting State for the purpose of full-time education or training shall be exempt from tax in that other Contracting State on payments made to him from sources outside that State for the purpose of his maintenance, education, or training. It further provides that such a student or trainee may elect to be treated for tax purposes as a resident of the State which he is visiting for the purposes of education or training. Under this rule, a Hungarian student or trainee in the United States may elect to be taxed on his world-wide income in the United States and to claim the same deductions and personal exemptions which are available to U.S. residents. Such an election would benefit a student or trainee with limited income, especially if he is supporting dependents, since a nonresident alien is only allowed one personal exemption and may not use the zero bracket amount. The election would presumably not be made by a student or trainee with a large amount of foreign source income. Once the election is made, it may not be revoked during the time when this article is applicable, except with the consent of the competent authority of the host State.

Article 19. ALL OTHER INCOME

This article conforms to paragraph 1 of Article 21 of the U.S. Model of May 1977. It provides that any income of a resident of a Contracting State which is not covered by other articles of this treaty shall be taxable only in the residence State.

The items of income covered by this Article include annuities, alimony, child support payments, and rentals of tangible personal property.

The U.S. Model of May 1977, like the OECD Model of January 1977, contains a second paragraph which excepts from the rule of paragraph 1 income derived by a resident of a Contracting State which is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or fixed base of that resident in the other Contracting State; in such cases, the income is covered instead under the provisions of the articles dealing with business profits or independent personal services. The Hungarians agreed with this rule, but felt that it was self-evident and therefore did not wish to include specific language in this article which they would have to explain to their tax authorities and taxpayers. It was agreed that the substance of this rule would be put instead in the exchange of notes.

Article 20. RELIEF FROM DOUBLE TAXATION

Paragraph 1 of this article is taken from the U.S. Model of May 1977. It provides that the United States shall give a foreign tax credit for income taxes paid to the Hungarian People's Republic, subject to the limitations provided in U.S. law. The taxes referred to in paragraphs 2(b) and 3 of Article 2 (Taxes Covered) are considered income taxes for purposes of the credit. The treaty guarantee of a foreign tax credit is independent of the statutory grant of a credit under the Internal Revenue Code, but the amount of the credit to be allowed is determined in accordance with the limitations provided in the Internal Revenue Code. The article provides a credit both for taxes imposed on the recipient and an indirect credit for taxes paid with respect to the profits of a corporation of the Hungarian People's Republic out of which dividends are paid to a United States corporation owning at least 10 percent of the voting stock of the Hungarian corporation paying the dividends.

Paragraph 2 provides that the Hungarian People's Republic shall, with the exception of dividends from United States corporations, exempt from tax United States source income derived by residents of the Hungarian People's Republic. In the case where a resident of the Hungarian People's Republic is a United States citizen, the exemption applies to all income derived from sources within the United States; in the case of other residents of the Hungarian People's Republic, the exemption applies to income which may be taxed by the United States in accordance with the provisions of this treaty other than the "saving" clause of paragraph 2 of Article 1 (Personal Scope). In the case of dividends which may be taxed in the United States in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 2 of Article 9 (Dividends), the Hungarian People's Republic will allow a foreign tax credit for the amount of tax imposed by the United States, up to the Hungarian tax attributable to such dividends. This credit is available with respect to the United States withholding tax; Hungary was not prepared to extend the credit to also cover the underlying corporate tax on the profits out of which dividends are paid in the case of dividends from a United States subsidiary to a Hungarian parent corporation. As a practical matter, cases of Hungarian corporations deriving dividends from U.S. subsidiaries are uncommon. In the absence of a treaty, the Hungarian People's Republic taxes the worldwide income of residents and provides no statutory relief from double taxation.

The Hungarian People's Republic may take into account exempt income in determining the amount of tax on the taxable portion of income derived by residents of the Hungarian People's Republic. This method of avoiding double taxation, often referred to as "exemption with progression," is provided for in the OECD Model of January 1977 and is commonly used by countries which choose the exemption method of avoiding double taxation.

Article 21. NON-DISCRIMINATION

The provisions of this article are substantially the same as those of paragraph 1 and paragraphs 3 through 6 of Article 24 of the U.S. Model of May 1977. Paragraph 2 of Article 24 of the U.S. Model contains a definition of the term "nationals" which in this treaty appears in Article 3 (General Definitions) and is broadened to include legal persons.

Paragraph 1 provides that nationals, including legal persons as well as individuals, shall not be treated less favorably with respect to taxation and connected requirements by the other Contracting State than are nationals of that other Contracting State in the same circumstances. Nationals who are subject to tax on their worldwide income by a Contracting State are not in the same circumstances as nationals not taxed on their worldwide income by their State of nationality. Thus, United States citizens who are not residents of the United States are not in the same circumstances with respect to United States taxation as nationals of the Hungarian People's Republic who are not citizens of the United States, and therefore, the United States taxation of nationals of the Hungarian People's Republic as nonresident aliens may differ from the United States taxation of United States citizens resident in the Hungarian People's Republic without violating this provision.

Paragraph 2 provides that a Contracting State may not impose more burdensome taxes on a permanent establishment of an enterprise of the other State than it imposes on its own enterprises carrying on the same activities.

Paragraph 3 prohibits discrimination in the matter of deduction. Interest, royalties, and other disbursements paid by an enterprise of a Contracting State to a resident of the other Contracting State must be deductible for determining taxable profits under the same conditions as if they had been paid to a resident of the first-mentioned State. The U.S. Model contains language explaining that the term "other disbursements" includes a reasonable allocation of executive and general administrative expenses, research and development expenses, and other expenses incurred for the benefit of a group of related enterprises. That sentence was deleted from this treaty as excessively detailed and not necessary. The paragraph also provides that debts incurred by an enterprise of a Contracting State to a resident of the other Contracting State shall be deductible in determining taxable capital under the same conditions as if the debts had been contracted to a resident of the first-mentioned State.

Paragraph 4 requires that a Contracting State not impose more burdensome taxation on a subsidiary corporation owned by residents of the other Contracting State than it imposes on similar corporations which are locally owned.

Paragraph 5 repeats the statement of paragraph 4 of Article 2 (Taxes Covered) that this Article applies to taxes of every kind and description imposed by all levels of government.

Article 22. MUTUAL AGREEMENT PROCEDURE

This article is substantially the same as Article 25 of the U.S. Model of May 1977. It does not include the illustrative material in paragraph 3 of that Article which gives examples of the types of matters the competent authorities may agree to, such as a common attribution or allocation of income, deductions or credits. That elaboration, which is not found in the OECD Model, was deleted at the request of the Hungarian delegation to preserve greater uniformity with the OECD Model and because it was considered to be self-evident. Its deletion does not narrow the scope of the article.

Paragraph 1 provides that a taxpayer who considers that the actions of one or both of the Contracting States result in taxation not in accordance with the treaty, may present his case to the competent authority of the State of which he is a resident or national.

Paragraph 2 provides that the competent authority, if it considers the objection to be justified, and if it is not able to arrive at a solution itself, shall endeavor to resolve the case by mutual agreement with the competent authority of the other Contracting State. Any agreement reached shall be implemented without regard to any statutory time limits of the Contracting States. Thus, for example, if it is agreed that tax liability should be adjusted downward, a refund of the excess tax paid will be made even though the ordinary statute of limitations may have expired.

Paragraph 3 provides that the competent authorities shall endeavor by mutual agreement to resolve any difficulties or doubts which may arise in the interpretation of application of the treaty. They may also consult together to eliminate double taxation in cases not foreseen in the treaty. This language is identical to that of paragraph 3 of the OECD Model of January 1977. The same language is also found in paragraph 3 of the U.S. Model of May 1977, but as indicated above that paragraph also includes additional language giving examples of questions which might be resolved through the mutual agreement procedure.

Paragraphs 4 and 5 provide that the competent authorities may communicate with each other directly for the purpose of reaching agreements in accordance with this article and that they may prescribe regulations to carry out the purposes of the treaty. Both paragraphs are identical to paragraphs 4 and 5 of the U.S. Model of May 1977.

Article 23. EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION

The three paragraphs of this Article are identical to paragraphs 1 through 3 of Article 26 of the U.S. Model of May 1976. Except for minor language changes, these paragraphs are the same as paragraphs 1 through 3 of Article 26 of the U.S. Model of May 1977. Paragraphs 4 and 5 of the U.S. Model (both the 1976 and 1977 versions) deal with assistance in collection where treaty benefits accrue to persons not covered by the treaty. Undertaking such a collection obligation is a departure from Hungarian practice, and they preferred to deal with this issue in the exchange of notes rather than in the Article itself.

Paragraph 1 provides that the competent authorities shall exchange such information as is necessary for carrying out the provisions of the treaty or of their domestic laws concerning taxes covered by the treaty. It also provides assurances that information so exchanged will be protected in the same manner as information obtained under domestic laws with respect to secrecy and disclosure.

Paragraph 2 explains that the obligation undertaken in paragraph 1 to exchange information does not require a Contracting State to carry out measures contrary to the laws and administrative practice of either State or to supply information not obtainable under its laws or in the normal course of its administration, or to supply information which would disclose trade secrets or other information the disclosure of which is contrary to public policy.

Paragraph 3 states that when information is requested by a Contracting State in accordance with this Article, the other State shall obtain the information as if the tax in question were a tax of that other State, whether or not the case involves a tax liability in that other State. Further, the paragraph specifies that the State to which a request has been made shall provide information in forms usable in the judicial practice of the requesting State, such as depositions of witnesses and copies of unedited original documents, to the extent that such forms of information can be obtained under the laws and practices of the State to which the request is made when enforcing its own taxes.

In accordance with paragraph 4 of Article 2 (Taxes Covered) this Article applies to all taxes at the national level.

Article 24. EFFECT OF CONVENTION ON DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR OFFICIAL, DOMESTIC LAWS AND OTHER TREATIES

This Article corresponds to Article 27 of the U.S. Model of May 1977. Paragraph 1 provides that this treaty shall not affect taxation privileges of diplomatic or consular officials under other special agreements or under international law.

Paragraph 2 provides that the treaty shall not restrict any benefit provided by the laws of either Contracting State or by any other agreement between the Contracting States. Thus, for example, a Contracting State may not impose a tax by virtue of a provision of this treaty which allows it to tax if such a tax is not provided for under its internal law.

In the Hungarian People's Republic an international agreement concluded by the Government does not require ratification. Therefore, the usual wording of this Article was changed to refer to ratification "or approval" and to specify that the treaty enters into force when the parties have notified one another that their respective constitutional requirements have been met. On the United States side, this requires approval by the Senate, in which case an instrument of ratification will be signed and provided to the Hungarian People's Republic. In exchange, the Hungarian People's Republic will provide us with a notice of approval of the treaty by their Government.

Once the treaty enters into force it will have effect with respect to withholding taxes on income paid or credited on or after the first day of the second month following the entry into force of the treaty, and with respect to other taxes on income of taxable periods beginning on or after January 1 of the year following the entry into force. Thus, for example, if the treaty were to enter into force on December 1, 1979, the reduction or elmination of withholding tax at source on dividends, interest, and royalties would apply with respect to such income paid or credited begining on February 1, 1980, and the provisions concerning taxes not withheld at the source would apply as of January 1, 1980. These timing provisions are taken from Article 28 of the U.S. Model of May 1977.

Article 26. TERMINATION

The treaty shall remain in force indefinitely unless terminated by the Government of one of the Contracting States. The Government of either Contracting State may terminate the treaty after five years from the date on which it enters into force by giving at least six months' prior notice through diplomatic channels. In that event, the treaty will cease to have effect with respect to taxes withheld at the source for income paid or credited beginning on January 1 of the following year, provided that the six months' period of notice has expired by that time (i.e., if notice is given by June 30 of one year, the termination will be effective on January 1 of the following year). With respect to other taxes, the termination would be effective with respect to taxable periods beginning on or after January 1 of the following year, again providing that the six months' period has expired by that time.

EXCHANGE OF NOTES

As indicated in the respective Articles, it was agreed that a number of points would be covered in an exchange of notes to accompany the treaty rather than in the body of the treaty articles themselves. The primary reason for moving these points to an exchange of notes was to simplify the text of the treaty by removing from it a number of points which were considered elaborations of points already made or implicit in the articles. In one case with reference to assistance in collection, the provision was moved to the exchange of notes because it is regarded by Hungary as an exception to its ordinary treaty policy; no similar provision is included in the OECD Model and the issue had not previously been encountered by the Hungarian People's Republic. The exchange of notes constitutes a part of the treaty and is legally binding on the parties.

Paragraph 1 simply states that the Hungarian People's Republic will not impose a tax on dividends paid by a U.S. corporation out of profits of a joint venture in Hungary. The remittance tax provided under Hungarian law will be imposed, at the reduced rates provided in paragraph 2 of Article 9 (Dividends), on distributions to U.S. partners in joint ventures; no second tax will be imposed on such distributions.

Paragraph 2 provides the same rule with respect to the income covered under Article 19 (All Other Income) that is provided separately in Articles 9 (Dividends), 10 (Interest), and 11 (Royalities), to the effect that when such income is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or fixed base of the recipient of the income in the other Contracting State, it will be taxed in accordance with the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits) or Article 13 (Independent Personal Services).

Paragraph 3 states that each Contracting State may apportion or allocate income, deductions, credits, and allowances between related enterprises of the two Contracting States in accordance with its internal law. The United States will apply its rules and procedures under section 482 of the Internal Revenue Code. The wording of this provision, which refers to "enterprises" and "dealings" and considers only related enterprises of the two Contracting States is not intended to limit the scope of application of section 482. It was agreed that both Contracting States would deal with non-arm's-length transactions in accordance with the provisions of its internal law. However, the Hungarian delegation objected to spelling out the scope of such laws in the treaty, finding the language of both the U.S. Model and the OECD Model on this point excessively complex. It was therefore decided to simply refer to internal law in the exchange of notes and allow each State to apply its law as it would do in the absence of a treaty. Similarly, the treatment of excessive interest or royalties paid between related persons will be resolved in accordance with internal law.

Paragraph 4 contains the rules usually found in paragraphs 4 and 5 of the Article on exchange of information and administrative assistance (Article 26 in the U.S. Model of May 1977). The Hungarian People's Republic agrees to attempt to collect on behalf of the United States the additional tax due to the United States when a resident of a third country receives dividends, interest, or royalties in Hungary from which U.S. tax has been withheld at the reduced treaty rate or waived under the treaty when the recipient, not being a resident of Hungary, is not entitled to the benefits of the treaty. The provision is worded reciprocally, but is probably less relevant for Hungary which imposes its dividend tax on the distributing entity and does not withhold tax on interest paid abroad, so that the only relevant case would be with respect to the Hungarian tax on royalty payments. It is agreed that neither Contracting State in fulfilling this commitment is required to carry out administrative measures different from those used to collect its own taxes or contrary to its sovereignty, security or public policy.

Part IV. Items of General Interest

Revision to Form 4970, Tax on Accumulation Distribution of Trusts and Form 1116, Computation of Foreign Tax Credit

Announcement 80-3

Forms 4970 and 1116 have been revised in order to provide a year designation (1979). Previously, both forms were revised only periodically. They will now be revised each year.

Form 1116 was also revised to eliminate the need for a separate Form 1116 if income from sources within U.S. possessions is received in addition to foreign source income.

The Form 4970 (Revised October 1978) and Form 1116 (Revised November 1978) should not be used for tax years beginning in 1979.

Both new forms are now available in Service offices.

Grantors and contributors may thereafter rely upon such ruling or determination letter as provided in section 1.509(a)-7 of the Income Tax Regulations. It is not the practice of the Service to announce such revised classification of foundation status in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

Announcment 80-5

Form 3115, Application for Change in Accounting Method, has been revised to provide faster and more efficient processing of applications. The revised Form 3115 can be identified by the legend "(Rev. Nov. 1979)" in the upper left corner. Applications filed after January 31, 1980, should be made on the new form.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants and Enrolled Agents from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, or enrolled agent in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants and enrolled agents are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants and enrolled agents to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
Richard O. Bertoli	Sparkhill, NY	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective November 2, 1979
Slathern E. Gassiott	Port Arthur, TX	Certified Public Accountant	Thirty months effective November 19, 1979
Leonard M. Bernes	Atlanta, GA	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective December 5, 1979

Statement of such views, arguments or suggestions should be submitted in writing, preferably six copies, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T, Washington, D.C. 20224.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Rev. Rul. 80-17, page 5.
Losses; foreign confiscation of property; resident alien. A citizen of a foreign country left that country under a limited exit visa to become a U.S. resident, leaving behind assets of a personal service business and corporate stock. The policy of the foreign country was to prevent those leaving on such a visa from receiving or enjoying property left there. Upon failure to return at the visa's expiration, the foreign citizen's property was confiscated under the foreign country's law. The foreign citizen's enjoyment of ownership rights (including the right to receive income from the property) terminated on departure from that country prior to becoming a U.S. resident, and no loss deduction is allowable. Rev. Ruls. 62-197 and 64-149 distinguished.

Rev. Rul. 80-18, page 7.
Contracts; long-term; engineering services. A taxpayer providing engineering services is not entitled to adopt or use either the completed contract or percentage of completion method of accounting.

Rev. Rul. 80-19, page 9.
Farmer; Commodity Credit Corporation loan; wheat pledged as collateral. A cash method wheat farmer obtained a loan from the Commodity Credit Corporation pledging that year's crop as collateral. The farmer elected under section 77 of the Code to include the loan proceeds in gross income. The next year the loan was repaid and the crop pledged as collateral was redeemed. Thirteen months later the redeemed crop was sold at a price that exceeded the amount of the loan. The crop was not a capital asset, and the excess sale price for the crop over its basis, as adjusted under section 1016(a)(8), is includible in the farmer's gross income as ordinary income.

Rev. Rul. 80-22, page 15.
Information returns; hail crop insurance proceeds. A mutual casualty insurance company is not required to file an information return to report hail crop insurance proceeds paid to a farmer if the farmer is required to capitalize expenses pursuant to section 278 or 477 of the Code and has informed the company that the expenses have been capitalized; Rev. Rul. 78-110 clarified.

Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue Rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the entire state of facts involved. In those that are based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and confidential information are deleted to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on Subpart A, Tax Conventions and related Treasury Decisions and Revenue Rulings; Subpart B, Legislation and related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical Indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

the year, to take the employee's share of the current year's profits in cash, on a deferred basis, or half cash and half deferred. The plan was amended, effective for 1980, so that deferred employer contributions are held in accounts subject to the restrictions on distributions and forfeitability required by section 401(k)(2)(B) and (C) of the Code, but amounts attributable to contributions made for plan years beginning before 1980 are maintained in separate accounts that are not subject to such restrictions. The plan will be considered to include a "qualified cash or deferred arrangement" within the meaning of section 401(k)(2). Rev. Ruls. 56-497, 63-180, and 68-89 obsoleted.

26 CFR 1.61-4: Gross income of farmers.

Whether sale of a wheat crop that was redeemed after being pledged as collateral for a Commodity Credit Croporation loan was a sale of a capital asset. See Rev. Rul. 80-19, page 9.

Section 77.—Commodity Credit Loans

26 CFR 1.77-1: Election to consider Commodity Credit Corporation loans as income.

Section 165.—Losses

26 CFR 1.165-1: Losses.
(Also Sections 871, 873; 1.871-1.)

Losses; foreign confiscation of property; resident alien. A citizen of a foreign country left that country under a limited exit visa to become a U.S. resident, leaving behind assets of a personal service business and corporate stock. The policy of the foreign country was to prevent those leaving on such a visa from receiving or enjoying property left there. Upon failure to return at the visa's expiration, the foreign citizen's property was confiscated under the foreign country's law. The foreign citizen's enjoyment of ownership rights (including the right to receive income from the property) terminated on departure from that country prior to becoming a U.S. resident, and no loss deduction is allowable. Rev. Ruls. 62-197 and 64-149 distinguished.

Rev. Rul. 80-17

ISSUE

Is a resident alien allowed an income tax deduction under section 165 of the Internal Revenue Code as a result of a confiscation of property by a foreign government under the circumstances described below?

The taxpayer, A, is a citizen of foreign country X. A decided to leave X to become a resident of the United States, in order to escape the political conditions existing in X. On May 31, 1978, A left X under a limited exit visa. There was little likelihood that the political conditions in X would change to satisfy A during the period of the exit visa.

X maintains strict control over persons and property leaving and entering its territory. When A departed, A left behind in X property consisting of the assets of a personal service business and stock of a corporation incorporated in X. The law of X provided that any citizen who had not returned to X at the expiration of a limited exit visa would be considered to have abandoned X, and the property of such citizen would be considered nationalized. Although the statutes of X were silent on the subject, it was X's policy to prevent persons out of the country on a limited visa from receiving or otherwise enjoying property or the income from property in X during the period of their absence from X.

On June 1, 1978, A entered the United States and became a resident alien. A did not return to X.

In 1978, after the expiration of A's visa, country X confiscated all of A's property in X.

In the period June 1, 1978, through December 31, 1978, A started and operated a new business in the United States that was unrelated to the property left behind in X. On A's federal income tax return for the 7-month period ending December 31, 1978, A claimed a loss for the 1978 confiscation by X of the property consisting of the assets of the personal service business and the stock.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 165(a) of the Code provides for the deductibility of losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise.

Section 165(c) of the Code provides that the deduction for losses in the case of an individual is limited to (1) losses incurred in a trade or business, (2) losses incurred in any transaction entered into for profit, though not connected with a trade or business, and (3) losses of property not connected with a trade or business if such losses arise from fire, storm, shipwreck, or other casualty, or from theft.

Section 873 of the Code provides that a nonresident alien is allowed the deductions provided by section 165(c) (1) and (2), but only if and to the extent that the deductions are connected with income that is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

Losses sustained through confiscation or seizure of property under the laws of a foreign country are not casualty or theft losses within the meaning of section 165(c)(3) of the Code. See Powers v. Commissioner, 36 T.C. 1191 (1961). Thus, the instant revenue ruling is limited to determining whether the losses are incurred either in a trade or business under section 165(c)(1) or in a transaction entered into for profit under section 165(c)(2).

A was a nonresident alien until A arrived in the United States and A's property in X had no connection with the conduct by A of a trade or business in the United States. Therefore, because of section 873 of the Code, it follows that if A's loss occurred while A was a nonresident alien, A cannot qualify for a loss deduction under section 165(c)(1) or (2).

When A departed from X on May 31, 1978, with the intention of becoming a resident of the United States, A's reason for doing so was to escape the political conditions existing in X. There was little likelihood that these conditions would change during the period of the exit visa. Based on these facts, it may reasonably be inferred that A intended not to return to X to resume operation and control of the property or recover the income before the expiration of A's visa to the United States. Thus, for practical purposes, A's enjoyment of ownership rights in the property in country X terminated at the time A departed from X. Therefore, the loss of A's property occurred before A became a United States resident alien.

However, even if A is considered to have incurred the loss by reason of the confiscation of the property in X, after A became a resident alien of the United States, a deduction for a section 165(c)(1) or (2) loss is still disallowed under A's circumstances.

Allowance of a loss deduction under both section 165(c)(1) and (2) of the Code have been held by various courts to have the common prerequisite that there be a good faith expectation of profit from the business or investment venture that generated the loss. See Mercer v. Commissioner, 376 F.2d 708 (9th Cir. 1967). The courts reason that a loss deduction is allowed under section 165(c)(1) or (2), if the profit, had there been any, would have been taxable. See Heiner v. Tindle, 276 U.S. 582 (1928), VII-2 C.B. 272 (1928). It reasonably follows that no loss deduction is permitted when the facts indicate that there was little likelihood that the profits would have been taxable had the business produced profits instead of losses. The taxpayer's expectation is not material for this determination.

Thus, two requirements exist for a loss deduction under section 165(c)(1) or (2). There must be a good faith expectation of profit. There must also be a likelihood that if there had been profits instead of losses, they would have been taxable by the United States.

Normally, when a nonresident alien individual changes status to that of citizen or resident of the United States, income from the individual's foreign business and investment property will be subject to United States income tax. A, however, could not receive or otherwise enjoy A's property or the income from such property in X unless A gave up United States residency and returned to X before the visa expired. If A did return to X before the visa expired, A would be subject to X's control and the income from A's property would not be subject to United States taxation because A would be a nonresident alien and the income would not be from a source within the United States. See section 1.871-1 of the regulations.

HOLDING

A is not allowed a reduction for the loss of property in X under section 165(c)(1) or (2) of the Code, because the loss occurred while A was a nonresident alien and such a deduction for a nonresident alien is precluded by section 873. Further, A is not allowed a deduction under section 165(c)(1) or (2) of the Code for the confiscation of the property in X in 1978, because if that property had produced profits, those profits would not have been subject to United States income tax.

Rev. Rul. 62-197, 1962-2 C.B. 66, and Rev. Rul. 64-149, 1964-1 (Part I) C.B. 233, which hold that the confiscation of property of United States citizens or residents by foreign governments is a deductible loss, are distinguishable from the instant situation. In the situations described in those revenue rulings the confiscated property had been owned by a United States citizen or resident prior to the existence of any facts indicating that such property or the income therefrom would be confiscated. Therefore, the loss was incurred by a United States citizen or resident, not a nonresident alien. Furthermore, up until shortly before the loss occurred, there was no indication that the income from the property would not have been subject to United States taxation.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 62-197 and Rev. Rul. 64-149 are distinguished.

Section 278.—Capital Expenditures Incurred in Planting and Developing Citrus and Almond Groves; Certain Capital Expenditures of Farming Syndicates

Section 401.—Pension, Profit-Sharing, and Stock Bonus Plans

26 CFR 1.401-1: Qualified pension, profit sharing and stock bonus plans.

Profit-sharing plans; cash or deferred; distribution and forfeitability requirements; change to separate accounts. A corporation's qualified profit-sharing plan requires each employee to make an irrevocable election, prior to the end of the year, to take the employee's share of the current year's profits in cash, on a deferred basis, or half cash and half deferred. The plan was amended, effective for 1980, so that deferred employer contributions are held in accounts subject to the restrictions on distributions and forfeitability required by section 401(k)(2)(B) and (C) of the Code, but amounts attributable to contributions made for plan years beginning before 1980 are maintained in separate accounts that are not subject to such restrictions. The plan will be considered to include a "qualified cash or deferred arrangement" within the meaning of section 401(k)(2). Rev. Ruls. 56-497, 63-180, and 68-89 obsoleted.

Advice has been requested whether a profit-sharing plan includes a "qualified cash or deferred arrangement" within the meaning of section 401(k) of the Internal Revenue Code, under the circumstances described below.

In 1973 the M corporation established a profit-sharing plan and trust that qualified under section 401(a) of the Code. The portion of the company's profits to be shared is allocated among participants in proportion to their annual compensation. Prior to the close of the calendar year, each eligible employee is required to make an irrevocable election whether to take the employee's share of the current year's profits (1) in cash, (2) at a future date under the terms of the profit-sharing plan, or (3) one-half in cash and one-half deferred. After the close of the year, a cash payment is made to all employee participants who elect to receive cash, and the balance is contributed to the trust for the benefit of employee participants who elect to have their shares deferred.

[1] Also released as News Release, IR-2191, dated December 28, 1979.

The M corporation amended the plan effective for 1980. Under the plan, as amended, amounts accumulated by the trust which are attributable to or derived from employer contributions made for plan years beginning after December 31, 1979, and which are attributable to the employee's election described above are held in accounts subject to the restrictions on distributions and forfeitability required by section 401(k)(2)(B) and (C) of the Code. However, the amended plan provides that amounts attributable to contributions made for plan years beginning before January 1, 1980, are maintained in separate accounts which are not subject to the restrictions of section 401(k)(2)(B) and (C).

Section 401(k) of the Code, effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 1979, provides certain special rules for a qualified profit-sharing plan that contains a "qualified cash or deferred arrangement". To be a "qualified cash or deferred arrangement" under section 401(k)(2), such an arrangement must, in accordance with section 401(k)(2)(A), provide an election for covered employees to have the employer make payments as contributions either to the trust or directly to the employee in cash, and contain the restrictions on distributions and forfeitability enumerated in section 401(k)(2)(B) and (C).

For plan years beginning after 1979, a profit-sharing plan and trust containing a cash or deferred arrangement will not be required to impose the restrictions of section 401(k)(2)(B) and (C) of the Code on any participant's separate account that is attributable to plan years beginning before 1980 in order to satisfy the requirements of section 401(k).

In this case the plan contains an arrangement that satisfies the requirements of section 401(k)(2)(A). Further, it satisfies section 401(k)(2)(B) and (C) because the amounts attributable to pre-1980 contributions which are not subject to the restrictions of section 401(k)(2)(B) and (C) are held in separate accounts.

Accordingly, this profit-sharing plan includes a "qualified cash or deferred arrangement" within the meaning of section 401(k)(2) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 56-497, 1956-2 C.B. 284, held that a cash or deferred profit-sharing arrangement could qualify as a profit-sharing trust under section 401(a) of the Code. Rev. Rul. 63-180, 1963-2 C.B. 189, and Rev. Rul. 68-89, 1968-1 C.B. 402 provided guidelines as to the income tax and estate tax treatment of cash or deferred profit-sharing plans.

In view of the enactment of section 401(k) of the Code, Rev. Rul. 56-497, Rev. Rul. 63-180, and Rev. Rul. 68-89 are obsoleted for plan years beginning after December 31, 1979.

Section 446.—General Rule for Methods of Accounting

Section 451.—General Rule for Taxable Year of Inclusion

26 CFR 1.451-3: Long-term contracts. (Also Section 446; 1.446-1.)

Contracts; long-term; engineering services. A taxpayer providing engineering services is not entitled to adopt or use either the completed contract or percentage of completion method of accounting.

Rev. Rul. 80-18

ISSUE

Is a taxpayer that is engaged in providing engineering services entitled to adopt or use either the completed contract or the percentage of completion method of accounting provided under section 1.451-3 of the Income Tax Regulations in reporting its income?

FACTS

The taxpayer is engaged in the business of providing engineering and related services and has entered into a contract with a foreign government that provides for payment on an agreed fixed rate basis. The contract was not completed in the taxable year in which it was entered into, and the method of payment to the taxpayer is an amount based on a fixed-rate per person-month. This amount was negotiated for each type of employee needed by the taxpayer to perform under the contract. This negotiated fixed rate included the taxpayer's labor cost, overhead, and profit. During the life of the contract the taxpayer billed the foreign government at the negotiated fixed rate for labor performed, subject to a specified overall limitation as to the total amount which can be billed on the contract.

The services required of the taxpayer under this contract were divided into three categories: pre-design operations, design services, and supervision of the construction. The pre-design operations included drilling operations, soil sampling and testing, aerial photogrammetric operations, and oceanographic operations. The supervision of construction on this contract included training and supervision of the contractors who perform the actual construction on the projects. The allocation by the taxpayer of the total contract price to be paid between these three categories of services was approximately as follows: 15 percent for pre-design, 35 percent for design, and 50 percent for supervision of construction.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 451 of the Internal Revenue Code provides that the amount of any item of gross income shall be included in gross income for the taxable year in which received by the taxpayer, unless, under the method of accounting used in computing taxable income, such amount is to be properly accounted for in a different period.

Section 1.446-1(a)(2) provides that no uniform method of accounting can be prescribed for all taxpayers and that each taxpayer shall adopt such forms and systems as are, in the taxpayer's judgment, best suited to the taxpayer's needs. However, no method of accounting is acceptable unless, in the opinion of the Commissioner, it clearly reflects income.

Section 1.451-3(a)(1) of the regulations provides that income from a long-term contract may be included in gross income in accordance with one of the two long-term contract methods, namely, the percentage of completion method or the completed contract method.

Section 1.451-3(b)(1)(i) of the regulations provides that the term "long-term contract" means a building, installation, construction or manufacturing contract which is not completed within the taxable year in which it is entered into.

Rev. Rul. 70-67, 1970-1 C.B. 117, holds that an architect is not entitled to report income on the completed contract method. The basis of this ruling is that the architect's contracts do not qualify as long-term contracts because an architect does not build or construct anything, but simply draws the plan and supervises the work of construction. Rev. Rul. 70-67 also explains that one of the reasons why permission to report on a completed contract basis is given in the case of building, installation, and construction contracts is the fact that there are changes in the price of articles to be used, losses and increased cost due to strikes, weather, etc., penalties for delay, and unexpected difficulties in laying foundations which makes it impossible for any construction contractor, no matter how carefully the contractor may estimate, to tell with any certainty whether the contractor has derived a gain or sustained a loss until a particular contract is completed. This situation, however, does not apply to the taxpayer in the instant case. The taxpayer is not affected by the foregoing problems affecting the contractor.

The services which the taxpayer in the present situation performs under its contract are primarily engineering services and supervision of construction. Like the architect's services in Rev. Rul. 70-67, the contract the taxpayer entered into did not require the taxpayer to actually construct or build anything even though the taxpayer's services are functionally related to activities which may be the subject of long-term contracts as defined in section 1.451-3(b)(1)(i) of the regulations.

HOLDING

The taxpayer's engineering contract does not qualify as a long-term contract within the meaning of section 1.451-3(b)(1)(i) of the regulations, and the taxpayer is not entitled to adopt or use either the completed contract or percentage of completion method provided under section 1.451-3.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Capital loss carryovers for regulated investment companies

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to the allowable period to which a regulated investment company must carry forward a net capital loss. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1]. The regulations provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with these changes.

DATES: The amendment pertaining to the extension of the capital loss carryover period for regulated investment companies is effective for taxable years ending after December 31, 1969. The amendment pertaining to the term "capital gain net income" is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On July 6, 1979, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 1212 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (44 FR 39476). These amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to sections 1403 and 1901(b)(33)(O) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1733, 1802). No comments were received with respect to the proposed amendments, and no public hearing was requested or held. The proposed amendments are adopted by this Treasury decision without change.

EXPLANATION

The Tax Reform Act of 1976 amends section 1212(a) of the Internal Revenue Code by increasing the 5-year carryover period allowed for net capital losses sustained by corporations to 8 years for regulated investment companies, as defined in section 851. The amendments adopted by this Treasury decision make it clear that regulated investment companies have a maximum of 9 years in which to deduct their capital losses. This specified 9-year period must be reduced under certain prescribed conditions.

The Tax Reform Act substituted the term "capital gain net income" for the term "net capital gain". The proposed amendments conform the regulations under section 1212 to this change in terminology.

The final regulations adopted by this Treasury decision impose no new reporting or recordkeeping requirements. The principal effect of the final regulations is to conform existing regulations under section 1212 of the Code to changes made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976. Evaluation of the effectiveness of these regulations after issuance will be based upon comments received from offices within Treasury and the Internal Revenue Service, other governmental agencies, and the public.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Kent J. Schreiner of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. Section 1.1212 and the historical note are deleted.

Par. 2. Paragraph (a) of §1.1212-1 is amended by striking out "net capital gain(s)" each place it appears in subparagraphs (2)(i) and (3)(ii) and (iii) and inserting in lieu thereof "capital gain net income (net capital gain(s) for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1977)", and by adding subdivision (g) to subparagraph (3)(iii). The added provision reads as follows:

§ 1.1212-1 Capital loss carryovers and carrybacks.

(a) Corporations; other taxpayers for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1964. * * *

(3) Regular net capital loss sustained by a corporation for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1969. * * *

(iii) Special rules. * * *

(g) A regulated investment company (as defined in section 851) sustaining a net capital loss shall carry over that loss to each of the 8 taxable years succeeding the loss year. However, the 8-year period prescribed in the preceding sentence shall be reduced (but not to less than 5 years) by the sum of (1) the number of taxable years to which the net capital loss must be carried back pursuant to subdivision (i)(a) of this subparagraph (as limited by subdivision (iii)(e) of this subparagraph) and (2) the number of taxable years, of the 8 taxable years succeeding the loss year, that the corporation failed to qualify as a regulated investment company as defined in section 851. This subdivision shall not extend the carryover period prescribed in subdivision (i)(b) of this subparagraph to a year in which a corporation is not a regulated investment company as defined in section 851.

Section 1221 —Capital Asset Defined

26 CFR 1.1221-1: Meaning of terms.
(Also Sections 61, 77, 1016; 1.61-4, 1.77-1, 1.1016-5.)

Farmer; Commodity Credit Corporation loan; wheat pledged as collateral. A cash method wheat farmer obtained a loan from the Commodity Credit Corporation pledging that year's crop as collateral. The farmer elected under section 77 of the Code to include the loan proceeds in gross income. The next year the loan was repaid and the crop pledged as collateral was redeemed. Thirteen months later the redeemed crop was sold at a price that exceeded the amount of the loan. The crop was not a capital asset, and the excess sale price for the crop over its basis, as adjusted under section 1016(a)(8), is includible in the farmer's gross income as ordinary income.

Rev. Rul. 80-19

ISSUE

If a farmer pledges wheat as collateral for a loan from the Commodity Credit Corporation and elects, under section 77 of the Internal Revenue Code, to include the loan proceeds in gross income, is the wheat a capital asset of the farmer when it is redeemed by repayment of the loan?

FACTS

The taxpayer is a wheat farmer who uses the cash method of accounting.

In 1976, the taxpayer obtained a loan from the Commodity Credit Corporation, pledging the 1976 crop as collateral. The taxpayer elected section 77 of the Code to include the loan proceeds in gross income for 1976. The taxpayer had not previously elected to apply section 77.

The taxpayer repaid the loan in 1977, and redeemed the wheat that was pledged as collateral. Prior to the redemption, the taxpayer had no basis in the wheat. Thirteen months later, in 1978, the redeemed wheat was sold at a price that exceeded the amount of the loan.

Aside from the fact that the 1976 crop was pledged as collateral and subsequently redeemed in connection with the Commodity Credit Corporation loan, the circumstances show that the crop was primarily held by the taxpayer for sale in the ordinary course of business.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1.61-4(a) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that a farmer using the cash method of accounting shall include in gross income the amount received from the sale of livestock and produce raised by the farmer. Section 1.61-4(a) also provides that profits from the sale of livestock or other items which were purchased by a farmer is ascertained by subtracting the cost from the sale price in the year the sale is made.

Under section 77 of the Code, a taxpayer who has obtained a crop loan from the Commodity Credit Corporation may elect to include the loan proceeds in gross income in the taxable year in which the loan is made.

Section 1016(a)(8) of the Code and section 1.1016-5(e) of the regulations require that the basis of property pledged to the Commodity Credit Corporation as collateral for a loan be increased by the amount of the loan proceeds, if the proceeds were included in gross income in the year received pursuant to an election under section 77.

The Senate Finance Committee report for the predecessor of section 77 of the Code states that loans by the Commodity Credit Corporation on agricultural commodities "should be treated for income-tax purposes as though such commodities had been sold in the year of the loan for the amount of the loan." S. Rep. No. 648, 76th Cong., 1st Sess. 8 (1939), 1939-2 C.B. 524, 529.

Therefore, if an election is made under section 77 of the Code, the crop is treated as being sold when it is pledged as collateral for the loan and it is treated as being repurchased when it is redeemed by repayment of the loan. United States v. Isaak, 400 F.2d 869 (9th Cir. 1968).

Under section 1221 of the Code, property held by a taxpayer is a capital asset unless it is described in paragraphs (1) through (6) of section 1221. Under paragraph (1), property that is "held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business" is not a capital asset. The determination of whether property is held primarily for sale in the ordinary course of business is a factual problem that must be resolved on a case-by-case basis. Gamble v. Commissioner, 242 F.2d 586 (5th Cir. 1957).

In the present case, the taxpayer redeemed the 1976 wheat crop by repaying the Commodity Credit Corporation loan. In view of the Senate Finance Committee report and the Isaak case, the crop redemption must be treated as a purchase for income tax purposes because the taxpayer elected under section 77 of the Code to include the loan proceeds in gross income for 1976. The taxpayer's basis in the crop after the redemption was equal to the loan amount, under section 1016(a)(8).

Application of section 77 of the Code does not determine whether the repurchased wheat is a capital asset in the hands of the taxpayer. The taxpayer's 1976 wheat crop thus continued to be held primarily for sale in the ordinary course of business, as described in section 1221(1), even though the taxpayer's election to apply section 77 and to redeem the crop requires the redemption to be treated as a repurchase.

HOLDING

The taxpayer's 1976 wheat crop was not a capital asset in the hands of the taxpayer. The excess of the 1978 sale price for the wheat over its basis, as adjusted pursuant to section 1016(a)(8), is includible in the taxpayer's gross income for 1978 as ordinary income.

Section 4041.—Imposition of Tax [Special Fuels]

26 CFR 48.4041-13: Tax-free retail sales to certain nonprofit educational organizations.
(Also Sections 4221, 4253; 48.4221-6.)

Exemption; educational organization; vocational rehabilitation center. A nonprofit corporation operates a vocational rehabilitation center for handicapped individuals that provides classroom training, on-the-job training and employment in its sheltered workshops and retail stores, and related services. Neither the corporation nor its workshops, retail stores, and related services qualify as nonprofit educational organizations under sections 4041(g)(4), 4221(a)(5), and 4253(j) of the Code. However, the classroom training program, including instruction given in the workshops as part of the program, does qualify. Rev. Rul. 64-264 clarified and superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-20

Advice has been requested whether sales of taxable fuels and articles to, and amounts paid for communication services furnished to, the nonprofit corporation described below come within the federal excise tax exemptions for a nonprofit educational organization under sections 4041(g)(4), 4221(a)(5), and 4253(j) of the Internal Revenue Code.

The nonprofit corporation is primarily a vocational rehabilitation center that provides employment and on-the-job training in a sheltered workshop and in a retail store renovating and selling household goods and clothing and providing services. The center provides classroom training, personal counseling, vocational evaluation, medical treatment, and unemployment placement services.

The center conducts a classroom training program that consists of regularly scheduled classes taught by a staff of qualified instructors on a year-round basis. Instruction is provided to regularly enrolled student/trainees in subjects such as merchandising, welding, shoe repair, carpentry, elementary

English, writing, and arithmetic. Classes for blind student/trainees include instruction in Braille, use of a cane, sewing, shopping and handling money. Classes such as welding and carpentry, although part of the classroom training program, are conducted in a workshop setting rather than in the classroom. Class programs vary from three to nine months depending upon the student's level of competence.

When the unemployed handicapped individuals complete their classroom training program, they are placed in the sheltered workshops or retail stores where they receive on-the-job instruction and training. After completing such training, they continue to work in the shops or stores along with other workers while awaiting outside employment for which they have been trained. If they are unable to obtain outside employment, they remain in the workshops or stores as permanent employees. During the course of their regular employment, persons in the workshops and stores are periodically instructed further by their supervisors in areas relating to their job skills and efficiency.

The corporation is exempt from federal income tax under section 501 (a) of the Code as an organization described in section 501(c)(3).

Section 4041(g)(4) of the Code provides that under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, no retailers excise tax shall be imposed with respect to the sale of any taxable liquid to a nonprofit educational organization for its exclusive use, or with respect to the use by a nonprofit educational organization of any liquid as a fuel.

Section 4221(a)(5) of the Code provides that under regulations prescribed by the Secretary no manufacturers excise tax shall be imposed with respect to the sale by the manufacturer of a taxable article to a nonprofit educational organization for its exclusive use.

Section 4253(j) of the Code provides that, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary no tax shall be imposed under section 4251 on any amount paid by a nonprofit educational organization for communications services or facilities furnished to such organization.

Under the provisions of sections 4041(g), 4221(d)(5), and 4253(j) of the Code, the term "nonprofit educational organization" means an educational organization described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) that is exempt from income tax under section 501(a), and also includes a school operated as an activity of an organization described in section 501(c)(3) that is exempt from income tax under section 501(a), if such school normally maintains a regular faculty and curriculum and normally has a regularly enrolled body of pupils or students in attendance at the place where its educational activities are regularly carried on.

Section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) describes an educational organization as an organization that normally maintains a regular faculty and curriculum and normally has a regularly enrolled body of pupils or students in attendance at the place where its educational activities are regularly carried on. In addition, under the provisions of section 1.170A-9(b)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations, pertaining to section 170 (b)(1)(A)(ii), and sections 48.4041-13(b) and 48.4221-6(b) of the Excise Tax Regulations pertaining to Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Taxes, respectively, such nonprofit organization must have as its primary function the presentation of formal instruction. Moreover, such nonprofit organizations do not include an organization engaged in both educational and noneducational activities unless the latter are merely incidental to the educational activities.

Rev. Rul. 64-264, 1964-2 C.B. 438, describes a training and rehabilitation program for handicapped persons operated by a nonprofit organization. The program, which is referred to as a "training school," consists of courses in driver training, salesmanship, woodworking, small appliance repairing, typewriter repairing, upholstering, use of prosthesis, and speech therapy. Also, elementary subjects, such as reading, writing, and arithmetic, are taught to certain individual participants in the program who have been unable to attend public schools. Usually, the latter courses are necessary to prepare such individuals for the vocational-type course.

The training school is operated approximately 250 days each year, and enrollment therein is usually for a period of three years. A regular staff of instructors is maintained for the training school. In conjunction with the training school, the organization operates a store and a lodging home for persons receiving training in the store.

Rev. Rul. 64-264 concludes that the training school meets the prescribed requirement of normally maintaining a regular faculty and curriculum and normally having a regularly enrolled body of pupils or students and, therefore, is a nonprofit educational organization exempt from the manufacturers excise tax under section 4221 (a)(5) of the Code. Consequently, articles sold by the manufacturer to the organization for the exclusive use of the training school are concluded to be exempt. While not specifically stated in that revenue ruling, articles sold to the organization for the use of the retail store and lodging home are not exempt.

In this case, as in Rev. Rul. 64-264, the primary function of the organization is not the presentation of formal instruction but, rather, the operation of a vocational rehabilitation center involving employment, educational, and social service activities. The fact that the center provides classroom training services and maintains an on-the-job training program in its workshops and stores is insufficient, in itself, to bring the corporation's primary purpose within the scope of sections 1.170A-9(b)(1), 48.4041-13(b) and 48.4221-6(b) of the regulations.

In addition, while the on-the-job training program described above is educational in nature, it does not have a regular faculty and curriculum, and an enrolled student body in attendance. The shop and store activities are not formal instruction.

Accordingly, neither the corporation nor its workshops and retail stores meet the prescribed requirements to qualify as nonprofit educational organizations as that term is used in sections 4041(g), 4221(a)(5), and 4253 (j) of the Code. Nor would the personal counseling, vocational evaluation, medical treatment, and employment placement services meet the prescribed requirements as they are services that relate to the corporation's overall rehabilitation functions.

However, the classroom training program of the center is an educational activity that meets the requirements of the statute and regulations in that its primary purpose is the presentation of formal instruction, and it has a curriculum and a regularly enrolled student body in attendance at a designated place where instruction is normally provided by a regular faculty at regular sessions. Therefore, the classroom training program is a school operated as an activity of an exempt organization so as to be a nonprofit educational organization within the meaning of the statute. Furthermore, any instruction given in the shops (such as welding, woodworking, or shoe repair) that is part of the classroom training program would be included in the school activity for purposes of the excise tax exemptions.

Accordingly, the exemptions from the special fuels taxes and the manufacturers excise taxes provided by sections 4041(g)(4) and 4221(a)(5) of the Code, and the exemption from the communications taxes provided by section 4253(j), apply to sales of taxable articles, or communication services furnished to the corporation for the exclusive use of its school. See Rev. Rul. 75-314, 1975-2 C.B. 442, for an example of the application of the communications tax exemption in the case of a school operated as an activity of an exempt organization.

Rev. Rul. 64-264 is clarified and superseded.

Exemption; educational organization; wilderness camping program for adolescents. A nonprofit corporation that operates a wilderness camping program to rehabilitate and provide counseling to adolescents who have emotional and behavioral problems is not a nonprofit educational organization for purposes of sections 4041(g)(4) and 4221(a)(5) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-21

ISSUE

Whether the organization described below is a "nonprofit educational organization" for purposes of the exemptions from the special fuels excise taxes and the manufacturers excise taxes provided by sections 4041(g)(4) and 4221(a)(5), respectively, of the Internal Revenue Code.

FACTS

A nonprofit corporation, formed for educational and charitable purposes, operates a wilderness camping program to rehabilitate adolescents having various emotional and behavioral problems. Such problems include poor self image, excessive aggression, drug experimentation, inability to relate to peers or adults, and the inability to face or solve problems in general.

The adolescents are referred to the organization by the local public school district, social service agencies, juvenile authorities and various religious organizations.

The organization's program, operated 10 months a year, provides supervised 26 day hiking and camping trips through wilderness areas. Each trip is attended by 10 or more adolescents, and is conducted by three of the organization's counselors. The counselors are selected for their maturity and ability to relate to adolescents, previous work experience, and their academic credentials in the social sciences and mental health fields. Some counselors are certified teachers with degrees in education, psychology or sociology.

The organization's program is designed to develop self confidence, and positive attitudes through group living in a survival atmosphere. It consists of daily demonstrations, and practical exercises in coping, adjustment, and problem solving skills or capabilities necessary for survival in a wilderness setting. In addition, the adolescents participate in informal group counseling sessions and are instructed in the necessary hiking and camping skills for wilderness terrain.

The organization is exempt from income tax under section 501(a) of the Code as an organization described in section 501(c)(3).

LAW AND REGULATIONS

Under sections 4041(g)(4) and 4221(a)(5) of the Code, exemptions from the retailers and manufacturers excise taxes are provided for fuels and articles sold to a nonprofit educational organization for its exclusive use.

Under the provisions of sections 4041(g) and 4221(d)(5) of the Code, the term "nonprofit educational organization" means an educational organization described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) that is exempt from income tax under section 501(a). Section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) describes an educational organization as an organization that normally maintains a regular faculty and curriculum and normally has a regularly enrolled body of pupils or students in attendance at the place where its educational activities are regularly carried on. Section 1.170A-9(b)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that such nonprofit educational organization must have as its primary function the presentation of formal instruction.

The fact that an organization may have been granted exemption from federal income tax as an organization described in section 501(c)(3) of the Code does not, of itself, determine the applicability of the exemptions from the aforementioned excise taxes. In order for these exemptions to apply, the organization must meet the prescribed requirements of section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) and the regulations as a "nonprofit educational organization."

In this case, the organization's primary function is the rehabilitation of adolescents who have behavioral problems and the counseling of those adolescents through peer group encounter sessions and counselor intervention. There is no formal education in the instructive sense and there is no purposeful effort at a systematic and detailed transfer of knowledge. Therefore, the organization does not provide a curriculum. See Rev. Rul. 62-23, 1962-1 C.B. 200, superseded by Rev. Rul. 79-167, 1979-2 C.B. 335, which holds that diffuse instruction in a variety of fields does not constitute a curriculum.

HOLDING

Since the organization's primary purpose is not the presentation of formal instruction and since its program is not a curriculum within the meaning of the statute, the organization is not a "nonprofit educational organization." Accordingly, the organization does not come within the exemptions from the special fuels and manufacturers excise taxes.

T.D. 7658[1]

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER D, PART 48.—MANUFACTURERS AND RETAILERS EXCISE TAXES

Exemption from Motor Fuels Excise Taxes for Certain Alcohol Fuels

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to the exemption from motor fuels excise taxes for certain alcohol fuels. Changes in the applicable tax law were made by the Energy Tax Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-618, 1979-3 C.B. (Vol. 2) 1]. These regulations affect certain producers and sellers of motor fuels and provide them with the guidance needed to comply with the law.

EFFECTIVE DATE: These regulations apply generally to sales after December 31, 1978, and prior to October 1, 1984.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

BACKGROUND

On June 19, 1979, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Excise Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 138) under sections 4041 (k) and 4081(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (Code) (44 FR 35247). The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 221 of the Energy Tax Act of 1978 (Pub. L. 95-618, 92 Stat. 3185). No public hearing was held.

Two written comments were received. One of the comments dealt with the lack of a refund or credit when taxpaid gasoline is sold for use in producing gasohol. Since the Code does not provide for a refund or credit in such a situation, no change in the regulation could be made. The second comment contained six recommendations relating to the proposed rules for qualifying as a producer of gasohol and the recordkeeping requirements. After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed regulations, no substantive changes have been made to the proposed regulations.

The effectiveness of these regulations after issuance will be evaluated on the basis of comments received from offices within Treasury and the Internal Revenue Service, other governmental agencies, and the public.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Robert H. Waltuch of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

§ 48.4041-14 Fuels containing alcohol.

(a) In general. Under section 4041 (k) the tax imposed under section 4041 does not apply to the sale or use of any liquid fuel at least 10 percent of which consists of alcohol. Except where a different rule has been expressly provided, purchasers and sellers of liquids under section 4041(k) are subject to the same requirements and limitations as are imposed on purchasers and sellers of gasoline under section 4081(c). See § 48.4081-2.

(b) Refunds relating to diesel, special motor, and noncommercial aviation fuels. If a producer (as defined in paragraph (b) of § 48.4081-2) buys diesel, special motor, or noncommercial aviation fuels tax paid and uses the fuel in producing exempt gasohol, then the refund provision in section 6427 and the regulations under that section apply.

(c) Effective date. Section 4041(k) (relating to fuels other than gasoline) applies to sales or use after December 31, 1978, and before October 1, 1984. If the special fuels have been blended into gasohol and have been put into the tank of a vehicle prior to January 1, 1979, the fuels are considered used prior to that date.

§ 48.4081-2. Gasoline mixed with alcohol.

(a) In general. Under § 4081(c) the tax imposed by section 4081 on the sale of gasoline does not apply to the sale of qualifying gasohol or to the sale of gasoline for the purpose of producing qualifying gasohol if the requirements of this section are met. Qualifying gasohol is referred to in this section as gasohol. Gasohol is a blend of gasoline and alcohol (whether domestic or imported alcohol) in a mixture at least 10 percent of which contains alcohol made from any product other than petroleum, natural gas, or coal. In determining whether the 10 percent alcohol requirement has been met, alcohol that is 95 or more percent pure (190 degrees or more of proof) will be considered pure if no part of the impurity is gasoline.

To the extent that the alcohol is less than 95 percent pure or to the extent that any part of the impurity is gasoline, a corresponding increase in the amount of alcohol is required to meet the 10 percent requirement. For certain requirements imposed on producers of alcohol (ethanol) under chapter 51 of the Code relating to distilled spirits, see 27 CFR Part 201. For certain requirements imposed on purchasers of specially denatured alcohol (ethanol), see 27 CFR Part 211.

(b) Sale of gasoline to produce gasohol. Under section 4081(c) the sale of gasoline for the purpose of producing gasohol is not exempt unless the sale is in bulk quantities for delivery into a bulk storage tank of a producer who meets the requirements of this section. For purposes of section 4081 (c), the term "producer" means any person who in the ordinary course of its trade or business regularly buys gasoline and alcohol in bulk quantities for blending for use in its trade or business or for resale. Thus, the mere purchase of gasoline for blending into gasohol does not qualify a person as a producer. A person is not a producer for purposes of section 4082 merely because such a person is a producer of gasohol as defined in this section. Thus, the provisions of section 4083 (relating to certain exempt sales to producers) do not necessarily apply.

(c) Requirement for gasohol producers purchasing tax free—(1) Certificate of Registry. A person qualifying as a producer who wishes to purchase gasoline tax free for the purpose of producing gasohol must be registered with the district director for the district in which its principal place of business is located, unless exempt from registration requirements under section 4222(b). A person registers, if not previously registered, by completing and filing Form 637, Registration for Tax-Free Transactions Under Chapter 32 of the Internal Revenue Code, in duplicate, in accordance with its instructions. Copies of Form 637 may be obtained from any district director. Upon approval a registry number is assigned and a Certificate of Registry is issued. At the time of purchase, a registered producer must furnish to the seller in writing its registry number together with its signed statement of the exempt purpose of the purchase. Persons not required to be registered under section 4222(b) may purchase tax free by following the procedure that applies to them in the case of other tax-free sales. See § 48.4222 (b)-1.

(2) Revocation or suspension of registration. The district director is authorized to revoke or temporarily suspend, upon written notice, the registration of any person and the right of such a person to purchase gasoline tax free under section 4081(c) in any case in which the district director finds that—

(i) the registrant is not a bona fide producer of gasohol;

(ii) the registrant failed to comply with the requirements of paragraph (c)(1) of this section, relating to the evidence required to support a tax-free sale;

(iii) the registrant has used its registration to avoid the payment of any tax imposed by chapter 31 or 32 of the Code, or to postpone or interfere in any manner with the collection of such a tax;

(iv) the revocation or suspension is necessary to protect the revenue; or

(v) the registrant is for some other reason not eligible under this section to retain a Certificate of Registry.

The revocation or suspension of registration is in addition to any other penalty that may apply under the law for any act or failure to act.

(d) Seller not relieved of liability in certain cases. The seller of the gasoline remains liable for the tax imposed under section 4081 if at the time of the sale the seller of the gasoline has reason to believe that all the gasoline sold by it to the purchaser is not intended for blending into gasohol or that the purchaser has failed to register or that its registration has been revoked or suspended.

(e) Special rules—(1) Limitation on tax-free sales. The exemption from the excise tax under section 4081(c) applies to the sale of gasoline only for use in producing gasohol. Therefore, unless the sale is exempt under another provision of the Code, the seller of the gasoline may sell tax free only that portion of the gasoline that is intended for use in producing gasohol.

(2) Credit sales to exempt users. Under section 6416 of the Code, the producer of gasoline is entitled to a refund or credit if tax-paid gasoline is ultimately sold to tax-exempt users in a case to which section 6416(b)(2) (A), (B), (C), (D), or (H) applies. To determine the amount of overpayment, the producer of gasoline, among other things, must be able to establish the amount of tax-paid gasoline that was sold by the ultimate vendor to tax-exempt users. Therefore, if the ultimate vendor sells both tax-paid gasoline and gasohol on credit and the sales of the two kinds of fuels are not clearly distinguished, the producer of the gasoline will not be entitled to a credit or refund with respect to the tax-paid gasoline if it can not establish the amount of the tax-paid gasoline sold by the ultimate vendor to tax-exempt users.

(f) Refunds and credits—(1) Gasoline. Except as provided in paragraph (f)(2) of this section, there is no provision in the Code that allows a refund or credit with respect to tax-paid gasoline used in producing gasohol.

(2) Mixture of gasoline and alcohol containing more than 40 percent alcohol. If a purchaser buys gasoline tax paid for blending a mixture of gasoline and alcohol containing more than 40 percent alcohol, that mixture will be treated as a special fuel under section 4041 and the refund provisions in section 6416 and the regulations under that section apply.

(g) Later separation and failure to blend—(1) Gasoline. If any person fails to blend gasoline purchased tax free under section 4081(c) with alcohol to make gasohol, or later separates the tax-free gasoline from the alcohol, that person is treated as a producer of gasoline as defined in section 4082 and the provisions of section 4081 relating to the sale of gasoline by a producer apply. If gasoline has been purchased tax free for the purpose of producing gasohol in excess of the amount of gasoline that the purchaser is able to establish has actually been used to produce gasohol by the records required under paragraph (h)(3) of this section, the purchaser is treated as having failed to blend the excess gasoline, and the provisions of this paragraph apply. In such a case, any of the excess gasoline that is not in the purchaser's possession is treated as having been disposed of by sale or by a use that is treated as a sale under section 4082(c). See section 7201 for criminal penalties relating to a willful attempt to evade or defeat tax, and sections 6651 and 6653 for additions to tax for failure to file a return or pay tax and for negligence and fraud.

(2) Diesel, special, and noncommercial aviation fuels. If any person separates the diesel, special, or noncommercial aviation fuel purchased tax free under section 4041(k) from the alcohol, the separation is treated as a sale of the fuel for purposes of section 4041.

(h) Information; records—(1) Information to be furnished to purchaser. A producer of gasoline who sells gasoline tax free under section 4081(c) shall indicate to the purchaser that the purchaser is obtaining gasoline tax free for making gasohol. The producer may transmit this information by any convenient means, such as coding of sales invoices, provided that the information is presented with sufficient particularity so that the purchaser is informed that he has obtained the gasoline tax free and the purchaser can compute and remit the tax due if the gasoline is diverted to a taxable use.

(2) Records of seller. Every person who, but for this section, would be liable for the excise tax on the sale of the gasoline, shall maintain in its records—

(i) The identity of the purchaser,

(ii) The written statement required to be given to the seller under paragraph (c) of this section, and

(iii) The quantity of gasoline sold tax free to each purchaser.

(3) Records of producer of gasohol. Any person purchasing gasoline tax free for the purpose of producing gasohol must maintain sufficient records to establish that the gasoline purchased tax free for the purpose of producing gasohol has actually been used for that purpose. Such a person must maintain records sufficient to establish to the satisfaction of the district director that alcohol, of the requisite kind, has actually been obtained by it in a quantity sufficient to have enabled it to have produced the full amount of gasohol that could have been produced from the quantity of gasoline it has acquired tax free for the purpose of producing gasohol.

(i) Effective dates. Section 4081(c) (relating to gasoline mixed with alcohol) applies to sales after December 31, 1978, and before October 1, 1984. Gasoline sold prior to January 1, 1979, and which is blended into gasohol after that date is not exempt from the tax under section 4081(c)of the Code. The recordkeeping requirements under this section apply to sales or uses that occur after July 19, 1979.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in sections 4041(k), 4081(c) (92 Stat. 3185, 26 U.S.C. 4041 & 4081) and section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917, 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Rev. Rul. 80-22

ISSUE

Must a mutual casualty insurance company file a Form 1099-MISC, Statement for Recipient of Miscellaneous Income, to report the payment of hail crop insurance proceeds to a farmer required to capitalize expenses pursuant to either section 278 or 447 of the Internal Revenue Code if the farmer has informed the insurance company that the expenses have been capitalized?

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 6041(a) of the Code requires that all persons engaged in a trade or business and making payment in the course of such trade or business to another person of rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable gains, profits, and income, of $600 or more in any taxable year, shall render a true and accurate return in such form and manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by the regulations.

Section 278(a) of the Code requires the capitalization of certain expenses attributable to the planting, cultivation, maintenance, or development of any citrus or almond grove. Section 278(b) requires the capitalization of certain expenses of a farming syndicate engaged in planting, cultivating, maintaining, or developing a grove, orchard, or vineyard in which fruits or nuts are grown.

Section 447 of the Code requires the capitalization of preproductive period expenses of a corporation engaged in the business of farming and a partnership, one of whose partners is a corporation, engaged in the business of farming.

Section 1.6041-1(a)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the return required by section 6041(a) of the Code shall be made on Forms 1096 and 1099.

Section 1.6041-1(c) of the regulations defines "fixed or determinable income." Income is fixed when it is paid in amounts definitely predetermined. Income is determinable whenever there is a basis of calculation by which the amount to be paid may be ascertained.

Rev. Rul. 78-110, 1978-1 C.B. 390, holds that a mutual casualty insurance company is required to file information returns to report hail crop insurance proceeds paid to farmers who elect, under section 451(d) of the Code, to include such proceeds in income for the taxable year following the taxable year that the crop was destroyed. The election provided by section 451(d) does not affect the status of the insurance proceeds as fixed or determinable income.

The capitalization of expenses under either section 278 or 447 of the Code will establish the farmer's basis in the crops. The determination of whether any insurance proceeds received for the destroyed crops are in excess of the basis of the destroyed crops and, thus, constitute "gains, profits, or income," depends upon the farmer's basis in the crops. Because the insurance company cannot require a farmer to disclose the basis in the destroyed crops, the amount of "gains, profits, or income," if any, resulting from the payment of the hail crop insurance proceeds is not fixed or determinable by the company.

HOLDING

The company is not required to file a Form 1099-MISC if the farmer has informed the insurance company that expenses have been capitalized pursuant to either section 278 or 447 of the Code. However, if the farmer does not inform the insurance company that the expenses have been capitalized pursuant to either section 278 or 447, the company is required to file a Form 1099-MISC.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 78-110, 1978-1 C.B. 390, is clarified to the extent that if the farmers making the election under section 451(d) of the Code were also required to capitalize expenses pursuant to either section 278 or 447, the holding of this present revenue ruling would apply.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

Section 163 of the Revenue Act of 1978, Pub. L. 95-600, November 6, 1978 (92 Stat. 2810), provides that the Internal Revenue Service may enter into agreements with private or public non-profit agencies or organizations to establish a network of trained volunteers to provide free tax information and return preparation assistance to elderly individuals. Elderly individuals are defined as individuals age 60 and over at the close of their taxable year.

COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS

Programs will be administered by non-profit agencies and organizations under cooperative agreement with the Internal Revenue Service in compliance with the Federal Grant and Cooperative Agreement Act of 1977, Pub. L. 95-224, February 3, 1978 (92 Stat. 3, 41 U.S.C. 501-509). Cooperative agreements will provide: (1) for the implementation of the program(s) by geographical area, (2) the functions to be performed by the Service and program sponsor, (3) the maximum amount of money available for reimbursement of expenses, and (4) other information.

COMPETITION

Normally cooperative agreements will be entered into based upon competition among eligible agencies and organizations. Competition will not be used where time makes competition impracticable. Agencies and organizations will be eligible to enter into a cooperative agreement if they are nonprofit and have experience in coordinating volunteer programs. Eligible applicants will be selected to enter into cooperative agreements on the basis of information provided in their application and in accordance with criteria set forth in the application instructions supplied by the Service.

PROGRAM ADMINISTRATION

Under a cooperative agreement, the agency or organization sponsoring a Tax Counseling for the Elderly program will normally be responsible for administration of the program, including the recruitment of volunteers.

The Service will normally provide training and technical support. Program operations will be primarily carried on by the volunteers. Sponsoring agencies and organizations will normally receive reimbursements for administrative expenses of the program and volunteers will normally receive reimbursements for expenses incurred in training and in providing tax return assistance. Volunteers will be provided training and will be required to pass tests designed to measure their understanding of Federal tax subjects on which they will provide assistance.

DRAFTING INFORMATION: The principal authors of these final rules are Judy M. Smith of the Taxpayer Service Division, Internal Revenue Service, James W. Corbitt, Jr. of the General Legal Services Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, and Charles C. Saverude of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, other personnel in the Taxpayer Service Division, other divisions in the Internal Revenue Service and the Office of Chief Counsel participated in developing these final rules, both on matters of substance and style.

ADOPTION OF AMENDMENTS TO THE REGULATIONS: The following additions are made to the Statement of Procedural Rules (26 CFR Part 601):

Paragraph 1. The folowing new provision is added at the end of the table of contents at the head of Part 601:

Subpart H—Tax Counseling for the Elderly

601.801 Purpose and Statutory Authority.
601.802 Cooperative Agreements.
601.803 Program Operations and Requirements.
601.804 Reimbursements.
601.805 Miscellaneous Administrative Provisions.
601.806 Solicitation of Applications.

Par. 2. New subpart H is added to read as follows:

(a) This Subpart H contains the rules for implementation of the Tax Counseling for the Elderly assistance program under Section 163 of the Revenue Act of 1978, Pub. L. 95-600 [1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1], November 6, 1978 (92 Stat. 2810). Section 163 authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury, through the Internal Revenue Service, to enter into agreements with private or public non-profit agencies or organizations for the purpose of providing training and technical assistance to prepare volunteers to provide tax counseling assistance for elderly individuals, age 60 and over, in the preparation of their Federal income tax returns.

(b) Section 163 provides that the Secretary may provide:

(1) Preferential access to Internal Revenue Service taxpayer service representatives for the purpose of making available technical information needed during the course of the volunteers' work;

(2) Publicity for making elderly persons aware of the availability of volunteer taxpayer return preparation assistance programs under this section; and

(3) Technical materials and publications to be used by such volunteers.

(c) In carrying out responsibilities under Section 163, the Secretary, through the Internal Revenue Service, is also authorized:

(1) To provide assistance to organizations which demonstrate, to the satisfaction of the Secretary, that their volunteers are adequately trained and competent to render effective tax counseling to the elderly in the preparation of Federal income tax returns;

(2) To provide for the training of such volunteers, and to assist in such training, to ensure that such volunteers are qualified to provide tax counseling assistance to elderly individuals in the preparation of Federal income tax returns;

(3) To provide reimbursement to volunteers through such organizations for transportation, meals, and other expenses incurred by them in training or providing tax counseling assistance in the preparation of Federal income tax returns under this section, and such other support and assistance determined to be appropriate in carrying out the provisions of the section;

(4) To provide for the use of services, personnel, and facilities of Federal executive agencies and State and local public agencies with their consent, with or without reimbursement; and

(5) To prescribe rules and regulations necessary to carry out the provisions of the section.

(d) With regard to the employment status of volunteers, section 163 also provides that service as a volunteer in any program carried out under this section shall not be considered service as an employee of the United States. Volunteers under such a program shall not be subject to the provisions of law relating to Federal employment, except that the provisions relating to the illegal disclosure of income or other information punishable under Section 1905 of Title 18, United States Code, shall apply to volunteers as if they were employees of the United States.

(a) General. Tax Counseling for the Elderly programs will be administered by sponsor organizations under cooperative agreements with the Internal Revenue Service. Use of cooperative agreements is in acordance with the Federal Grant and Cooperative Agreement Act of 1977, Pub. L. 95-224, February 3, 1978 (92 Stat. 3, 41 U.S.C. 501-509). Cooperative agreements will be legally binding agreements in document form.

(b) Nature and Contents of Cooperative Agreements. Each cooperative agreement will provide for implementation of the program in specified geographic areas. Cooperative agreements will set forth:

(1) The functions and duties to be performed by the Internal Revenue Service and the functions and duties to be performed by the program sponsor,

(2) The maximum amount of the award avaliable to the program sponsor,

(3) The services to be provided for each geographical area, and

(4) Other requirements specified in the applications.

(c) Entry into Cooperative Agreements. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the Director, Taxpayer Service Division, or any other individual designated by the Commissioner may enter into a cooperative agreement for the Internal Revenue Service.

(d) Competitive Award of Cooperative Agreements. Cooperative agreements will generally be entered into based upon competition among eligible applicants.

(1) To be eligible to enter into a cooperative agreement, an organization must be a private or public nonprofit agency or organization with experience in coordinating volunteer programs. Federal, state, and local governmental agencies and organizations will not be eligible to become program sponsors.

(2) Eligible applicants will be selected to enter into cooperative agreements based on an evaluation by the Internal Revenue Service of material provided in their applications. The Service will set forth the evaluative criteria in the application instructions.

(3) Determinations as to the eligibility and selection of agencies and organizations to enter into cooperative agreements will be made solely by the Internal Revenue Service and will not be subject to appeal.

(e) Noncompetitive Award of Cooperative Agreements. If appropriations to implement the Tax Counseling for the Elderly program are received at a time close to when tax return preparation assistance must be provided or when other factors exist which make the use of competition to select agencies and organizations to enter into cooperative agreements impracticable, cooperative agreements will be entered into without competition with eligible agencies and organizations selected by the Internal Revenue Service. Determination of when the use of the competition is impracticable will be made solely by the Internal Revenue Service and will not be subject to appeal.

(1) Cooperative agreements will be subject to renegotiation (including the maximum amount of the award available to a sponsor), suspension, or termination if performance reports required by the cooperative agreement and/or other evaluations by or audits by the Internal Revenue Service or others indicate that planned performance goals or other provisions of the cooperative agreement, the regulations, or Section 163 of the Revenue Act of 1978 are not being satisfactorily met. The necessity for renegotiation, suspension, or termination, will be determined solely by the Internal Revenue Service and will not be subject to appeal.

(2) Cooperative agreements may be modified in writing by mutual agreement between the Internal Revenue Service and the program sponsor at any time. Modifications will be based upon factors such as an inability to utilize all funds available under a cooperative agreement, the availability of additional funds and an ability to effectively utilize additional funds, and interference of some provisions with the efficient operation of the program.

(g) Negotiation. If the proposed program of an eligible applicant does not warrant award of an agreement, the Internal Revenue Service may negotiate with the applicant to bring the application up to a standard that will be adequate for award. If more than one inadequate application has been received for the geographic area involved, negotiation to bring all such applications up to standard will be conducted with all such applicants unless time does not permit negotiations with all.

(a) Objective. The objective of the Tax Counseling for the Elderly program is to provide free assistance in the preparation of Federal income tax returns to elderly taxpayers age 60 and over, by providing training, technical and administrative support to volunteers under the direction of non-profit agencies and organizations that have cooperative agreements with the Internal Revenue Service.

(b) Period of Program Operations. Most tax return preparation assistance will be provided to elderly taxpayers during the period for filing Federal income tax returns, from January 1 to April 15 each year. However, the program activities required to ensure elderly taxpayers efficient and quality tax assistance will normally be conducted year round. Program operations will generally be divided into the following segments each year: October—recruit volunteers; November and December—set training and testing schedules for volunteers, identify assistance sites, complete publicity plans for sites; December and January—train and test volunteers, set volunteer asistance schedules; January through May—provide tax assistance, conduct publicity for sites; May and June—prepare final reports and evaluate program; July and August—prepare for next year's program.

(c) Assistance Requirements. All tax return preparation assistance provided under Tax Counseling for the Elderly programs must be provided free of charge to taxpayers and must be provided only to elderly individuals. An elderly individual is an individual age 60 or over at the close of the individual's taxable year with respect to which tax return preparation assistance is to be provided. Where a joint return is involved, assistance may be provided where only one spouse satisfies the 60 year age requirement.

(d) Training and Testing of Volunteers. Volunteers will normally be provided training and will normally be required to pass tests designed to measure their understanding of Federal tax subjects on which they will provide tax return assistance. Volunteers who do not receive a satisfactory score will not be eligible to participate in the program.

(e) Confidentiality of Tax Information. Program sponsors must obtain written assurance from all volunteers and all other individuals involved in the program, to respect the confidentiality of income and financial information known as a result of preparation of a return or of providing tax counseling assistance in the preparation of Federal income tax returns.

(a) General. When provided for in cooperative agreements, the Internal Revenue Service will provide amounts to program sponsors for reimbursement to volunteers for transportation, meals, and other expenses incurred in training or providing tax return assistance and to program sponsors for reimbursement of overhead expenses. Cooperative agreements will establish the items for which reimbursements will be allowed and the method of reimbursement, e.g., stipend versus actual expenses for meals, as well as developing necessary procedures, forms, and accounting and financial control systems.

(b) Direct, Reasonable, and Prudent Expenses. Reimbursements will be allowed only for direct, reasonable, and prudent expenses incurred as a part of a volunteer's service or as a part of the program sponsor's overhead.

(c) Limitation. Total reimbursements provided to a program sponsor shall not exceed the total amount specified in the cooperative agreement. The Internal Revenue Service shall not be liable for additional amounts to program sponsors, volunteers, or anyone else.

(d) Availability of Appropriated Funds. Expense reimbursements and other assistance to be provided by the Internal Revenue Service under cooperative agreements are contingent upon the availability of appropriated funds for the Tax Counseling for the Elderly program.

(a) Responsibilities and Relationship of Internal Revenue and Program Sponsor. Substantial involvement is anticipated between the Internal Revenue Service and the program sponsors in conducting this program. Specific responsibilities and obligations of the Internal Revenue Service and the program sponsors will be set forth in each cooperative agreement.

(b) Administrative Requirements Set Forth in OMB and Treasury Circulars.

(1) The basic administrative requirements applicable to individual cooperative agreements are contained in Office of Management and Budget Circular No. A-110, Grants and Agreements with Institutions of Higher Education, Hospitals and Other Nonprofit Organizations (41 F.R. 32016). Requirements for advances to program sponsor(s) for financing operations under cooperative agreements are contained in Treasury Department Circular No. 1075, as revised, Regulations Governing Withdrawal of Cash from Treasury for Advances under Federal Grant and Other Programs. All applicable provisions of these two circulars and any existing and further supplements and revisions are incorporated into these regulations and into all cooperative agreements entered into between the Internal Revenue Service and program sponsors.

(2) Additional operating procedures and instructions may be developed by the Internal Revenue Service to direct recipient organizations in carrying out the provisions of this subpart, such as instructions for using letters of credit. Any such operating procedures or instructions will be incorporated into each cooperative agreement.

(c) Joint Funding. Tax Counseling for the Elderly programs will not be eligible for joint funding. Accordingly, the Joint Funding Simplification Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-510, December 5, 1974 (88 Stat. 1604, 42 U.S.C. 4251-4261) and Office of Management and Budget Circular No. A-111, Jointly Funded Assistance to State and Local Governments and Nonprofit Organizations (41 F.R. 32039), will not apply.

(a) Solicitation. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the Commissioner's delegate may, at any time, solicit eligible agencies and organizations to submit applications. Generally, applications will be solicited and accepted in June and July of each year. Deadlines for submitting applications and the schedule for selecting program sponsors will be provided with application documents.

(1) Before preparing and submitting an unsolicited application, organizations are strongly encouraged to contact the Internal Revenue Service at the address provided in (b)(2) of this section.

(2) A solicitation of an application is not an assurance or commitment that the Internal Revenue Service will enter into a cooperative agreement. The Internal Revenue Service will not pay any expenses or other costs incurred by the applicant in considering, preparing or submitting an application.

(1) In the application documents, the Commissioner or the Commissioner's delegate will specify program requirements which the applicant must meet.

(2) Eligible organizations interested in participating in the Internal Revenue Service Tax Counseling for the Elderly program should request an application from the:

Part IV. Items of General Interest

Cash or Deferred Arrangements in Qualified Profit-Sharing and Stock Bonus Plans

Announcement 80-6 [1]

Employers and employees are advised as to the tax treatment of contributions to cash or deferred profit-sharing and stock bonus plans qualified under section 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, that provide a covered employee with an election to have the employer make certain payments as contributions to a trust under the plan on behalf of the employee, or directly to the employee in cash.

Until the first plan year beginning after December 31, 1979, the tax treatment of amounts contributed by an employer at the election of an employee to a cash or deferred qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan depends upon when the plan was established.

During this period, cash or deferred arrangements that were in existence on June 27, 1974, shall be treated in a manner consistent with Rev. Rul. 56-497, 1956-2 C.B. 284; Rev. Rul. 63-180, 1963-2 C.B. 189; and Rev. Rul. 68-89, 1968-1 C.B. 402. Under these Revenue Rulings, contributions made to a cash and trusteed plan which were subject to the election of the employee generally are not considered to be employee contributions, and the employee is not taxed currently on them.

Contributions made during this period under plans or arrangements which were not in existence on June 27, 1974, shall be treated as employee contributions and the employee will be currently taxed.

The Revenue Act of 1978 created a new type of plan arrangement known as a "Qualified Cash or Deferred Arrangement." Its requirements are found in section 401(k) of the Code and apply to contributions made for plan years beginning after December 31, 1979, pursuant to an employee's election not to receive the employee's share of such contributions in cash. The requirements apply no matter when the plan came into existence.

Under section 401(k) of the Code, contributions to a qualified profit sharing or stock bonus plan containing a Qualified Cash or Deferred Arrangement will not be treated as employee contributions or as distributions to the employee merely because of the election. However, contributions to a plan containing a cash or deferred arrangement which does not meet the requirements of section 401(k) will be treated as employee contributions because they will be considered to have been distributed or made available to the electing employee and, therefore, will be taxable currently under section 402(a)(1) of the Code.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Announcement 80-9, page 42.

The date for submitting comments on proposed regulations under the Vinson-Trammell Act, relating to excess profits on contracts for naval vessels or military aircraft, is extended to February 26, 1980. A public hearing on these proposed regulations will be held on March 12, 1980.

Announcement 80-8, page 41.

Public hearings will be held on February 7, 1980, concerning regulations relating to reasonable funding methods and amortization of experience gains by pension plans funded by group deferred annuity contracts.

Rev. Rul. 80-23, page 5.

Unemployment benefits; Redwood National Park Expansion Act. Benefits received as "terminal pay" under the Redwood National Park Expansion Act are not includible in gross income under section 85 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-24, page 5.

Bad debt; dishonored note; cause of action against seller. A taxpayer purchased an unsecured bearer promissory note. On the due date, the note was presented for payment, but was dishonored. Legal action to enforce payment on the note would not, in all probability, result in satisfaction of execution on a judgment. The taxpayer has a cause of action against the seller that may require the seller to return the purchase price of the note. The taxpayer was entitled under section 166 of the Code to a bad debt deduction in the year the note was dishonored. If amounts are recovered by the taxpayer from the seller, they will be ordinary income under section 61.

Rev. Rul. 80-25, page 6.

Capital expenditures; citrus groves; trees and irrigation system. A taxpayer, who was developing a citrus grove, planted citrus trees and installed and placed in service an irrigation system. The taxpayer may take a depreciation deduction for the cost of the trees beginning in the year the trees first reach an income producing stage and for the cost of the irrigation system beginning in the year the system is placed in service.

Rev. Rul. 80-26, page 7.

Redemption of stock; constructive ownership; family hostility. A corporation, all of the stock of which was owned by three individuals and five trusts, redeemed the stock held by four trusts that were for the benefit of an individual shareholder's children. Before the redemption, each trust owned, actually and constructively, 31 percent of the corporation's stock, and afterwards, each owned 33 percent solely by attribution under section 318 of the Code. Although family hostility prevented the trusts from exercising actual control over such stock, section 318 applies, and the redemption is not a distribution in exchange for stock under section 302(a). The Service will not follow the Robin Haft Trust decision.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on Subpart A, Tax Conventions and related Treasury Decisions and Revenue Rulings; Subpart B, Legislation and related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical Indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Price: $1.00 (single copy). Subscription price: $50.00 a year; $12.50 additional for foreign mailing.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

26 CFR 1.61-1: Gross income.

What the proper year is for the deduction of a bad debt incurred when an unsecured note of a bankrupt is dishonored if the holder has a cause of action against the seller of the note that may require the seller to return the purchase price of the note to the holder. See Rev. Rul. 80-24, this page.

Section 85.—Unemployment Compensation

Unemployment benefits; Redwood National Park Expansion Act. Benefits received as "terminal pay" under the Redwood National Park Expansion Act are not includible in gross income under section 85 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-23

ISSUE

Are certain benefits and payments made under Pub. L. No. 95-250, 92 Stat. 163 (1978) (the Redwood National Park Expansion Act), subject to the provisions of section 85 of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

The Redwood National Park Expansion Act (the "Redwood Act") was enacted by Congress on March 27, 1978, and provides for terminal pay benefits to employees of private employers affected by the expansion of the Redwood National Park. Among the benefits are the following:

(1) Weekly layoff and vacation replacement benefits under section 207 of the Act.

(2) Severance payments under sections 208 and 209 of the Act.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 85 of the Code provides that recipients of unemployment benefits must include a portion of such benefits in gross income if the recipient's adjusted gross income (determined without regard to this section and without regard to the disability income exclusion provided in section 105(d)) and the unemployment compensation benefits exceed a specified "base amount" for the taxable year. The amount includible in gross income is the lesser of (1) one-half of the excess of the unemployment compensation benefits and adjusted gross income (as previously determined) over the base amount, or (2) the amount of the unemployment compensation benefits. The term "unemployment compensation" is defined in section 85(c) as meaning any amount received under a law of the United States or of a state, which is in the nature of unemployment compensation.

Section 201(18) of the Redwood Act defines the payments provided for in sections 207, 208, and 209 as "terminal pay" and provides that regardless of the designations used to distinguish among them, the payments are intended and shall be deemed to be severance pay and, as such, shall be treated for federal income tax purposes in the same manner as is provided by California State law. Section 17148 of the California Revenue and Taxation Code (1979 Supp.) provides that gross income does not include payments for severance pay or terminal pay to an individual who is terminated from his or her employment as a direct result of the expansion of a federal redwood park in Northern California by reason of legislation enacted by Congress in 1977 or 1978. In addition, section 201(19) of the Redwood Act provides that the amount of terminal pay for an employee shall be reduced by the amount of the federal and state income taxes that would be required to be withheld by an employer from wages equal to such terminal pay, if paid to an employee with the same number of income tax exemptions as the recipient. Section 201(19) also provides for the withholding and payment of social security contributions on terminal pay.

Although the benefits provided under sections 207, 208, and 209 of the Redwood Act meet the definition of unemployment compensation for purposes of section 85 of the Code, subjecting such amounts to tax under section 85 would interfere with the specific taxing provisions of the Redwood Act and result in a situation analogous to one of double taxation.

HOLDING

The benefits and payments made under sections 207, 208, and 209 of Pub. L. No. 95-250, 92 Stat. 163 (1978), (the Redwood National Park Expansion Act), are not includible in gross income under the provisions of section 85 of the Code.

Section 166.—Bad Debts

26 CFR 1.166-2: Evidence of worthlessness.
(Also Section 61; 1.61-1.)

Bad debt; dishonored note; cause of action against seller. A taxpayer purchased an unsecured bearer promissory note. On the due date, the note was presented for payment, but was dishonored. Legal action to enforce payment on the note would not, in all probability, result in satisfaction of execution on a judgment. The taxpayer has a cause of action against the seller that may require the seller to return the purchase price of the note. The taxpayer was entitled under section 166 of the Code to a bad debt deduction in the year the note was dishonored. If amounts are recovered by the taxpayer from the seller, they will be ordinary income under section 61.

Rev. Rul. 80-24

ISSUE

What is the proper year of deductibility pursuant to section 166 of the Internal Revenue Code of a bad debt incurred when an unsecured note of a bankrupt is dishonored if the holder has a cause of action against the seller of the note that may require the seller to return the purchase price of the note to the holder?

FACTS

On July 1, 1974, X purchased from Z, a brokerage firm, an unsecured bearer promissory note issued by Y and payable June 30, 1975. X, Y, and Z are unrelated domestic corporations. The note was not issued with interest coupons and was not in registered form and therefore it is not a security within the meaning of section 165 of the Code.

X presented the note to Y for payment on June 30, 1975, but it was dishonored. On September 1, 1975, Y petitioned a United States District Court for bankruptcy under section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U.S.C. section 205). Legal action by X against Y or its successors to enforce payment on the note would, in all probability, as of September 1, 1975 or thereafter not result in satisfaction of execution on a judgment against the defendants. Due to alleged misconduct by the seller, Z, when the note was sold to X, X has a cause of action against Z, one of the remedies of which is to rescind the contract of sale and to recover the amount it paid to Z for the note. X's right to sue Z is based on the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. section 77 (1970) and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 15 U.S.C. section 78 (1970), as well as state law provisions and it has a reasonable likelihood of succeeding. X files its federal income tax returns on a calendar year basis.

The specific question is whether X is entitled to a bad debt deduction in 1975, the year when the note was dishonored by Y.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 166(a)(1) of the Code provides that a deduction is allowed for any debt that becomes worthless within the taxable year.

Section 1.166-1(c) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that only a debt that arises from a debtor-creditor relationship based on a valid and enforceable obligation to pay a fixed or determinable sum of money qualifies under section 166 of the Code.

Section 1.166-2(b) of the regulations provides that whenever surrounding circumstances indicate that a debt is worthless and uncollectible and that legal action to enforce payment would, in all probability, not result in the satisfaction of execution on a judgment, a showing of these facts will be sufficient evidence of worthlessness of the debt for the purposes of the deduction under section 166 of the Code.

In Zeeman v. United States, 275 F. Supp. 235 (S.D. N.Y. 1967), remanded for further proceedings on other issues, 395 F.2d 861 (2nd Cir. 1968), a brokerage firm was owed money by a debtor that was adjudicated a bankrupt in 1963. The brokerage firm took a bad debt deduction in that year. Numerous suits were brought in 1963 on behalf of the brokerage firm seeking damages for fraudulent transactions that caused the debt to become worthless. The court held that recovery on these suits for damages would not be recovery on the debt, and, therefore, the pendency of the suits did not affect the deductibility of the bad debt loss in 1963 by the brokerage firm. The court relied on the fact that none of the suits dealt with the debt owed by the debtor to the creditor or with collateral, guarantees or indemnity contracts directly related to the debt as such, although the damages claimed could be measured by the debt loss.

In the present situation, X's cause of action against Z is based on the sale of the note by Z to X, and not on the debtor-creditor relationship between X and Y. Any recovery would relate to the sale of the note by Z to X and would have no bearing on the actual worth or collectibility of the debt evidenced by the note.

HOLDING

X is entitled pursuant to section 166 of the Code to a bad debt deduction in 1975. Further, if any amounts are recovered by X from Z they will be ordinary income to X under section 61(a).

(Also Sections 167, 263; 1.167(a)-1, 1.263(a)-2.)

Capital expenditures; citrus groves; trees and irrigation system. A taxpayer, who was developing a citrus grove, planted citrus trees and installed and placed in service an irrigation system. The taxpayer may take a depreciation deduction for the cost of the trees beginning in the year the trees first reach an income producing stage and for the cost of the irrigation system beginning in the year the system is placed in service.

Rev. Rul. 80-25

ISSUE

Under section 278 of the Internal Revenue Code, may a taxpayer who is developing a citrus grove take a depreciation deduction for the cost of citrus trees and an irrigation system before the close of the fourth taxable year beginning with the taxable year in which the trees were planted?

FACTS

In 1974, a taxpayer who was developing a citrus grove planted citrus trees and installed and placed in service an irrigation system with a useful life of 20 years. In 1977, the citrus trees first produced fruit. The taxpayer took deductions for depreciation of the cost of the irrigation system beginning in 1974 when the system was placed in service. The taxpayer also took deductions for depreciation of the cost of the citrus trees beginning in 1977, the year the trees first began to bear fruit.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 263(a) of the Code provides in pertinent part that no deduction is allowed for any amount paid out for new buildings or for permanent improvements made to increase the value of any property or estate. Instead, these nondeductible capital expenditures must be charged to capital account.

Section 167(a) of the Code allows as a depreciation deduction a reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear (including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence) of property used in a trade or business, or held for the production of income.

Section 278(a) of the Code, however, provides that any amount otherwise allowable as a deduction that is attributable to the planting, cultivation, maintenance, or development of any citrus or almond grove and is incurred before the close of the fourth taxable year beginning with the taxable year in which the trees were planted, shall be charged to capital account.

Section 1.278-1(a)(2)(iii) of the Income Tax Regulations states that the provisions of section 278(a) of the Code apply only to expenditures allowable as deductions without regard to section 278(a) and have no application to expenditures otherwise chargeable to capital account, such as the cost of the land and preparatory expenditures incurred in connection with a citrus or almond grove.

Section 278(a) of the Code requires a taxpayer to capitalize for four years the daily out-of-pocket expenses that would otherwise be deductible under section 162 of the Code as ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on a trade or business. Section 278(a) does not apply, however, to expenditures otherwise chargeable to capital account. Accordingly, section 278(a) does not prevent a taxpayer from taking depreciation deductions that may be allowable under section 167 with respect to capital assets held, and nondeductible capital expenditures made, in connection with a citrus grove.

The cost of the citrus trees that must be capitalized includes the cost of land preparation and planting expenses. This cost is recovered through depreciation when the trees first reach an income producing stage. See Rev. Rul. 69-249, 1969-1 C.B. 31.

HOLDING

The taxpayer may take a depreciation deduction for the cost of the citrus trees beginning in the year the trees first reach an income producing stage and may take a depreciation deduction for the cost of the irrigation system beginning in the year the system is placed in service.

Section 301.—Distributions of Property

26 CFR 1.301-1: Rules applicable with respect to distributions of money and other property.

Whether the Internal Revenue Service will follow the decision in Robin Haft Trust, et al. v. Commissioner, 510 F. 2d 43 (1st Cir. 1975), when applying the rules of attribution under section 318 of the Code to a redemption of stock for purposes of determining if the distribution is one to which section 302(a) or section 301 applies. See Rev. Rul. 80-26, below.

Section 302.—Distributions in Redemption of Stock

(Also Sections 301, 318, 7805; 1.301-1, 1.318-1, 301.7805-1.)

Redemption of stock; constructive ownership; family hostility. A corporation, all of the stock of which was owned by three individuals and five trusts, redeemed the stock held by four trusts that were for the benefit of an individual shareholder's children. Before the redemption, each trust owned, actually and constructively, 31 percent of the corporation's stock, and afterwards, each owned 33 percent solely by attribution under section 318 of the Code. Although family hostility prevented the trusts from exercising actual control over such stock, section 318 applies, and the redemption is not a distribution in exchange for stock under section 302(a). The Service will not follow the Robin Haft Trust decision.

Rev. Rul. 80-26

ISSUE

Are the rules of attribution under section 318 of the Internal Revenue Code applicable under the facts described below in determining whether a distribution in redemption of stock qualifies under section 302(a) of the Code?

FACTS

X corporation had outstanding one class of voting common stock. The stock was owned by 8 shareholders: A; B (A's brother); C (A's brother-in-law); TA, a trust for the benefit of A, B, and D (A's sister); T1, T2, T3, and T4, 4 separate trusts for the benefit of A's children created by a parent of A's spouse. A's interest in the shares of TA was one-third. B, C, and D are individuals unrelated to the other shareholders within the meaning of section 318 of the Code. As a result of a bitter divorce and acrimonious property settlement between A and A's spouse, all the stock owned by T1, T2, T3, and T4 was redeemed by X. Due to the family hostility these 4 trusts were prevented from exercising actual control over the X stock attributed to them. Before the redemption T1, T2, T3, and T4 each owned, actually and constructively, 31 percent of the X stock and after the redemption each owned, solely by attribution under sections 318(a)(1)(A)(ii) and 318(a)(3)(B)(i), 33 percent of the X stock.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Pursuant to section 302(c) of the Code section 318(a) applies in determining the ownership of stock for purposes of determining whether a redemption qualifies under section 302(a).

In United States v. Davis, 397 U.S. 301 (1970), rehearing denied, 397 U.S. 1071 (1970), Ct. D. 1937, 1970-1 C.B. 62, the Supreme Court of the United States, in considering whether a distribution was a redemption under section 302(b)(1) of the Code, held that the attribution rules were "specifically applicable to the entire section, and * * * that Congress intended that they be taken into account * * *."

Furthermore, the legislative history of section 318 of the Code indicates that before the enactment of the 1954 Code there was "no specific statutory guidance * * * for stock ownership in the area of corporate distributions * * ." In order to remove the uncertainties Congress provided, through section 318, "precise standards whereby under specific circumstances, a shareholder may be considered as owning stock held by members of his family ( * * or trusts which he controls)." H.R. Rep. No. 1337, 83rd Cong., 2d Sess. A96 and 36 (1954).

In Robin Haft Trust, et al. v. Commissioner, 510 F. 2d 43 (1st Cir. 1975), rev'g and remanding, 61 T.C. 309 (1973), supplemented, 62 T.C. 145 (1974), on facts similar to those set forth above, the court viewed the attribution rules as a presumption of continuing influence over corporate affairs and, therefore, because of the family hostility disregarded the attribution rules in testing the redemption of the taxpayers' stock for dividend equivalency. Such an interpretation is, however, inconsistent with both the legislative history of section 318 of the Code and the language and the rationale of Davis. The purpose of the attribution rules under section 318 was to replace the confusion of prior law with clear and objective standards for attribution of stock ownership among related shareholders. The facts and circumstances of a particular case cannot contradict the mechanical determination under section 318 of how much stock a shareholder owns.

Consequently, the Internal Revenue Service will not follow the decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit in Haft. Also, the acquiescence in the decision in Estate of Squier v. Commissioner, 35 T.C. 950 (1961), acq., 1961-2 C.B. 5, upon which the decision in Haft relies, has been withdrawn and nonacquiescence substituted therefor. See 1978-2 C.B. 4.

HOLDING

The rules of attribution under section 318 of the Code are applicable in determining whether a distribution in redemption of stock qualifies under section 302(a). Therefore, in the instant case, pursuant to section 318, T1, T2, T3, and T4 each was the owner of 33 percent of the X stock after the redemption and, consequently, the redemption of the stock owned by T1, T2, T3, and T4 is not (i) a complete termination of interest in X within the meaning of section 302(b)(3); (ii) a substantially disproportionate redemption of stock within the meaning of section 302(b)(2); or (iii) a redemption not essentially equivalent to a dividend within the meaning of section 302(b)(1). Accordingly, the redemption is not a distribution in part or full payment in exchange for the X stock under section 302(a). Thus, under section 302(d), the redemption by X of the stock held by T1, T2, T3, and T4 is a distribution of property to which section 301 applies.

PROSPECTIVE APPLICATION

Pursuant to the authority contained in section 7805(b) of the Code, this revenue ruling will not be applied adversely to taxpayers who relied upon the acquiescence in Squier and who either (1) before the decision in Davis, March 23, 1970, consummated transactions under section 302 in which, pursuant to section 302(c)(1), section 318(a) applied, or (2) consummated such transactions after that date pursuant to the terms of a binding written contract entered into before that date if such terms were in effect on the date of the Davis decision.

Section 318.—Constructive Ownership of Stock

Whether the Internal Revenue Service will follow the decision in Robin Haft Trust, et al. v. Commissioner, 510 F. 2d 43 (1st Cir. 1975), when applying the rules of attribution under section 318 of the Code to a redemption of stock for purposes of determining if the distribution is one to which section 302(a) or section 301 applies. See Rev. Rul. 80-26, page 7.

Section 401.—Qualified Pension, Profit-Sharing, and Stock Bonus Plans

26 CFR 1.401(a)-13: Assignment or alienation of benefits.

Qualification; court ordered distribution of benefits. A plan will not lose its qualification under section 401(a) of the Code solely because the plan trustee complies with a court order requiring the distribution of the benefits of a participant in pay status to the participant's spouse or children in order to meet the participant's alimony or support obligations; Rev. Rul. 56-432 obsoleted.

Rev. Rul. 80-27

Advice has been requested whether a plan will lose its qualification under section 401 of the Internal Revenue Code if the plan trustee complies with a court order requiring the distribution of benefits of a participant in pay status to the spouse or children of the participant in order to meet the alimony or support obligations of the participant.

X corporation established a qualified pension plan for its employees. A was a married employee of X with children. A retired and began to receive monthly payments of $500 under the terms of the plan. A's spouse sued A for divorce. The final divorce decree provided that A should pay $100.00 per month to the spouse as alimony and child support payments. When A subsequently defaulted on these payments, A's former spouse obtained a court order requiring the trustee of the X corporation plan to deduct $100 per month from the retirement payments due to A and to pay the amounts deducted to the former spouse.

Prior to the enactment of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) [Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1], attachments of a participant's interest in a qualified plan because of the claims of the employer were permitted. See Rev. Rul. 56-432, 1956-2 C.B. 284.

Section 401(a)(13) of the Code, as added by ERISA, provides that a trust shall not constitute a qualified trust unless the plan of which the trust is a part provides that benefits under the plan may not be assigned or alienated.

Section 1.401(a)-13(b)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that, for the purposes of section 401(a)(13) of the Code, a trust will not be qualified unless the plan of which the trust is a part provides that benefits provided under the plan may not be anticipated, assigned (either at law or in equity), alienated or subject to attachment, garnishment, levy, execution, or other legal or equitable process.

The rule against assignment or alienation of plan benefits was intended to assure that the accrued benefits of a plan participant are actually available for retirement purposes. (See H.R. Rep. 93-807, 93d Cong., 2d Sess. (1974), p. 68.) [1974-3 C.B. (Supplement) 236]. Therefore, the participant's benefits are not subject to attachment by general creditors. However, the rule was not intended to defeat the enforcement of the obligation of a plan participant to support the spouse or children of the participant through alimony or support payments. (See, e.g., Cartledge v. Miller, 457 F. Supp. 1146 (S.D.N.Y. 1978); Cogollos v. Cogollos, 402 N.Y.S.2d 929 (Sup. Ct. 1978); and Wanamaker v. Wanamaker, 401 N.Y.S.2d 702 (Sup. Ct. 1978).)

Accordingly, a plan will not lose its qualification under section 401(a) of the Code merely because the trustee complies with a court order requiring deductions from the benefits of a participant in pay status for alimony or support payments. However, accrued benefits that are not currently payable to the participant under the terms of the plan may not be attached since the participant has no present right to such benefits.

Rev. Rul. 56-432, 1956-2 C.B. 284, is obsoleted.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER C, PART 31.—EMPLOYMENT TAXES; APPLICABLE ON OR AFTER JANUARY 1, 1955

Employment taxes with respect to employees of related corporations

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to employment taxes with respect to employees of related corporations. Provisions for treating certain related corporations as one employer for purposes of the social security and Federal unemployment taxes were added by the Social Security Amendments of 1977 [Pub. L. 95-216, 1978-1 C.B. 462]. The final regulations provide related corporations and their employees with the guidance needed to comply with the new law. The regulations affect related corporations and individuals who are employed by two or more related corporations one of which is the common paymaster of the corporations.

DATE: The amendments apply to wages paid after December 31, 1978.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

BACKGROUND

On December 13, 1978, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Employment Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 31) under section 3121(s) and 3306(p) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 314 of the Social Security Amendments of 1977 (19 Stat. 1536). A public hearing was held on April 5, 1979. After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

The effectiveness of these regulations will be evaluated on the basis of comments and information received from the public, other Government agencies, and offices within the Treasury Department and Internal Revenue Service.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Section 314 of the Social Security Amendments of 1977 added sections 3121(s) and 3306(p) to the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to provide, in effect, for the treatment of certain related corporations as one employer for the purposes of the social security tax and the Federal unemployment tax. These new provisions state that when two or more related corporations concurrently employ the same individual, and compensate that individual through a common paymaster which is one of the related corporations for which the individual performs services, each of the corporations is considered to have paid only the remuneration it actually disburses to that individual. The regulations define the terms related corporations, common paymaster, and concurrent employment. The regulations also provide rules for the allocation of employment taxes, and for liability for those taxes.

COMMENTS

The proposed regulations were revised in several ways to reflect comments received from the public. Several comments requested that guidance be provided regarding treatment of reporting and filing requirements under the new sections. Accordingly, the regulations were expanded to include such guidance.

Under the regulations, no additional reporting or filing requirements have been imposed. One comment stated that the regulations are unclear as to the intended consequences when two corporations are related (under the tests provided in the regulations) to the common paymaster but not related to each other. An example has been added to clarify this situation. Several comments stated that one of the proposed tests for the definition of related corporations, dealing with nonstock corporations, should be revised to encompass some mutual insurance companies which, due to the way they were organized, could not meet the test. Since the test was designed to include mutual insurance companies (among other nonstock corporations), the test was accordingly revised. Several comments asked for clarification whether the tests for the definition of related corporations, requiring a certain percentage of common officers or employees, required the applicable percentage of officers or employees to exist in one corporation or in both corporations. An example has been revised to clarify this point. One comment suggested that a common paymaster should include a corporation which pays common employees with checks drawn on separate bank accounts of each employing corporation. The final regulations include this suggestion, with the limitation that the common paymaster must be the drawer of the checks.

Section 3121(s) applies only to concurrently employed individuals who are remunerated by a common paymaster that is one of the employing corporations. Several comments were received regarding the definition of concurrent employment. The comments requested that this definition be changed so that the performance of services for the employing corporation, and, in particular, the common paymaster corporation, was not a requirement. The definition of concurrent employment has not been changed in the final regulations, however, because the statute clearly indicates the individual must be employed by the common paymaster, and there is no indication that Congress intended the word "employment" to mean other than the normal definition of the term, which includes the concept of performance of services in exchange for wages. In addition, the suggested definition could cause administrative difficulties in determining who was concurrently employed. Recognizing that additional guidance was needed in this area, the final regulations have been revised and expanded to clarify the definition of concurrent employment, and the examples have been revised to illustrate common fact patterns.

The provisions of the proposed regulations dealing with allocation of employment taxes is unchanged in the Treasury decision. One comment was received suggesting that, in the case of insurance companies, an allocation method based on intercompany reinsurance agreements would be desirable. One method of allocation included in the proposed regulations for allocation in an appropriate manner varying according to the circumstances encompasses this suggestion.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Eileen Murphy of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the following amendments to 26 CFR Part 31 are hereby adopted:

Paragraph 1. Section 31.3121(a)(1) and the historical note are deleted.

Par. 2. Section 31.3121(a)(1)-1 is amended by adding at the end of the portion of paragraph (a)(3) that precedes example (1) a sentence which reads as follows:

§ 31.3121(a)(1)-1 Annual wage limitation.

(a) In general. * * *

(3) * * * In connection with the annual wage limitation in the case of remuneration paid after December 31, 1978, from two or more related corporations that compensate an employee through a common paymaster, see § 31.3121(s)-1.

* * * * *

Par. 3. There is added immediately after § 31.3121(r)-1 the following new section:

§ 31.3121(s)-1 Concurrent employment by related corporations with common paymaster.

(a) In general. For purposes of sections 3102, 3111, and 3121(a)(1), except as otherwise provided in paragraph (c) of this section, when two or more related corporations concurrently employ the same individual and compensate that individual through a common paymaster which is one of the related corporations that employs the individual, each of the corporations is considered to have paid only the remuneration it actually disburses to that individual. This rule applies whether the remuneration was paid with respect to the employment relationship of the individual with the disbursing corporation or was paid on behalf of another related corporation. Accordingly, if all of the remuneration to the individual from the related corporations is disbursed through the common paymaster, the total amount of taxes imposed with respect to the remuneration under sections 3102 and 3111 is determined as though the individual has only one employer (the common paymaster). The common paymaster is responsible for filing information and tax returns and issuing Forms W-2 with respect to wages it is considered to have paid under this section. Section 3121(s) and this section apply only to remuneration disbursed in the form of money, check, or similar instrument by one of the related corporations or its agent.

(b) Definitions. The definitions contained in this paragraph are applicable only for purposes of this section and § 31.3306(p)-1.

(1) Related corporations. Corporations shall be considered related corporations for an entire calendar quarter (as defined in § 31.0-2(a)(9)) if they satisfy any one of the following four tests at any time during that calendar quarter:

(i) The corporations are members of a "controlled group of corporations", as defined in section 1563 of the Code, or would be members if section 1563(a)(4) and (b) did not apply and if the phrase "more than 50 percent" were substituted for the phrase "at least 80 percent" wherever it appears in section 1563(a).

(ii) In the case of a corporation that does not issue stock, either fifty percent or more of the members of one corporation's board of directors (or other governing body) are members of the other corporation's board of directors (or other governing body), or the holders of fifty percent or more of the voting power to select such members are concurrently the holders of fifty percent or more of that power with respect to the other corporation.

(iii) Fifty percent or more of one corporation's officers are concurrently officers of the other corporation.

(iv) Thirty percent or more of one corporation's employees are concurrently employees of the other corporation.

The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph:

Example (1). (a) X Corporation employs individuals A, B, D, E, F, G, and H. Y Corporation employs individuals A, B, and C. Z Corporation employs individuals A, C, I, J, K, L, and M. X Corporation is the paymaster for all thirteen individuals. The corporations have no officers or stockholders in common.

(b) X and Y are related corporations because at least 30 percent of Y's employees are also employees of X. Y and Z are related corporations because at least 30 percent of Y's employees are also employees of Z. X and Z are not related corporations because neither corporation has 30 percent of its employees concurrently employed by the other corporation.

(c) For purposes of determining the amount of the tax liability under sections 3102 and 3111, individual B is treated as having one employer. Individual C has two employers for these purposes, although Y and Z are related corporations, because C is not employed by X Corporation, the common paymaster. Individual A also is treated as having two employers for the purposes of these sections because X and Y Corporations are treated as one employer, and Z Corporation is treated as a second employer (since it is not related to the paymaster, X Corporation). Of course, individuals D, E, F, G, H, I, J, K, L, and M are not concurrently employed by two or more corporations and, accordingly, section 3121(s) is inapplicable to them.

Example (2). M and N Corporations are both related to Corporation O but are not related to each other. Individual A is concurrently employed by all three corporations and paid by O, their common paymaster. Although M and N are not related, O is treated as the employer for A's employment with M, N, and O.

Example (3). Corporations X, Y, and Z meet the definition of related corporations for the first time on April 12, 1979, and cease to meet it on July 5, 1979. A is concurrently employed by X, Y, and Z throughout 1979. In each of the four calendar quarters of 1979, A's remuneration from X, Y, and Z is $2,000, $10,000, and $30,000, respectively. All of the remuneration to A from X, Y, and Z for the year is disbursed by X, the common paymaster. Under these circumstances, the amount of wages subject to sections 3102 and 3111 is as follows:

For the first calendar quarter

X	Y	Z
$2,000	$10,000	$22,900

For the second calendar quarter

$20,900 ($22,900 – $2,000)	0	0

For the third calendar quarter

For the fourth calendar quarter

X	Y	Z

Of course, if the corporations had been related throughout all of 1979, only $22,900 of X's first quarter disbursement would have constituted wages subject to sections 3102 and 3111.

(2) Common Paymaster—(i) In general. A common paymaster of a group of related corporations is any member thereof that disburses remuneration to employees of two or more of those corporations on their behalf and that is responsible for keeping books and records for the payroll with respect to those employees. The common paymaster is not required to disburse remuneration to all the employees of those two or more related corporations, but the provisions of this section do not apply to any remuneration to an employee that is not disbursed through a common paymaster. The common paymaster may pay concurrently employed individuals under this section by one combined paycheck, drawn on a single bank account, or by separate paychecks, drawn by the common paymaster on the accounts of one or more employing corporations.

(ii) Multiple common paymasters. A group of related corporations may have more than one common paymaster. Some of the related corporations may use one common paymaster and others of the related corporations use another common paymaster with respect to a certain class of employees. A corporation that uses a common paymaster to disburse remuneration to certain of its employees may use a different common paymaster to disburse remuneration to other employees.

(iii) Examples. The rules of this subparagraph are illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). S, T, U, and V are related corporations with 2,000 employees collectively. Forty of these employees are concurrently employed by two or more of the corporations during a calendar quarter. The four corporations arrange for S to disburse remuneration to thirty of these forty employees for their services. Under these facts, S is the common paymaster of S, T, U, and V with respect to the thirty employees. S is not a common paymaster with respect to the remaining employees.

Example (2). (a) W, X, Y, and Z are related corporations. The corporations collectively have 20,000 employees. Two hundred of the employees are top-level executives and managers, sixty of whom are concurrently employed by two or more of the corporations during a calendar quarter. Six thousand of the employees are skilled artisans, all of whom are concurrently employed by two or more of the corporations during the calendar year. The four corporations arrange for Z to disburse remuneration to the sixty executives who are concurrently employed by two or more of the corporations. W and X arrange for X to disburse remuneration to the artisans who are concurrently employed by W and X.

(b) A is an executive who is concurrently employed only by W, Y, and Z during the calendar year. Under these facts, Z is a common paymaster for W, Y, and Z with respect to A. Assuming that the other requirements of this section are met, the amount of the tax liability under sections 3102 and 3111 is determined as if Z were A's only employer for the calendar quarter.

(c) B is a skilled artisan who is concurrently employed only by W and X during the calendar year. Under these facts, X is a common paymaster for S and X with respect to B. Assuming that the other requirements of this section are met, the amount of the tax liability under sections 3102 and 3111 is determined as if X were B's only employer for the calendar quarter.

(3) Concurrent employment. For purposes of this section, the term "concurrent employment" means the contemporaneous existence of an employment relationship (within the meaning of section 3121(b)) between an individual and two or more corporations. Such a relationship contemplates the performance of services by the employee for the benefit of the employing corporation (not merely for the benefit of the group of corporations), in exchange for remuneration which, if deductible for the purposes of Federal income tax, would be deductible by the employing corporation. The contemporaneous existence of an employment relationship with each corporation is the decisive factor; if it exists, the fact that a particular employee is on leave or otherwise temporarily inactive is immaterial. However, employment is not concurrent with respect to one of the related corporations if the employee's employment relationship with that corporation is completely nonexistent during periods when the employee is not performing services for that corporation. An employment relationship is completely nonexistent if all rights and obligations of the employer and employee with respect to employment have terminated, other than those that customarily exist after employment relationships terminate. Examples of rights and obligations that customarily exist after employment relationships terminate include those with respect to remuneration not yet paid, employer's property used by the employee not yet returned to the employer, severance pay, and lump-sum termination payments from a deferred compensation plan. Circumstances that suggest that an employment relationship has become completely nonexistent include unconditional termination of participation in deferred compensation plans of the employer, forfeiture of seniority claims, and forfeiture of unused fringe benefits such as vacation or sick pay. Of course, the continued existence of an employment relationship between an individual and a corporation is not necessarily established by the individual's continued participation in a deferred compensation plan, retention of seniority rights, etc., since continuation of those benefits may be attributable to employment with a second corporation related to the first corporation if the corporations have common benefits plans or if the benefits are continued as a matter of corporate reciprocity. An individual who does not perform substantial services in exchange for remuneration from a corporation is presumed not employed by that corporation. Concurrent employment need not exist for any particular length of time to meet the requirements of this section, but this section only applies to remuneration disbursed by a common paymaster to an individual who is concurrently employed by the common paymaster and at least one other related corporation at the time the individual performs the services for which the remuneration is paid. If the employment relationship is nonexistent during a quarter, that employee may not be counted towards the 30-percent test set forth in paragraph (b)(1)(iv) of this section; however, even if the employment relationship is nonexistent, section 3121(s) of the Code applies to remuneration paid to the former employee for services rendered while the employee was a common employee. The principles of this subparagraph are illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). M, N, and O are related corporations which use N as a common paymaster with respect to officers. Their respective headquarters are located in three separate cities several hundred miles apart. A is an officer of M, N, and O who performs substantial services for each corporation. A does not work a set length of time at each corporate headquarters, and when A leaves one corporate headquarters, it is not known when A will return, although it is expected that A will return. Under these facts, A is concurrently employed by the three corporations.

Example (2). P, Q, and R are related corporations whose geographical zones of business activity do not overlap. P, Q, and R have a common pension plan and arrange for Q to be a common paymaster for managers and executives. All three corporations maintain cafeterias for the use of their employees. B is a cafeteria manager who has worked at P's headquarters for 3 years. On June 1, 1980, B is transferred from P to the position of cafeteria manager of R. There are no plans for B's return to P. B's accrued pension benefits, vacation and sick pay, do not change as a result of the transfer. The decision to transfer B was made by Q, the parent corporation. Under these facts, B is not concurrently employed by P and R, because B's employment relationship with P was completely nonexistent during B's employment with R. Furthermore, section 3121(s) is inapplicable since B also was not employed by Q, the common paymaster, because B never contracted to perform services for remuneration from Q, and Q did not have the right to control the day-to-day duties of B's work.

Example (3). C is employed by two related corporations, S and T. C was concurrently employed by these corporations between April 1, 1979, and June 30, 1979. The corporations used T as the common paymaster with respect to C's wages between May 1, 1979, and September 30, 1979. T pays C on May 15 for services performed between April 1 and April 30, on July 15 for services performed between June 1 and June 30, and on August 15 for services performed between July 1 and July 31. Section 3121(s) applies to the first two payments but does not apply to the third payment (there was no concurrent employment). However, if the third payment was made by T for services performed for T, T counts the amounts previously disbursed to C in 1979 while C was concurrently employed by S and T towards the wage base (see section 3121(a)(1)).

(c) Allocation of employment taxes—(1) Responsibility to pay tax. If the requirements of this section are met, the common paymaster has the primary responsibility for remitting taxes pursuant to sections 3102 and 3111 with respect to the remuneration it disburses as the common paymaster. The common paymaster computes these taxes as though it were the sole employer of the concurrently employed individuals. If the common paymaster fails to remit these taxes (in whole or in part), it remains liable for the full amount of the unpaid portion of these taxes. In addition, each of the other related corporations using the common paymaster is jointly and severally liable for its appropriate share of these taxes. That share is an amount equal to the lesser of:

(i) The amount of the liability of the common paymaster under section 3121(s), after taking account of any tax payments made, or

(ii) The amount of the liability under sections 3102 and 3111 which, but for section 3121(s), would have existed with respect to the remuneration from such other related corporation, reduced by an allocable portion of any taxes previously paid by the common paymaster with respect to that remuneration.

The portion of taxes previously paid by the common paymaster that is allocable to each related corporation is determined by multiplying the amount of taxes paid by a fraction, the numerator of which is the portion of the amount of employment tax liability of the common paymaster under section 3121(s) that is allocable to such related corporation under paragraph (c)(2) of this section, and the denominator of which is the total amount of the common paymaster's liability under section 3121(s), both determined without regard to any prior tax payments. These rules apply whether or not the tax on employees was withheld from the employees' wages.

(2) Allocation of tax—(i) In general. If the related corporations maintain a record of the remuneration disbursed to the employee for services performed for each corporation, the remuneration-based allocation rules of paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section apply. If the related corporations do not maintain this record of remuneration, the group-wide allocation rules of paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section apply. In all cases, allocations must be made with respect to each payment of wages. The allocation of employment tax liabilities pursuant to this subparagraph also determines which related corporation may be entitled to income tax deductions with respect to the payments of those taxes.

(ii) Remuneration-based allocation rules. Under the remuneration-based method of allocation, each related corporation that remunerates an employee through a common paymaster has allocated to it for each pay period an amount of tax determined according to the following formula:

$$\frac{\text{Portion of wage payment constituting remuneration to the employee for services performed for the corporation}}{\text{Total wage payment constituting remuneration to the employee for all services performed for the related corporations using the common paymaster}} \times \text{Tax on employees under section 3102 and tax on employers under section 3111 that the common paymaster is required to remit with respect to the wage payment.}$$

If the remuneration disbursed to an employee for services performed for a corporation is inappropriate, the district director may adjust the remuneration records of the related corporations to reflect appropriate remuneration. The district director may use the principles of § 1.482-2(b) in making the adjustments.

Example. (i) X and Y are related corporations which use Y as common paymaster for their executives. A is a concurrently employed executive who performs services during the first quarter of 1979 for X and Y. Y remunerates $4,000 gross pay every week to A, calculated as follows:

Wage payments	Remuneration X	Remuneration Y	Total	Tax on employers under section 3111	Tax on employees withheld under section 3102	Total
1	$ 3,000	$ 1,000	$ 4,000	$ 245.20	$ 245.20	$ 490.40
2-3	—	8,000	8,000	490.40	490.40	980.80
4	1,000	3,000	4,000	245.20	245.20	490.40
5	4,000	—	4,000	245.20	245.20	490.40
6	2,000	2,000	4,000	177.77	177.77	355.54
7-13	10,000	18,000	28,000	-0-	-0-	-0-
	$20,000	$32,000	$52,000	$1,403.77	$1,403.77	$2,807.54

The amounts of remuneration to A are determined by the district director to be appropriate. Under these facts, the tax is allocated to X and Y in the following amounts:

Wage payments	X	Y
1	$\frac{$3,000}{$4,000} \times $490.40 = $367.80$	$\frac{$1,000}{$4,000} \times $490.40 = $122.60$
2-3	—	$\frac{$8,000}{$8,000} \times $980.80 = $980.80$
4	$\frac{$1,000}{$4,000} \times $490.40 = $122.60$	$\frac{$3,000}{$4,000} \times $490.40 = $367.80$
5	$\frac{$4,000}{$4,000} \times $490.40 = $490.40$	—
6	$\frac{$2,000}{$4,000} \times $355.54 = $177.77$	$\frac{$2,000}{$4,000} \times $355.54 = $177.77$
7-13	$\frac{$10,000}{$28,000} \times$ -0- = -0-	$\frac{$18,000}{$28,000} \times$ -0- = -0-
	$1,158.57	$1,648.97

(ii) If Y remits none of the taxes to the Internal Revenue Service, X is liable for $2,452.00 (the entire amount due pursuant to sections 3102 and 3111 with respect to the remuneration to A from X) (12.26% × $20,000). Any amount remitted by X to the Internal Revenue Service under these circumstances is also credited against the liability of the common paymaster, Y. However, only the portion of the employment taxes allocated to X under (i) above may be deducted by X as employment taxes paid by it in respect of wages paid by it to its employees.

(iii) If Y remits $1,000.00 of the total $2,807.54 due, Y as common paymaster remains liable for $1,807.54 ($2,807.54 minus $1,000). X's liability is the lesser of $1,807.54 (the liability of the common paymaster), or X's total liability in the absence of section 3121(s), on wages paid through the common paymaster ($2,452.00) minus a credit for an allocable part of the amount remitted by Y. The part is $412.66

(tax remitted). Since $1,807.54 is less than $2,039.34 ($2,452.00 minus $412.66), X and Y are jointly and severally liable for $1,807.54.

(iii) Group-wide allocation rules. Under the group-wide method of allocation, the district director may allocate the taxes imposed by sections 3102 and 3111 in an appropriate manner to a related corporation that remunerates an employee through a common paymaster if the common paymaster fails to remit the taxes to the Internal Revenue Service. Allocation in an appropriate manner varies according to the circumstances. It may be based on sales, property, corporate payroll, or any other basis that reflects the distribution of the services performed by the employee, or a combination of the foregoing bases. To the extent practicable, the district director may use the principles of § 1.482-2(b) in making the allocation.

Par. 4. Section 31.3306(b)(1) and the historical note are deleted.

Par. 5. Section 31.3306(b)(1)-1 is amended by adding at the end of the portion of paragraph (a)(3) that precedes example (1) a sentence which reads as follows:

§ 31.3306(b)(1)-1 $3,000 limitation.

(a) In general. * * *

(3) * * * In connection with the annual wage limitation in the case of remuneration after December 31, 1978 from two or more related corporations that compensate an employee through a common paymaster, see § 31.3306(p)-1.

* * * * *

Par. 6. There is added immediately after § 31.3306(o)-1 the following new section:

(a) In general. For purposes of sections 3301, 3302, and 3306(b)(1), when two or more related corporations concurrently employ the same individual and compensate that individual through a common paymaster which is one of the related corporations for which the individual performs services, each of the corporations is considered to have paid only the remuneration it actually disburses to that individual (unless the disbursing corporation fails to remit the taxes due). Paragraphs (b) and (c) of § 31.3121(s)-1 contain rules defining related corporations, common paymasters, and concurrent employment, and rules for determining the liability of the other related corporations for employment taxes if the common paymaster fails to remit the taxes pursuant to sections 3102 and 3111, and for allocating these taxes among the related corporations. Those rules also apply to the tax under section 3301. For purposes of applying those rules to this section, references in those rules to sections 3111 are considered references to sections 3301 and 3302, and references to section 3121 are considered references to section 3306.

(b) Allocation of credit for contributions to State unemployment funds. A special rule for applying the rules of § 31.3121(s)-1 to this section applies if it is necessary to determine the ultimate liability of each related corporation for which services are performed in the event the common paymaster fails to remit the tax to the Internal Revenue Service. In determining the ultimate liability of a corporation, the credit for contributions to State unemployment funds that the corporation may claim under section 3302 is calculated as if each corporation were a separate employer.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Section 6694.—Understatement of Taxpayer's Liability by Income Tax Return Preparer

26 CFR 1.6694-1: Understatement of taxpayer's liability by income tax return preparer.

Return preparers; negligence penalty; failure to report minimum tax liability. Factual situations illustrate application of the penalty imposed by section 6694(a) of the Code to an income tax return preparer's failure to report a taxpayer's minimum tax liability.

Rev. Rul. 80-28

ISSUE

Does the penalty for negligent or intentional disregard of rules and regulations under section 6694(a) of the Internal Revenue Code apply where income tax return preparers failed to report the taxpayers' minimum tax on tax preference items in the situations described below?

Situation 1. An income tax return preparer failed to report on an individual taxpayer's income tax return for 1978, a minimum tax liability of $300 resulting from a net capital gain deduction shown on the taxpayer's return. The failure to report the minimum tax is an understatement of tax liability defined in section 6694(e).

The explanation given by the preparer for the failure to report the minimum tax was that the preparer believed the taxpayer would have some basis in the asset sold which would offset any minimum tax due. The preparer was unable to confirm a basis in the asset before filing the return.

Situation 2. The facts are the same as in situation 1, but the explanation given by the preparer for failure to report the minimum tax was that the failure was due to an oversight. The preparer contended that the oversight was not a deliberate understatement of the liability, and should not be considered as negligent or intentional disregard of rules and regulations.

Situation 3. The facts are the same in situation 1, but the explanation given by the preparer for failure to report the minimum tax was that the preparer was not aware of the minimum tax provisions. For this reason the preparer contended that the penalty for negligent or intentional disregard of rules and regulations should not apply.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 56(a) of the Code provides for the imposition of an income tax on certain items of tax preference. Section 57(a)(9)(A) treats as a tax preference item an amount equal to the net capital gain deduction for the taxable year determined under section 1202, and for taxable years ending prior to January 1, 1979, such item was taxed under section 56(a). For years beginning after December 31, 1978, such item is taxed under section 55 (relating to the alternative minimum tax).

Section 6694(a) of the Code provides that if any part of any understatement of liability with respect to any return is due to the negligent or intentional disregard of rules and regulations by any person who is an income tax return preparer with respect to such return, such person shall pay a penalty of $100 with respect to such return.

Under section 1.6694-1(a)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations, a preparer is not considered to have negligently or intentionally disregarded a rule or regulation if the preparer exercises due diligence in an effort to apply the rules and regulations to the information given to the preparer to determine the taxpayer's correct liability for tax.

Section 1.6694-1(a)(5) of the regulations places the burden of proof on the preparer when there is a question as to whether the preparer has negligently or intentionally disregarded a rule or regulation.

The penalty in section 6694(a) of the Code shall be applied in a manner similar to the penalty under section 6653. The section of the Conference Report on the Revenue Act of 1978 relating to Technical Corrections to the Tax Reform Act of 1976 states that the Internal Revenue Service shall reasonably interpret section 6694 (a) according to the standards of section 6653(a) and in the light of all the facts and circumstances of each case, taking into account any and all mitigating factors. H.R. Rep. No. 95-1800, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 284 (1978), 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 521, 618.

Under section 6653(a), negligence has been defined as the lack of due care in failing to do what a reasonable and ordinarily prudent person would do under the circumstances. Marcello v. Commissioner, 380 F. 2d 499, 506 (5th Cir. 1967).

In Situation 1, the preparer was aware of the minimum tax provisions but nevertheless failed to report the minimum tax based on an unsupported belief that the taxpayer's basis for the capital asset would offset the minimum tax due. This was not supported by the facts and circumstances because the preparer did not use a basis in the computation of the capital gain. Therefore, the preparer's belief that the taxpayer's basis for the capital asset would offset the minimum tax due is not sufficient to establish that the failure to report the minimum tax was not negligence.

In Situation 2, the preparer was aware of the minimum tax provisions and correctly claimed a capital gain deduction under section 1202 of the Code. Therefore, the preparer's explanation of oversight is not sufficient to establish that the omission was not negligence. Whether the preparer deliberately understated the taxpayer's liability, is not a factor in considering the application of the penalty under section 6694(a).

In Situation 3, the preparer did not do what a reasonably diligent preparer would have done under the circumstances. The minimum tax computation is not an unusual item. It is encountered frequently by return preparers. The instructions for an individual income tax return indicated the existence of the minimum tax provisions including the fact that capital gains were an item of tax preference. Therefore, it is clear that an adequate investigation into the tax consequences of the sale would have disclosed the minimum tax liability. An omission was clearly made by the preparer, and defense of error or ignorance of the law is not sufficient to establish that the omission was not negligence.

HOLDING

In all three situations, the preparers failed to exercise due diligence in applying the minimum tax provisions to the information provided. Therefore, the penalty for negligent or intentional disregard of rules and regulations under section 6694(a) of the Code applies in these situations.

as the context requires; and (g) the term "Contracting State" means the United States or the United Kingdom as the context requires.

(2) As regards the application of the Convention by a Contracting State, any term not otherwise defined shall, unless the context otherwise requires and subject to the provisions of Article 11 (Mutual Agreement Procedure), have the meaning which it has under the laws of that Contracting State relating to the taxes which are the subject of the Convention.

ARTICLE 4

FISCAL DOMICILE

(1) For the purposes of this Convention an individual was domiciled:

(a) in the United States: if he was a resident (domiciliary) thereof or if he was a national thereof and had been a resident (domiciliary) thereof at any time during the preceding three years; and

(b) in the United Kingdom: if he was domiciled in the United Kingdom in accordance with the law of the United Kingdom or is treated as so domiciled for the purpose of a tax which is the subject of this Convention.

(2) Where by reason of the provisions of paragraph (1) an individual was at any time domiciled in both Contracting States, and

(a) was a national of the United Kingdom but not of the United States, and

(b) had not been resident in the United States for Federal income tax purposes in seven or more of the ten taxable years ending with the year in which that time falls, he shall be deemed to be domiciled in the United Kingdom at that time.

(3) Where by reason of the provisions of paragraph (1) an individual was at any time domiciled in both Contracting States, and

(a) was a national of the United States but not of the United Kingdom, and

(b) had not been resident in the United Kingdom in seven or more of the ten income tax years of assessment ending with the year in which that time falls, he shall be deemed to be domiciled in the United States at that time. For the purposes of this paragraph, the question of whether a person was so resident shall be determined as for income tax purposes but without regard to any dwelling-house available to him in the United Kingdom for his use.

(4) Where by reason of the provisions of paragraph (1) an individual was domiciled in both Contracting States, then, subject to the provisions of paragraphs (2) and (3), his status shall be determined as follows:

(a) the individual shall be deemed to be domiciled in the Contracting State in which he had a permanent home available to him. If he had a permanent home available to him in both Contracting States, or in neither Contracting State, he shall be deemed to be domiciled in the Contracting State with which his personal and economic relations were closest (centre of vital interests);

(b) if the Contracting State in which the individual's centre of vital interests was located cannot be determined, he shall be deemed to be domiciled in the Contracting State in which he had an habitual abode;

(c) if the individual had an habitual abode in both Contracting States or in neither of them, he shall be deemed to be domiciled in the Contracting State of which he was a national; and

(d) if the individual was a national of both Contracting States or of neither of them, the competent authorities of the Contracting States shall settle the question by mutual agreement.

(5) An individual who was a resident (domiciliary) of a possession of the United States and who became a citizen of the United States solely by reason of his

(a) being a citizen of such possession, or

(b) birth or residence within such possession, shall be considered as neither domiciled in nor a national of the United States for the purposes of this Convention.

ARTICLE 5

TAXING RIGHTS

(1) (a) Subject to the provisions of Articles 6 (Immovable Property (Real Property)) and 7 (Business Property of a Permanent Establishment and Assets Pertaining to a Fixed Base Used for the Performance of Independent Personal Services) and the following paragraphs of this Article, if the decedent or transferor was domiciled in one of the Contracting States at the time of the death or transfer, property shall not be taxable in the other State.

(b) Sub-paragraph (a) shall not apply if at the time of the death or transfer the decedent or transferor was a national of that other State.

(2) Subject to the provisions of the said Articles 6 and 7, if at the time of the death or transfer the decedent or transferor was domiciled in neither Contracting State and was a national of one Contracting State (but not of both), property which is taxable in the Contracting State of which he was a national shall not be taxable in the other Contracting State.

(3) Paragraphs (1) and (2) shall not apply in the United States to property held in a generation-skipping trust or trust equivalent on the occasion of a generation-skipping transfer; but, subject to the provisions of the said Articles 6 and 7, tax shall not be imposed in the United States on such property if at the time when the transfer was made the deemed transferor was domiciled in the United Kingdom and was not a national of the United States.

(4) Paragraphs (1) and (2) shall not apply in the United Kingdom ~~to~~ property comprised in a settlement; but, subject to the provisions of the said Articles 6 and 7, tax shall not be imposed in the United Kingdom on such property if at the time when the settlement was made the settlor was domiciled in the United States and was not a national of the United Kingdom.

(5) If by reason of the preceding paragraphs of this Article any property would be taxable only in one Contracting State and tax, though chargeable, is not paid (otherwise than as a result of a specific exemption, deduction, exclusion, credit or allowance) in that State, tax may be imposed by reference to that property in the other Contracting State notwithstanding those paragraphs.

(6) If at the time of the death or transfer the decedent or transferor was domiciled in neither Contracting State and each State would regard any property as situated in its territory and in consequence tax would be imposed in both States, the competent authorities of the Contracting States shall determine the situs of the property by mutual agreement.

Article 6

IMMOVABLE PROPERTY (REAL PROPERTY)

(1) Immovable property (real property) may be taxed in the Contracting State in which such property is situated.

(2) The term "immovable property" shall be defined in accordance with the law of the Contracting State in which the property in question is situated, provided always that debts secured by mortgage or otherwise shall not be regarded as immovable property. The term shall in any case include property accessory to immovable property, livestock and equipment used in agriculture and forestry, rights to which the provisions of general law respecting landed property apply, usufruct of immovable property and rights to variable or fixed payments as consideration for the working of, or the right to work, mineral deposits, sources and other natural resources; ships, boats, and aircraft shall not be regarded as immovable property.

(3) The provisions of paragraphs (1) and (2) shall also apply to immovable property of an enterprise and to immovable property used for the performance of independent personal services.

Article 7

BUSINESS PROPERTY OF A PERMANENT ESTABLISHMENT AND ASSETS PERTAINING TO A FIXED BASE USED FOR THE PERFORMANCE OF INDEPENDENT PERSONAL SERVICES

(1) Except for assets referred to in Article 6 (Immovable Property (Real Property)) assets forming part of the business property of a permanent establishment of an enterprise may be taxed in the Contracting State in which the permanent establishment is situated.

(2)(a) For the purposes of this Convention, the term "permanent establishment" means a fixed place of business through which the business of an enterprise is wholly or partly carried on.

(b) The term "permanent establishment" includes especially:

(i) a branch;

(ii) an office;

(iii) a factory;

(iv) a workshop; and

(v) a mine, an oil or gas well, a quarry, or any other place of extraction of natural resources.

(c) A building site or construction or installation project constitutes a permanent establishment only if it lasts for more than twelve months.

(d) Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this paragraph, the term "permanent establishment" shall be deemed not to include:

(i) the use of facilities solely for the purpose of storage, display or delivery of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise;

(ii) the maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise solely for the purpose of storage, display or delivery;

(iii) the maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise solely for the purpose of processing by another enterprise;

(iv) the maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for the purpose of purchasing goods or merchandise, or of collecting information, for the enterprise;

(v) the maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for the purpose of carrying on, for the enterprise, any other activity of a preparatory or auxiliary character; or

(vi) the maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for any combination of activities mentioned in paragraphs (i)—(v) of this sub-paragraph.

(e) Notwithstanding the provisions of sub-paragraphs (a) and (b) where a person—other than an agent of an independent status to whom sub-paragraph (f) applies—is acting on behalf of an enterprise and has, and habitually exercises, in a Contracting State an authority to conclude contracts in the name of the enterprise, that enterprise shall be deemed to have a permanent establishment in that State in respect of any activities which that person undertakes for the enterprise, unless the activities of such person are limited to those mentioned in sub-paragraph (d) which, if exercised through a fixed place of business, would not make this fixed place of business a permanent establishment under the provisions of that sub-paragraph.

(f) An enterprise shall not be deemed to have a permanent establishment in a Contracting State merely because it carries on business in that State through a broker, general commission agent or any other agent of an independent status, provided that such persons are acting in the ordinary course of their business.

(g) The fact that a company which is a resident of a Contracting State controls or is controlled by a company which is a resident of the other Contracting State or which carries on business in that other State (whether through a permanent establishment or otherwise) shall not of itself constitute either company a permanent establishment of the other.

(3) Except for assets described in Article 6 (Immovable Property (Real Property)), assets pertaining to a fixed base used for the performance of independent personal services may be taxed in the Contracting State in which the fixed base is situated.

Article 8

DEDUCTIONS, EXEMPTIONS, ETC.

(1) In determining the amount on which tax is to be computed, permitted deductions shall be allowed in accordance with the law in force in the Contracting State in which tax is imposed.

(2) Property which passes to the spouse from a decedent or transferor who was domiciled in or a national of the United Kingdom and which may be taxed in the United States shall qualify for a marital deduction there to the extent that a marital deduction would have been allowable if the decedent or transferor had been domiciled in the United States and if the gross estate of the decedent had been limited to property which may be taxed in the United States or the transfers of the transferor had been limited to transfers of property which may be so taxed.

(3) Property which passes to the spouse from a decedent or transferor who was domiciled in or a national of the United States and which may be taxed in the United Kingdom shall, where

(a) the transferor's spouse was not domiciled in the United Kingdom but the transfer would have been wholly exempt had the spouse been so domiciled, and be exempt from tax in the United Kingdom to the extent of 50 per cent of the value transferred, calculated as a value on which no tax is payable and after taking account of all exemptions except those for transfers between spouses.

(4) (a) Property which on the death of a decedent domiciled in the United Kingdom became comprised in a settlement shall, if the personal representatives and the trustees of every settlement in which the decedent had an interest in possession immediately before death so elect and subject to sub-paragraph (b), be exempt from tax in the United Kingdom to the extent of 50 per cent of the value transferred (calculated as in paragraph (3)) on the death of the decedent if:

(i) under the settlement, the spouse of the decedent was entitled to an immediate interest in possession,

(ii) the spouse was domiciled in or a national of the United States,

(iii) the transfer would have been wholly exempt had the spouse been domiciled in the United Kingdom, and

(iv) a greater exemption for transfers between spouses would not have been given under the law of the United Kingdom apart from this Convention.

(b) Where the spouse of the decedent becomes absolutely and indefeasibly entitled to any of the settled property at any time after the decedent's death, the election shall, as regards that property, be deemed never to have been made and tax shall be payable as if on the death such property had been given to the spouse absolutely and indefeasibly.

(5) Where property may be taxed in the United States on the death of a United Kingdom national who was neither domiciled in nor a national of the United States and a claim is made under this paragraph, the tax imposed in the United States shall be limited to the amount of tax which would have been imposed had the decedent become domiciled in the United States immediately before his death, on the property which would in that event have been taxable.

CREDITS

(1) Where under this Convention the United States may impose tax with respect to any property other than property which the United States is entitled to tax in accordance with Article 6 (Immovable Property (Real Property)) or 7 (Business Property of a Permanent Establishment and Assets Pertaining to a Fixed Base Used for the Performance of Independent Personal Services) (that is, where the decedent or transferor was domiciled in or a national of the United States), then, except in cases to which paragraph (3) applies, double taxation shall be avoided in the following manner:

(a) Where the United Kingdom imposes tax with respect to property in accordance with the said Article 6 or 7, the United States shall credit against the tax calculated according to its law with respect to that property an amount equal to the tax paid in the United Kingdom with respect to that property.

(b) Where the United Kingdom imposes tax with respect to property not referred to in sub-paragraph (a) and the decedent or transferor was a national of the United States and was domiciled in the United Kingdom at the time of the death or transfer, the United States shall credit against the tax calculated according to its law with respect to that property an amount equal to the tax paid in the United Kingdom with respect to that property.

(2) Where under this Convention the United Kingdom may impose tax with respect to any property other than property which the United Kingdom is entitled to tax in accordance with the said Article 6 or 7 (that is, where the decedent or transferor was domiciled in or a national of the United Kingdom), then, except in the cases to which paragraph (3) applies, double taxation shall be avoided in the following manner:

(a) Where the United States imposes tax with respect to property in accordance with the said Article 6 or 7, the United Kingdom shall credit against the tax calculated according to its law with respect to that property an amount equal to the tax paid in the United States with respect to that property.

(b) Where the United States imposes tax with respect to property not referred to in sub-paragraph (a) and the decedent or transferor was a national of the United Kingdom and was domiciled in the United States at the time of the death or transfer, the United Kingdom shall credit against the tax calculated according to its law with respect to that property an amount equal to the tax paid in the United States with respect to that property.

(3) Where both Contracting States impose tax on the same event with respect to property which under the law of the United States would be regarded as property held in a trust or trust equivalent and under the law of the United Kingdom would be regarded as property comprised in a settlement, double taxation shall be avoided in the following manner:

(a) Where a Contracting State imposes tax with respect to property in accordance with the said Article 6 or 7, the other Contracting State shall credit against the tax calculated according to its law with respect to that property an amount equal to the tax paid in the first-mentioned Contracting State with respect to that property.

(b) Where the United States imposes tax with respect to property which is not taxable in accordance with the said Article 6 or 7 then

(i) where the event giving rise to a liability to tax was a generation-skipping transfer and the deemed transferor was domiciled in the United States at the time of that event,

(ii) where the event giving rise to a liability to tax was the exercise or lapse of a power of appointment and the holder of the power was domiciled in the United States at the time of that event, or

(iii) where (i) or (ii) does not apply and the settlor or grantor was domiciled in the United States at the time when the tax is imposed, the United Kingdom shall credit against the tax calculated according to its law with respect to that property an amount equal to the tax paid in the United States with respect to that property.

(c) Where the United States imposes tax with respect to property which is not taxable in accordance with the said Article 6 or 7 and sub-paragraph (b) does not apply, the United States shall credit against the tax calculated according to its law with respect to that property an amount equal to the tax paid in the United Kingdom with respect to that property.

(4) The credits allowed by a Contracting State according to the provisions of paragraphs (1), (2) and (3) shall not take into account amounts of such taxes not levied by reason of a credit otherwise allowed by the other Contracting State. No credit shall be finally allowed under those paragraphs until the tax (reduced by any credit allowable with respect thereto) for which the credit is allowable has been paid. Any credit allowed under those paragraphs shall not, however, exceed the part of the tax paid in a Contracting State (as computed before the credit is given but reduced by any credit for other tax) which is attributable to the property with respect to which the credit is given.

(5) Any claim for a credit or for a refund of tax founded on the provisions of the present Convention shall be made within six years from the date of the event giving rise to a liability to tax or, where later, within one year from the last date on which tax for which credit is given is due. The competent authority may, in appropriate circumstances, extend this time where the final determination of the taxes which are the subject of the claim for credit is delayed.

NON-DISCRIMINATION

(1)(a) Subject to the provisions of sub-paragraph (b), nationals of a Contracting State shall not be subjected in the other State to any taxation or any requirement connected therewith which is other or more burdensome than the taxation and connected requirements to which nationals of that other State in the same circumstances are or may be subjected.

(b) Sub-paragraph (a) shall not prevent the United States from taxing a national of the United Kingdom, who is not domiciled in the United States, as a non-resident alien under its law, subject to the provisions of paragraph (5) of Article 8 (Deductions, Exemptions, Etc).

(2) The taxation on a permanent establishment which an enterprise of a Contracting State has in the other Contracting State shall not be less favourably levied in that other State than the taxation levied on enterprises of that other State carrying on the same activities.

(3) Nothing contained in this Article shall be construed as obliging either Contracting State to grant to individuals not domiciled in that Contracting State any personal allowances, reliefs and reductions for taxation purposes which are granted to individuals so domiciled.

(4) Enterprises of a Contracting State, the capital of which is wholly or partly owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by one or more residents of the other Contracting State, shall not be subjected in the first-mentioned Contracting State to any taxation or any requirement connected therewith which is other or more burdensome than the taxation and connected requirements to which other similar enterprises of the first-mentioned State are or may be subjected.

(5) The provisions of this Article shall apply to taxes which are the subject of this Convention.

ARTICLE 11

MUTUAL AGREEMENT PROCEDURE

(1) Where a person considers that the actions of one or both of the Contracting States result or will result in taxation not in accordance with the provisions of this Convention, he may, irrespective of the remedies provided by the domestic laws of those States, present his case to the competent authority of either Contracting State.

(2) The competent authority shall endeavour, if the objection appears to it to be justified and if it is not itself able to arrive at an appropriate solution, to resolve the case by mutual agreement with the competent authority of the other Contracting State, with a view to the avoidance of taxation not in accordance with the Convention. Where an agreement has been reached, a refund as appropriate shall be made to give effect to the agreement.

(3) The competent authorities of the Contracting States shall endeavour to resolve by mutual agreement any difficulties or doubts arising as to the interpretation or application of the Convention. In particular the competent authorities of the Contracting States may reach agreement on the meaning of the terms not otherwise defined in this Convention.

(4) The competent authorities of the Contracting States may communicate with each other directly for the purpose of reaching an agreement as contemplated by this Convention.

Article 12

EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION

The competent authorities of the Contracting States shall exchange such information (being information available under the respective taxation laws of the Contracting States) as is necessary for the carrying out of the provisions of this Convention or for the prevention of fraud or the administration of statutory provisions against legal avoidance in relation to the taxes which are the subject of this Convention. Any information so exchanged shall be treated as secret and shall not be disclosed to any persons other than persons (including a court or administrative body) concerned with the assessment, enforcement, collection, or prosecution in respect of the taxes which are the subject of the Convention. No information shall be exchanged which would disclose any trade, business, industrial or professional secret or any trade process.

Article 13

EFFECT ON DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR OFFICIALS AND DOMESTIC LAW

(1) Nothing in this Convention shall affect the fiscal privileges of diplomatic or consular officials under the general rules of international law or under the provisions of special agreements.

(2) This Convention shall not restrict in any manner any exclusion, exemption, deduction, credit, or other allowance now or hereafter accorded by the laws of either Contracting State.

Article 14

ENTRY INTO FORCE

(1) This Convention shall be subject to ratification in accordance with the applicable procedures of each Contracting State and instruments of ratification shall be exchanged at Washington as soon as possible.

(2) This Convention shall enter into force immediately after the expiration of thirty days following the date on which the instruments of ratification are exchanged, and shall thereupon have effect:

(a) in the United States in respect of estates of individuals dying and transfers taking effect after that date; and

(b) in the United Kingdom in respect of property by reference to which there is a charge to tax which arises after that date.

(3) Subject to the provisions of paragraph (4) of this Article, the Convention between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Fiscal Evasion with respect to Taxes on the Estates of Deceased Persons signed at Washington on 16 April 1945 (hereinafter referred to as "the 1945 Convention") [T.D. 5565, 1947-1 C.B. 125] shall cease to have effect in respect of property to which this Convention in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (2) of this Article applies.

(4) Where on a death before 27 March 1981 any provision of the 1945 Convention would have afforded any greater relief from tax than this Convention in respect of that provision shall continue to have effect in the United Kingdom in relation to that gift or settled property.

(a) any gift inter vivos made by the decedent before 27 March 1974, or

(b) any settled property in which the decedent had a beneficial interest in possession before 27 March 1974 but not at any time thereafter,

(5) The 1945 Convention shall terminate on the last date on which it has effect in accordance with the foregoing provisions of this Article.

Article 15

TERMINATION

(1) This Convention shall remain in force until terminated by one of the Contracting States. Either Contracting State may terminate this Convention, at any time after five years from the date on which the Convention enters into force provided that at least six months' prior notice has been given through the diplomatic channel. In such event the Convention shall cease to have effect at the end of the period specified in the notice, but shall continue to apply in respect of the estate of any individual dying before the end of that period and in respect of any event (other than death) occurring before the end of that period and giving rise to liability to tax under the laws of either Contracting State.

(2) The termination of the present Convention shall not have the effect of reviving any treaty or arrangement abrogated by the present Convention or by treaties previously concluded between the Contracting States.

ESTATE AND GIFT TAX TREATY WITH THE UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND NORTHERN IRELAND

Mr. Church, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, submitted the following report to accompany Ex. R, 96th Cong., 1st sess.

The Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the Estate and Gift Tax Treaty with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland [1] for the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of fiscal evasion with respect to taxes on estates of deceased persons and on gifts ("the proposed treaty"), having considered the same, reports favorably thereon without reservation and recommends that the Senate give its advice and consent to ratification thereof.

I. PURPOSE

The purpose of the proposed estate and gift tax treaty between the United States and the United Kingdom is to alleviate double taxation on the estates and gifts of citizens and domiciliaries of both countries by modifying the jurisdictional rules of estate and gift taxation with respect to these individuals.

II. BACKGROUND

The proposed treaty was signed by the United States and the United Kingdom on October 19, 1978 and has been submitted to the Senate for advice and consent to its ratification. The treaty was transmitted to the Senate on May 2, 1979.

The portion of the proposed treaty dealing with estate taxation will replace the existing estate tax treaty between the United States and the United Kingdom [T.D. 5565, 1947-1 C.B. 125], which has been in force since July 25, 1946. There is no existing gift tax treaty between the two countries.

[2] III. SUMMARY OF TREATY

The proposed treaty will alleviate double taxation on gifts and estates of U.S. citizens and domiciliaries and U.K. domiciliaries by permitting each asset held by an estate or each gift to be subject to primary tax jurisdiction in only one of the two countries. This is accomplished in the treaty by allowing both countries to impose their tax but requiring one of the countries to allow a credit against its tax for the taxes paid to the other country. In most situations, the treaty allows the country of domicile to assert primary tax jurisdiction. However, the situs country is given a priority of taxation in the case of real property and business property (i.e., assets of a permanent establishment or a fixed base) which are located in that country.

The treaty provides that the domicile of an individual will be determined separately under the laws of each country. If only one of the two countries treats the individual as a domiciliary under its domestic laws, then that is the country of domicile for purposes of the treaty. However, if both countries treat the individual as a domiciliary under their domestic laws, then the treaty sets forth an extensive set of rules to select one of the countries as the individual's domicile for purposes of establishing primary tax jurisdiction under the treaty. The approach used in this set of rules is to recognize that where an individual domiciled in both countries is a national of one of the two countries and has been resident for only a limited period of time in the other country, his ties with the country of residence are not sufficient to justify the assertion of primary tax jurisdiction by that country. However, where an individual has been domiciled in both countries for a substantial period of time, the country with which he has his closest ties (such as the place of his permanent home) has the greater claim to domicile and, thus, primary tax jurisdiction will generally be allowed to that country.

[3] IV. DATE OF ENTRY INTO FORCE AND TERMINATION

Entry into force

The proposed treaty will enter into force on the 31st day following the date on which the instruments of ratification are exchanged. With certain limited exceptions, the existing treaty will terminate on the date this treaty enters into force. Where an individual dies before March 27, 1981, and the existing treaty would afford a greater relief from taxes than the proposed treaty for certain gifts or transfers in trust made before March 27, 1974, the provisions of the existing treaty will apply in the United Kingdom.

Termination

The proposed treaty will continue in force indefinitely but either country may terminate it as of the close of any calendar year which ends at least 5 years after the convention enters into force. The treaty will terminate on the date specified in the notice but not earlier than 6 months after the notice was given. However, the treaty will continue to apply to any estates or gifts which come under the jurisdiction of this treaty before it was terminated.

[4] V. COMMITTEE ACTION

The Committee on Foreign Relations held a public hearing on the proposed U.K. estate and gift tax treaty and on other proposed tax treaties on June 6, 1979. The Committee considered the proposed treaty on June 12, 1979, and ordered it favorably reported by a vote of 13 yeas, no nays, with the recommendations that the Senate give its advice and consent to ratification of the treaty.

VI. BUDGET IMPACT

The Committee estimates that the effect of the proposed treaty on budget receipts will be negligible.

In accordance with the objectives of section 403 of the Budget Act the Committee advises that the Director of the Congressional Budget Office has examined the Committee's budget estimate and agrees that the effect on budget receipts will be negligible. In keeping with the spirit of section 308 (a) of the Budget Act, and after consultation with the Director of the Congressional Budget Office, the Committee states that the treaty does not provide any new budget authority or any new or increased tax expenditures.

[5] VII. EXPLANATION OF TREATY PROVISIONS

A comprehensive article-by-article explanation of the proposed U.S.-U.K. estate and gift tax treaty is set forth below.

Article 1. Estates and gifts covered

The proposed treaty will apply to any person who is subject to the U.S. gift or estate tax, including the tax on generation-skipping transfers, or the U.K. capital transfer tax. Thus, the proposed treaty will apply, in general, to estates of decedents who were domiciled in the United Kingdom at the time of their death and to estates that are subject to tax in the United States because the decedent was a citizen or domiciliary of the United States at the time of his death. The treaty will also apply to estates of decedents who had property situated in the United States or the United Kingdom at the time of their death.

With respect to gifts, the treaty applies to gifts made while the donor was a domiciliary of the United Kingdom and to gifts which are subject to tax in the United States because the donor was a citizen or domiciliary of the United States when the gift was made. The treaty also applies to gifts of property where the property was situated in the United States or the United Kingdom at the time of the gift.

The proposed treaty applies to the U.S. estate tax, gift tax, and the tax on generation-skipping transfers.

The United States imposes its estate tax on the worldwide assets of estates of persons who were citizens or domiciliaries of the United States at the time of their death, and on property belonging to nondomiciliaries of the United States which is located in the United States at the time of their death. The U.S. gift tax is imposed on all gifts made by U.S. citizens and domiciliaries, and on gifts of property made by nondomiciliaries where the property is located in the United States at the time of the gift.

The U.S. tax on generation-skipping transfers was enacted in 1976 to prevent the transfer of the use of property among generations of the transferor's descendants without the payment of gift or estate taxes. In general, the tax on generation-skipping transfers is imposed when property passes through a trust from persons of one generation to persons of another generation and the transfer is not otherwise subject to estate or gift tax.

The proposed treaty applies to the U.K. capital transfer tax. The capital transfer tax is imposed on the worldwide assets of persons domiciled in the United Kingdom at the time of their death, and on property of nondomiciliaries of the United Kingdom where the property is located in the United Kingdom at the time of such person's death. The capital transfer tax applies to all gifts made by per-[6]sons domiciled in the United Kingdom, and to property of nondomiciliaries that is located in the United Kingdom at the time of the gift.

As is generally true in the case of other U.S. estate tax treaties, the proposed treaty does not apply to death or gift taxes imposed by state or local governments. In addition, the proposed treaty does not apply to death or gift taxes imposed by state or local governments. In addition, the proposed treaty provides that it will apply to any substantially similar taxes on estates, inheritances and gifts that either country may subsequently impose. The competent authorities of both countries are required to notify each other in the case of any substantial changes in their estate, inheritance or gift tax laws.

Article 3. General definitions

The standard definitions generally found in most existing U.S. estate tax treaties are contained in the proposed treaty.

The United States is defined to mean the United States of America and specifically excludes U.S. possessions or territories. The United Kingdom means Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

Several provisions of the treaty are discussed in terms of "nationals." U.S. nationals are defined to be U.S. citizens. A U.K. national is any citizen of the United Kingdom and Colonies, or any British subject not possessing that citizenship or the citizenship of any other Commonwealth country or territory, provided that in either case he had the right of abode in the United Kingdom at the time of death or the time of the gift.

The proposed treaty also contains the standard provision that undefined terms are to have the meaning which they have under the applicable tax laws of the country applying the treaty. In addition, it is further provided (Article 11) that where a term is defined in a different manner by the two countries, then the competent authorities of the two countries may establish a common meaning of the term in order to prevent double taxation or to further any other purposes of the proposed treaty.

The concept of domicile is important under the proposed treaty because the country of domicile has, under the treaty, primary tax jurisdiction on all property other than the property subject to situs taxation. The country of domicile is initially determined by the domestic laws of each country. However, in those situations where both countries would treat an individual as a domiciliary, the treaty sets forth rules for establishing the country of domicile for purposes of the taxes covered by this treaty.

The proposed treaty provides that a person will be a domiciliary of the United States if he is a "resident (domiciliary)" of the United States. Article 3(2) of the treaty states that terms not defined in the treaty generally are defined by the domestic law of the country to which the term applies. Since the term "resident," as it applies to U.S. persons, is not defined in the treaty, it will be defined under the U.S. estate and gift tax law. Under the estate and gift tax regulations (sections 20.0-1(b)(1) and 25.2501-1(b) respectively) a resident of the United States is defined as a person who had his domicile in the United States at the time of his death or at the time of the gift. The regulations go on to state that, "a person acquires a domicile in a [7] place by living there, for even a brief period of time, with no definite present intention of later removing therefrom. Residence without the requisite intention to remain indefinitely will not suffice to constitute domicile, nor will intention to change domicile effect such a change unless accomplished by actual removal." Domicile for the U.S. estate and gift tax law is a matter of Federal law and it is not determined with reference to state law and it does not incorporate any presumption that the domicile of one spouse controls the domicile of the other spouse.

The treaty also states that a U.S. citizen who was domiciled in the United States at any time within the preceding three years will also be considered a U.S. domiciliary.

The treaty provides that a person will be treated as a domiciliary of the United Kingdom if he was a U.K. domiciliary under general U.K. law or if he was treated as a U.K. domiciliary for purposes of the capital transfer tax. Under the capital transfer tax, a person is treated as a U.K. domiciliary if:

1. He was domiciled in the United Kingdom within three years preceding the date of death or the date the gift was made;

2. He was resident in the United Kingdom in not less than seventeen of the twenty income tax years which end with the income tax year in which the person died or in which the gift was made; or

3. He became, and has remained, a domiciliary of the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man, and he was a United Kingdom domiciliary immediately prior to that.

To provide relief from double taxation where the individual is considered domiciled in both countries under the general rules described above, the proposed treaty provides a series of rules designed to establish a single country of domicile for the individual for purposes of the taxes covered by the treaty. The country so selected will then have the primary tax jurisdiction with respect to the worldwide estate of the decedent or with respect to his worldwide gifts, other than real property and assets of a permanent establishment or a fixed base situated in the other country. As described below, these rules are based on the concept that primary tax jurisdiction should be exercised either by the country of nationality, if the dual domicile individual has not been resident in the other country for a substantial period of time prior to his death or the making of the gift, or by the country in which he has his most significant contacts if that nationality test is not determinative.

Under the first of these rules, if the individual is a national of the United Kingdom and not the United States, and has been a resident of the United States for Federal income tax purposes in less than 7 years during the 10-year period ending with the year of death or the gift, he will be considered a United Kingdom domiciliary. Conversely, if the individual is a U.S. national only and has been resident in the United Kingdom for less than 7 of the 10 income tax years of assessment which end with the year of death or the gift, he will be considered a U.S. domiciliary.

It is contemplated that this rule will resolve the great majority of dual domicile situations. However, if a dual domicile problem still [8] remains after application of these rules, the proposed treaty provides four additional rules to determine domicile. The rules (applied in the order presented) provide that the individual will be considered domiciled in the country (1) in which he had a permanent home available to him, (2) in which his personal and economic relations were the closest (center of vital interests), (3) in which he had a habitual abode, or (4) in which he was a national. In cases where an individual's domicile cannot be determined by these tests, then the competent authorities of the countries are to settle the question by mutual agreement.

The proposed treaty does not treat certain residents of U.S. possessions as U.S. nationals or domiciliaries. These are individuals who acquired U.S. citizenship solely because they were citizens of a possession or because they were born in a possession or were residents of a possession. Under U.S. tax law (Code sec. 2209 and sec. 2501 (c)), these individuals are not taxed by the United States on their worldwide estates and gifts, so protection against double taxation is generally unnecessary. Accordingly, the proposed treaty will not apply to estates or gifts of these individuals, unless it is applicable by reason of their being domiciled in the United Kingdom.

Article 5. Taxing rights

This article sets forth the general treaty rule that the country of domicile, as determined under the treaty, has the primary tax jurisdiction over the estates or gifts of its domiciliaries, other than the property specifically reserved for situs taxation. The proposed treaty generally provides that property, other than real property and assets of a permanent establishment or a fixed base in the other country, may only be subject to tax in the country of domicile of the decedent or donor.

However, this rule does not apply if the domiciliary was a national of the other country. Since the United States imposes its tax on the basis of citizenship (the United Kingdom does not) as well as domicile, there is still the possibility of double taxation if an individual is a U.S. citizen and a U.K. domiciliary. The possibility of double taxation in this situation is alleviated under the tax credit structure discussed in Article 9.

The treaty provides a special rule for a person who is a national of only one of the countries but who is not a domiciliary of either country. Property, other than property subject to situs country taxation under the treaty, which belongs to such a person and which is subject to tax in the country of which he is a national will not be subject to tax in the other country. Thus, property situated in the United Kingdom of a U.S. citizen, who is not domiciled in the United States or in the United Kingdom, which is subject to tax in the United States will not be subject to tax in the United Kingdom unless it is real property or assets of a permanent establishment or fixed base located in the United Kingdom.

This article also provides special rules regarding trusts. The United States agrees not to impose a tax on generation-skipping transfers where the deemed transferor was a U.K. domiciliary and is not a U.S. national. Conversely, the United Kingdom will not impose a [9] tax on property placed in a trust if the settlor was a U.S. domiciliary and was not a U.K. national. These rules do not limit the rules of situs country taxation under this treaty.

If the above rules of this article result in only one country's having the right to impose a tax but that tax is not paid, the other country may impose its tax on property within that country. However, if the tax is not paid because of a specific exemption, deduction, exclusion, credit or allowance, this rule will not apply.

This article provides that the competent authorities will determine the situs of property by mutual agreement in the case of property belonging to a person who was not domiciled in either country where the property was regarded by both countries as situated within its boundaries and thus subject to its tax.

Article 6. Immovable property (real property)

Under the proposed treaty, immovable property (real property) is one of two types of property over which the situs country, rather than the country of domicile, has primary tax jurisdiction. The other type is assets of a permanent establishment or fixed base (Article 7).

The determination of whether an item of property is immovable property (real property) is to be made under the laws of the country in which the property is located. Although U.S. law does not define "immovable property (real property)," that term for U.S. purposes is considered to mean real property. It is further provided that immovable property (real property) does not include claims secured by real property (such as mortgages).

Immovable property (real property) is specifically defined to include:

1. Property accessory to immovable property;
2. Livestock and equipment used in agriculture and forestry;
3. Rights to which the provisions of general law respecting landed property apply;
4. Usufruct of immovable property; and
5. Rights to variable or fixed payments as consideration for the working of, or the right to work, mineral deposits, sources and other natural resources.

This article also applies to the immovable property held by an enterprise or used for the performance of independent personal services.

Article 7. Business property of a permanent establishment and assets pertaining to a fixed base used for the performance of independent personal services

Under the proposed treaty, the second type of property owned by a nondomiciliary over which the situs country has primary tax jurisdiction is the business assets of a permanent establishment which is located in the situs country and the assets of a fixed base which is situated in that country and is used for the performance of independent personal services. The real property of a permanent establishment or fixed base is to be taxed by the country in which the property is situated, as provided in Article 6.

The proposed treaty contains a definition of the term "permanent establishment" which is similar to the definition found in recent U.S. income tax treaties. Generally, any fixed place of business through which [10] a person engages in a trade or business is considered a permanent establishment. A fixed place of business generally includes an office, branch, factory, workshop, place of extraction of natural resources, and any building site or construction or installation project which exists for more than 12 months. This general rule is modified by providing that a fixed place of business which is used for certain activities specified in the treaty will not be considered a permanent establishment. These activities include, for example, the warehousing of goods for purposes of storage, display, or delivery. They also include the maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for the purpose of purchasing merchandise or collecting information.

The proposed treaty also provides that a person will generally be deemed to have a permanent establishment in a country if he had an agent in that country who had and habitually exercised a general contracting authority (other than for the purchase of goods or merchandise) in that country. This agency rule does not apply, however, if the agent is a broker, general commission agent, or any other agent of an independent status, provided the agent is acting in the ordinary course of his business.

A company will not be held to have a permanent establishment in one of the countries solely because it controls or is controlled by a company which is a resident of that country.

Article 8. Deductions, exemptions, etc.

This article provides that in computing the tax imposed by either country, deductions will be allowed in keeping with the law in force in that country at the time.

Under this article, if property is passed to a spouse by a donor or decedent who is a U.K. national or domiciliary and if such property is subject to tax in the United States, then the spouse will be entitled to a marital deduction in computing the U.S. tax. The marital deduction is limited to the amount that would have been allowed as a marital deduction if the decedent or donor had been domiciled in the United States and the U.S. gross estate was limited to the amount of property which is subject to tax in the United States.

Under the treaty, the United Kingdom allows a similar benefit to spouses of U.S. nationals or domiciliaries. In this case, the United Kingdom allows an exemption equal to 50 percent of the value of the property where a decedent or donor is a U.S. national or domiciliary and transfers property to his spouse, provided that his spouse is not domiciled in the United Kingdom and that the transfer would have been wholly exempt under U.K. domestic law if the spouse had been domiciled in the United Kingdom.

The United Kingdom also allows an exemption for transfers to a trust, upon the death of the decedent, in which the spouse who is a U.S. national or domiciliary has a life estate. If the decedent is a U.K. domiciliary and the spouse is entitled to an immediate interest in possession of property that would have been wholly exempt if such spouse had been a U.K.

domiciliary then 50 percent of the value transferred to the spouse will be exempt from taxation in the United Kingdom. Two further conditions to this exemption are that the trustees of all trusts in which the decedent had an interest must elect to be included in this provision and if the spouse subsequently becomes in-[11]defeasibly entitled to any of the trust property the exemptions will be revoked as to that property.

This article also provides that where property of a U.K. national, who was not a U.S. national or domiciliary, is subject to U.S. estate taxation, the U.S. tax on that property will not be greater than the U.S. tax which would have been imposed on the decedent's worldwide assets if he had been a U.S. domiciliary at his death.

Article 9. Credits

The proposed treaty provides a series of rules to determine the amount of tax credits which will be allowed by each country in cases where a person's property is subject to tax by both countries. These rules determine the priority of the countries' rights to tax property in the sense that the country which grants a credit for the other country's tax, in effect, is exercising a secondary, rather than a primary, taxing jurisdiction. These credit rules, in conjunction with the limitations imposed by the proposed treaty on situs country taxation and on the ability of a country to tax the worldwide estate of a decedent, constitute the approach employed in the proposed treaty to avoid double taxation.

In general, the proposed treaty provides for two credit rules to alleviate double taxation. The first credit rule provides that the country in which a person was domiciled, or of which he was a citizen, will allow a credit for the taxes imposed by the other country on that person's real property and business property of a permanent establishment or fixed base which is situated in that other country.

In cases where both countries tax the estate of an individual on a worldwide basis because he was a citizen of one country and a domiciliary of the other country, the second credit rule of the proposed treaty generally provides for the allowance of an additional tax credit by the country in which the decedent was not domiciled. Thus, the non-domiciliary country, which is the country of citizenship, yields primary taxing jurisdiction to the country of domicile. However, if the tax of the country of citizenship exceeds the tax of the country of domicile the excess will be collected by the country of citizenship.

In resolving double taxation on trusts, the two countries use a credit mechanism almost identical to the one used for nontrust transfers. Where both countries impose a tax on a trust's real property and assets of a permanent establishment or fixed base which is located in one of the countries, the non-situs country will allow a credit for taxes paid to the situs country on that property. On all other property, where the transferor was a U.S. domiciliary, the United States will have the right of primary tax jurisdiction over the property, and the United Kingdom will allow a credit against its tax for the U.S. taxes paid on such property. In situations where the transferor was a U.K. domiciliary, the United Kingdom will have the right of primary tax jurisdiction over such other property and the United States will allow a credit for the U.K. taxes paid on such property.

The total amount of credits which one country will allow under the treaty is limited to that portion of its tax which is attributable to the property for which a credit is allowable under the treaty. As is the case under existing U.S. estate tax treaties, the proposed treaty further provides that credits allowed by a country under its domestic law [12] against its tax are to be subtracted from the gross tax imposed by that country in order to determine the tax imposed by it which is creditable against the other country's tax or against which the other country's tax may be credited.

A credit will not be finally allowed under the proposed treaty until the tax for which the credit is claimed has been paid. The proposed treaty allows a taxpayer to file a claim for credit or refund within 6 years from the date of death or the date of the gift, or within one year from the last day a tax (for which a credit is given) was due, whichever comes later. The competent authorities of the two countries may extend this time limit where the final determination of taxes (for which a credit is claimed) has been delayed.

Article 10. Non-discrimination

This article provides that one country will not impose more burdensome taxation on certain specified persons and entities of the other country than it would impose on its own similarly situated persons and entities. The parties covered are nationals of the other country, permanent establishments of enterprises of the other country, and enterprises owned or controlled in whole or in part by residents of the other country.

This article generally does not restrict the right of the United States to tax a United Kingdom national who is not domiciled in the United States as a nonresident alien under its law. It also does not require either country to grant to nondomiciliaries personal allowances, reliefs, and reductions that such country grants to its domiciliaries.

Articles 11 and 12. Administrative provisions

The proposed treaty contains various administrative provisions which are generally found in other U.S. tax treaties. In general, the proposed treaty provides—

(1) For consultation and negotiation between the competent authorities of the two countries to resolve differences arising in the interpretation or application of the proposed treaty and also to resolve claims by taxpayers that they are being subjected to taxation contrary to the proposed treaty;

(2) For the exchange between the countries of legal information and information necessary to carry out the provisions of the proposed treaty or the tax laws of one of the countries, insofar as its taxation is in accordance with the proposed treaty, or to prevent fraud or fiscal evasion with respect to the taxes covered by the proposed treaty.

Any information which is exchanged shall be treated as secret and shall not be disclosed to anyone other than persons involved in assessment, enforcement, collection or prosecution in respect of the taxes which are the subject of this treaty. Also, no information will be exchanged which would disclose any trade, business, industrial or professional secret or any trade process.

Article 13. Effect on diplomatic and consular officials and domestic law

The proposed treaty provides that its provisions are not to affect the fiscal privileges which diplomatic and consular officials enjoy under the general rules of international law or the provisions of special agreements.

[13] The proposed treaty specifically provides that it will not restrict in any manner any exclusion, exemption, deduction, credit or other allowance which is, or will be, enacted under the laws of either country. Therefore, the treaty will not be imposed to the detriment of any taxpayer.

Article 14. Entry into force

The proposed treaty will enter into force on the 31st day following the date on which the instruments of ratification are exchanged. With certain limited exceptions, the existing treaty will terminate on the date this treaty enters into force. Where an individual dies before March 27, 1981, and the existing treaty would afford a greater relief from taxes than the proposed treaty for certain gifts or transfers in trust made before March 27, 1974, the provisions of the existing treaty will apply in the United Kingdom.

Article 15. Termination

The proposed treaty will continue in force indefinitely but either country may terminate it as of the close of any calendar year which ends at least 5 years after the convention enters into force. The treaty will terminate on the date specified in the notice but not earlier than 6 months after the notice was given. However, the treaty will continue to apply to any estates or gifts which come under the jurisdiction of this treaty before it was terminated.

Resolution of Ratification

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Convention Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Fiscal Evasion with Respect to Taxes on Estates of Deceased Persons and on Gifts, done at London on October 19, 1978 (Ex. R, Ninety-sixth Congress, first session).

[17] LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

The White House,
May 2, 1979.

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit herewith, for Senate advice and consent to ratification, the Convention between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Fiscal Evasion with Respect to Taxes on Estates of Deceased Persons and on Gifts, signed at London on October 19, 1978. For the information of the Senate, I also transmit the report of the Department of State with respect to the Convention.

The Convention would replace the estate tax convention with the United Kingdom which was signed at Washington on April 16, 1945 [T.D. 5565, 1947-1 C.B. 125], and has been in force since 1946. It would apply in the United States to the federal gift tax, the federal estate tax, and the federal tax on generation-skipping transfers. In the United Kingdom it would apply to the capital transfer tax. The Convention is similar in principle to the United States estate tax convention with the Netherlands [1976-1 C.B. 471], which was signed at Washington on July 15, 1969, and entered into force in 1971, and to the United States model estate and gift tax convention published by the Department of the Treasury in 1977.

The general principle underlying the Convention is to grant to the country of domicile the right to tax estates and transfers on a worldwide basis. The Convention also permits a credit for tax paid to the other country in which certain property was taxed on the basis of its location. The Convention would provide rules for resolving the issue of domicile.

The Convention would enter into force on the thirty-first day after instruments of ratification are exchanged and would have effect in the United States with respect to estates of individuals dying and transfers taking effect after that date.

I recommend that the Senate give early and favorable consideration to the Convention and give advice and consent to its ratification.

Jimmy Carter.

LETTER OF SUBMITTAL

Department of State,
Washington, April 25, 1979.

The President,
The White House.

The President: I have the honor to submit to you, with a view to its transmission to the Senate for advice and consent to ratification, the Convention between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Fiscal Evasion with Respect to Taxes on Estates of Deceased Persons and on Gifts, signed at London on October 19, 1978.

This Convention would replace the estate tax convention with the United Kingdom which was signed at Washington on April 16, 1945, and has been in force since 1946. It would apply, in the United States, to the federal gift tax and the federal estate tax, including the tax on generation-skipping transfers. In the United Kingdom, it would apply to the capital transfer tax.

The Convention is similar to the estate tax convention with the Netherlands, which was signed at Washington on July 15, 1969, and entered into force in 1971, and to the United States model estate and gift tax convention, published by the Department of the Treasury in 1977.

The general principle underlying the proposed convention is to grant to the country of domicile the right to tax the estate or transfers of a decedent or transferor on a worldwide basis with a credit for tax paid to the other country with respect to certain types of property located therein. Specifically, immovable property and certain business assets are taxable in the Contracting State where situated. The Convention also allows the country of citizenship the right to tax the estate or transfers of a decedent or transferor, with a credit for tax paid to the other State on either a domiciliary or situs basis.

A significant feature of the convention adopted from the estate convention with the Netherlands, provides that a citizen of one country who is domiciled in that country may live up to seven years in the other country without becoming taxed as a domiciliary under the Convention. This provision will be of help in cases where an American dies or makes gifts after living in the United Kingdom for less than seven years.

The Convention also provides reciprocal rules for determining which State has the right to tax on a worldwide basis in the case of a decedent or transferor who is domiciled in both Contracting States at the time of death or transfer.

The Convention would enter into force on the thirty-first day after the date of the exchange of instruments of ratification and would become effective, in the United States, with respect to individuals dying and transfers taking effect on or after that date. The Convention would remain in force unless terminated by one of the Contracting States by giving six months prior notice through diplomatic channels. It may not, however, be terminated for five years after it enters into force.

A technical memorandum explaining the provisions in detail has been prepared by the Department of the Treasury and is being submitted to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The Department of the Treasury, with the cooperation of the Department of State, was primarily responsible for the negotiation of the Convention. It has the approval of both Departments.

Respectfully submitted,

CYRUS VANCE.

[55] APPENDIX C

WRITTEN RESPONSES BY TREASURY TO QUESTIONS BY THE COMMITTEE STAFF

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, D.C., June 8, 1979.

Hon. FRANK CHURCH,
Chairman,
Committee on Foreign Relations,
U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. CHAIRMAN: To follow up my testimony at the June 6 hearings concerning the six tax conventions or protocols involving the United Kingdom, France, Hungary and Korea, I want to assure you that Article I of the Third Protocol of the proposed US-UK Income Tax Treaty gives full effect to the Senate's reservation on Article 9(4) of that treaty. Let me also assure you that there is no similar state tax issue in any of the other five treaties which were considered by the Committee yesterday.

Again let me emphasize our view that each of these treaties is important to the United States and that their prompt approval is desirable.

I am also enclosing answers to the written questions submitted to me by your staff at the hearings as well as copies of my answers to questions from Senator Helms and Senator Javits.

Sincerely,

DONALD C. LUBICK,
Assistant Secretary (Tax Policy).

Enclosures.

QUESTIONS FOR ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR TAX POLICY DONALD C. LUBICK

GENERAL QUESTIONS*

Question 1. On page three of your testimony, you mentioned that the public was able to make presentations to the Treasury concerning particular private sector concerns in the area of international taxation, could you explain how the notice of such public meetings is made, what the participation level has been and any changes in tax treaties or negotiations that have been affected by this public participation?

Answer. The public meetings, referred to in the testimony, are announced by Treasury Press Releases and notices in the Federal Register. These announcements are reported in publications which are widely read in the international tax community. Public participation [56] in these meetings varies, depending on the degree of interest in the particular country being discussed. The meeting to discuss the Canadian treaty was attended by well in excess of 100 individuals; a recent meeting to discuss a proposed treaty with Norway was attended by about 20 people. All of the reports we have received from the public regarding these meetings have been favorable.

It is difficult to point to particular changes in treaties under negotiations as a result of these meetings. In most cases, there has not yet been a further round of negotiations following the meeting. The meetings have clearly served to sharpen the negotiators' awareness and understanding of some of the complex issues involved.

Questions 2 and 3. The group of six tax treaties or protocols the Committee is conducting hearings on today, will they result in a net loss or gain for the U.S. from tax revenues? If a loss, how much and why; if a gain, how much and why?

Answer. In general, these treaties and protocols tend to balance out revenue losses and gains, leaving the overall revenue effect roughly neutral. For example, where the treaty partner is required to reduce or eliminate its tax on U.S. taxpayers, this results in a reduction in the U.S. foreign tax credit and an increase in U.S. revenue. These increases are roughly offset by reductions in U.S. revenues resulting from reductions in U.S. tax on taxpayers resident in the other country.

*The questions and answers relating specifically to the other protocols and treaties considered at the June 6, 1979 hearings are set forth in the committee reports relating to those treaties.

In most cases, data on international flows and transactions are not available in sufficient detail to permit precise estimation of the revenue effects of particular treaty provisions.

Question 4. Please describe the personnel from the Department of the Treasury and other agencies of the U.S. Government involved in negotiating tax treaties or protocols. Please detail the prospective relationships between the IRS, Department of the Treasury and the Department of State.

Answer. The Office of the Assistant Secretary for Tax Policy in the Treasury has the principal responsibility for the negotiation of tax treaties. The actual negotiations are normally conducted by members of the Office of International Tax Affairs, which combines the Office of International Tax Counsel (Attorneys) and the International Tax Staff of the Office of Tax Analysis (Economists). The delegations are headed either by the Assistant Secretary for Tax Policy or by a senior member of the Office of International Tax Affairs.

The Internal Revenue Service is often represented on delegations. The nature and extent of this representation depends on the specific issues that are likely to arise. For example, if there are problems regarding the exchange of information, representatives of the IRS Office of International Operations, which is responsible for these exchanges, will participate in the discussions. In many cases, when negotiations are held abroad, the Revenue Service Representative assigned to that country will participate.

The State Department is invited to participate in all discussions. Country desk officers will sometimes attend a part or all of the discussions held in Washington. When negotiations are held abroad, the economic or commercial officers in the U.S. Embassy frequently participate. The State Department generally handles correspondence between the U.S. and foreign negotiators and is often called upon to [57] follow up with representatives of the other country on issues which arise in the negotiations.

There is close coordination between Treasury, IRS and the State Department throughout the negotiating process. The State Department advises the Treasury on political issues and IRS advises on administrative matters. The State Department is responsible for the arrangement for signing treaties and their transmittal to the Senate.

Question 5. The U.S. Treasury, in 1977, finalized a "model convention" for international tax treaties, could you please explain the status of this model and in particular, any changes that have been made to it?

Answer. For many years, the Treasury had used an informal "model" as a basis for negotiations. This model evolved and changed as the negotiators gained experience with it. In 1976 a decision was made to publish the U.S. model. Following the 1977 publication of the revised OECD Model Convention, the Treasury revised its model to conform it to the OECD Model, where possible, and the revised model was published in May of 1977.

The model is sent to potential treaty partners prior to the commencement of negotiations, and it normally serves as the discussion draft during the first round of negotiations. Many changes are made in the model during negotiations to reflect particular problems which arise in attempting to mesh two tax systems. Changes may be made to reflect the needs of the other country. For example, where negotiations are with a developing country, many of the model provisions (designed for treaties between two developed countries) are inappropriate. The U.S. negotiators are generally quite flexible in modifying the model for treaties with developing countries. These changes occur most frequently in the provisions dealing with permanent establishments or the taxation of personal service income, in which cases a somewhat lesser degree of economic contact or penetration is required for the host country to be able to tax the income of a resident of the other country. Similarly, with the taxation of dividends, interest, and royalties, less of a reduction in withholding tax rates is generally required of developing countries. The U.S. interest in these cases is to avoid rates which are so high as to generate excess foreign tax credits for U.S. income recipients.

Questions 6 and 7. In the third protocol proposed to the U.S.-U.K. Income Tax Treaty, the definition of permanent establishment has been changed. Please explain the basis of this change. Were the affected U.S. drilling companies contacted concerning the proposed change? If they were contacted, please give the details of when, by whom, and what resulted from such contact. Why was the permanent establishment definition selected as the item to be changed in the tax area?

Answer. In our discussions with the British subsequent to the Senate reservation on Article 9(4) of the proposed treaty, the United Kingdom specifically requested the inclusion in the protocol of a provision clarifying their taxing rights with respect to exploration and exploitation connected activities. This requested clarification was not unusual in light of the original negotiations in 1975 over the permanent establishment definition. In those negotiations, the United States agreed to delete from the twelve month permanent establishment exclusion contained in subparagraph (2)(f) of the proposed treaty any reference to [58] "an installation or drilling rig or ship used for the exploration or development of natural resources" as a result of the British insistence that there be no limitation on their right to tax such activities. This deletion left the application of the permanent establishment definition to these activities somewhat uncertain, although as the United Kingdom authorities believe, a strong argument exists that these activities could be taxed even without the clarification of the new protocol.

We agreed to the inclusion of this provision in the Third Protocol because it was reasonable to expect the British to request some additional concession for the loss of the benefits of Article 9(4); because the terms of the provision were reasonable in light of our own statutory tax policy (we would generally tax these kinds of activities conducted in the United States, even if they were of a shorter duration than 30 days); and because it could be viewed as little more than a clarification of a reasonable interpretation taken by the British of their taxing rights under the proposed treaty without the protocol provision.

The drilling industry was clearly aware of the precise terms of the protocol at least one month prior to the signing of the Protocol on March 15, 1979. On February 16, 1979, Mr. Arnold W. Bramlett, Chairman of the Accounting and Taxation Committee of the International Association of Drilling Contractors (IADC), wrote to the International Tax Counsel, Mr. H. David Rosenbloom, expressing general concern over the provision. Subsequently, there were telephone conversations between Mr. Rosenbloom and Mr. Bramlett in which the Treasury sought specific information as to the nature of the activities and the harm which was alleged would occur. These requests were confirmed in a letter from Mr. Rosenbloom to Mr. Bramlett on March 5, 1979, still 10 days before the Protocol was signed. To date, the Treasury has not received from the IADC, or any of its members, specific information detailing any specific adverse effects of the protocol provision.

QUESTIONS ON THE UNITED KINGDOM ESTATE AND GIFT TAX TREATY

Question 1. Explain the origin and development of the model estate and gift tax convention published by the Department of Treasury in 1977.

Answer. The U.S. Treasury Department released its "model" estate and gift tax treaty on March 16, 1977. The model serves as a statement of the Treasury's basic treaty negotiating position. It was developed over several months by Office of Tax Policy staff members conversant with estate and gift tax treaty issues. The general principle underlying the model is to grant to the country of domicile the right to tax the worldwide estate or gifts of a decedent or donor, with a credit for tax paid to the other State with respect to real property and business assets located therein.

The emphasis on domiciliary-basis taxation also explains the origin of the model. All U.S. estate and gift tax treaties negotiated between 1946 and 1956 contain a comprehensive set of situs rules. Double taxation is eliminated by awarding the situs state the primary right to tax a given type of property. In 1966, however, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) published a model es-[59]state tax convention (Draft Double Taxation Convention on Estates and Inheritances). The OECD model, which the United States helped develop, provides for domiciliary-basis taxation. This is also the approach of our only estate tax treaty which has come into force since 1956, the United States-Netherlands treaty of 1971. Thus, the U.S. model estate and gift tax treaty reflects both the internationally-accepted concepts in the OECD model and our current treaty position.

Question 2. Does the U.S.-U.K. Estate and Gift Tax Treaty differ from the U.S. model treaty, and if so, please explain the policy reasons for the difference.

Answer. The U.S.-U.K. Estate and Gift Tax Treaty is similar, but not identical, to the model. It is similar in that both follow the principle of domiciliary-basis taxation. That is, the country of domicile may tax the worldwide estate or gifts of a decedent or donor. Immovable property and certain business assets are taxable in the Contracting State where situated.

The U.S.-U.K. treaty is different from the model in that it includes the tax on generation-skipping transfers, imposed by the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1]. This is purely a matter of timing. Although the model was not published until 1977, it was developed early in 1976. Consequently, it does not include the estate and gift tax modifications in the Tax Reform Act of 1976, which was signed in October of that year. Unlike the model, the U.S.-U.K. treaty does not provide for a reciprocal exemption of $30,000 for property that is taxable under the treaty on a situs basis. This part of the model refers to pre-Reform Act of 1976 law; the $30,000 exemption was converted to a $3,600 credit by the 1976 changes. This provision is not in the treaty because the U.K.'s capital transfer tax does not apply to the first £25,000 (roughly $50,000) of property transferred.

Question 3. How does the U.S.-U.K. treaty define domicile and how, or why, was this definition selected?

Answer. The determination of a single treaty domicile is very important, since the country of domicile has the primary right to tax the worldwide estate and gifts of a decedent or donor, with the exception of property taxable under the situs articles. Domicile is determined initially under the law of each Contracting State. Under the treaty, an individual is domiciled in the United States (a) if he was a U.S. resident or (b) if he was a U.S. national, and had been a resident in the United States at any time during the preceding three years. The Convention uses the term "resident (domiciliary)" because U.S. domestic law equates the term "resident" with the term "domiciliary." The three-year rule simply parallels a provision in the U.K. capital transfer tax that a U.K. domiciliary will be deemed to be domiciled in the United Kingdom for a period of three years after a change of domicile is actually made. An individual is domiciled in the United Kingdom if he is (a) a U.K. domiciliary under general principles of U.K. law, or (b) treated as a U.K. domiciliary for purposes of the capital transfer tax.

The Convention provides rules for determining a single treaty domicile when a decedent or transferor is domiciled, under the laws of the respective countries, in both States. Particularly important in this regard is the provision that a U.S. citizen, who is considered under the Convention to be domiciled in both the United Kingdom and the [60] United States, shall be deemed to be domiciled in the United States if he had not been resident in the United Kingdom for at least 7 of the 10 years. This rule is based on the concept that a Contracting State should not tax the estate or other transfers of an individual on a domiciliary basis if the individual has not been present in that State for a significant period of time. If the 7 out of 10 year rule does not apply, the single treaty domicile is determined by a set of tie-breaking rules based on: permanent home, center of vital interests, habitual abode, state of nationality, or mutual agreement. These tie-breaking rules are similar to those in both the OECD and U.S. model treaties and in our existing estate tax treaty with the Netherlands [1976-1 C.B. 471].

Question 4. By using a worldwide basis to determine the domiciliary States' right to tax estates and transfers, will the United States increase or decrease its tax revenues from estate and gift taxes? By what amount? Please give policy reasons for any projected increase or decrease.

Answer. Generally, the United States taxes the estates and property transfers of its citizens and residents (domiciliaries) on a worldwide basis under its statutory law. Thus, use of a worldwide basis under the treaty does not represent a material departure from our normal estate and gift tax base.

This treaty, like others, is a balanced package of mutual concessions where there may be revenue gains from some provisions and revenue losses on others but, where the net revenue effect is nil.

Question 5. Why was the 7 out of 10 year rule used for the determination of domicile under the treaty?

Answer. A basic concept of United States tax policy in this field is that a Contracting State should not tax the estate of other transfers of an individual on a domiciliary basis if the individual has not been present in that State for a significant period of time. Conversely, where an individual has been present for a significant period of time we believe that it is reasonable to permit the State to tax the individual's accumulation of wealth. The 7 out of 10 year rule represents, in our judgment, a sufficiently long period of presence to justify taxation and has been our treaty policy for a long time. The rule is incorporated in the existing estate tax treaty with the Netherlands which entered into force in 1971.

It is also important to point out that a U.S. citizen will not automatically be deemed to be domiciled in the United Kingdom if he has been resident there for, say, 8 out of 10 years. In that case the determination of a single treaty domicile is settled by the tie-breaking rules. These are based on the concepts of permanent home, center of vital interests, habitual abode, nationality, and mutual agreement. Thus, it is possible that an individual could be resident in the United Kingdom for more than 7 years and still be treated as a U.S. domiciliary, if, for example, he maintained a permanent home in the United States.

Introduction

The proposed Estate and Gift Tax Convention with the United Kingdom is the first Convention negotiated since the United States modified its estate and gift tax law in the Tax Reform Act of 1976. The 1976 modifications include combining the separate estate and gift tax rates into a single cumulative rate schedule, substituting a unified credit for the previously separate estate and gift tax exemptions, and imposing a tax on generation-skipping transfers. The Convention will replace the existing estate tax convention between the two countries which has been in effect since July 25, 1946.

The Convention is similar in principle to the U.S. Estate Tax Convention with the Netherlands [1976-1 C.B. 471], which entered into force in 1971, and to the U.S. Model Estate and Gift Tax Convention, published by the Treasury Department on March 16, 1977. The Convention also is based, in part, on the provisions of the Model Estate Tax Convention (Draft Double Taxation Convention on Estates and Inheritances), published in 1966 by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD).

The general principle underlying the proposed Convention is that the country of domicile may tax an individual's estate or other transfers on a worldwide basis with a credit for tax paid to the other State with respect to certain types of property located therein. Specifically, immovable property and certain business assets are taxable in the Contracting State where situated. The Convention also allows the country of citizenship the right to tax an individual's worldwide estate or other transfers, with a credit for tax paid to the other State on either a domiciliary or a situs basis.

The Convention provides rules for determining which State has the right to tax on a domiciliary basis when a decedent or transferor is domiciled, under the laws of the respective countries, in both States at the time of death or transfer. It provides that a U.S. citizen, who at the time of death or transfer is considered under the Convention to be domiciled in both the United Kingdom and the United

[1] It is the practice of the Treasury Department to prepare for the use of the Senate and other interested persons a Technical Explanation of the tax conventions that are submitted to the Senate for its advice and consent to ratification.

An Estate and Gift Tax Convention with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was signed October 19, 1978, and submitted by the President to the Senate on May 2, 1979. On June 6, 1979, the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations held hearings, and this Technical Explanation was presented. The Senate voted its advice and consent on July 19, 1979, and instruments of ratification were exchanged on October 11, 1979.

States, shall be deemed to be domiciled in the United States if he had not been resident in the United Kingdom in 7 or more of the 10 income tax years of assessment ending with the year in which the death or transfer occurs. The effect of this rule is that the United Kingdom may not subject the estate or other transfers of a U.S. citizen and domiciliary to tax on a worldwide basis if he has been resident in the United Kingdom for less than 7 out of the 10 years ending with the year in which the death or transfer occurs. The Convention also provides that a U.S. citizen shall be deemed to have a domicile in the United States if he had been domiciled in the United States at any time during the three years preceding the time of death or transfer. This rule enables the United States to consider a citizen and former resident as a domiciliary for treaty purposes for a three year period. Thus, except for property taxable on a situs basis under the treaty, the United States generally retains primary taxing jurisdiction for three years after a U.S. citizen abandons his U.S. domicile. These rules for determining domicile are reciprocal.

The Convention is subject to ratification by the two Governments. Once ratified, it will enter into force on the thirty-first day after instruments of ratification are exchanged and will have effect in the United States with respect to estates of individuals dying and transfers taking effect after that date.

The Convention shall remain in force until terminated by one of the Contracting States. It may not be terminated for five years after it enters into force.

Federal Estate, Gift, and Generation-Skipping Transfer Taxes

The Federal estate, gift, and generation-skipping transfer taxes are excise taxes imposed on the transfer of property by death, gift, and generation-skipping transfer, respectively. Citizens and residents of the United States are subject to taxation on the transfers of all their property, wherever located. For these purposes, a resident of the United States is a domiciliary thereof, i.e., an individual living in the United States who has the intention to remain in the United States indefinitely or an individual who has lived in the United States with such an intention and who subsequently left the United States without having the intention to remain indefinitely in the country of his new residence.

Nonresidents who are not citizens of the United States (referred to hereafter as nonresident aliens) are taxable only on transfers of property situated within the United States. Tangible personal property and real estate, for example, are situated within the United States if located in the United States. Corporate stock has a U.S. situs only if issued by a corporation organized in the United States. Nonresident aliens are, however, exempt from Federal gift tax on all transfers of intangible property, including corporate stock.

U.S. statutory taxation rules for transfers of citizens and residents allow: (a) a tax credit of $38,000 at present, but which is scheduled to increase to $47,000 by 1981; (b) a marital deduction for gift tax purposes equal to the first $100,000 of gifts and 50 percent of the value of gifts in excess of $200,000; (c) a marital deduction for estate tax purposes equal to the greater of $250,000 or one-half the value of the adjusted gross estate, but reduced by any post-1976 gift tax marital deduction in excess of 50 percent of the value of the lifetime gifts to the spouse after 1976; and (d) deductions for charitable contributions, debts, funerals, and administrative expenses, and claims against, and losses of, the estate. Taxable transfers are taxed at rates ranging from 18 to 70 percent. Credits are allowed for foreign death taxes paid with respect to property which is considered under U.S. situs rules to be situated in the taxing foreign country and which is included in the gross estate for Federal estate tax purposes.

Nonresident aliens are allowed a $3,600 credit against the estate tax liability plus deductions for a portion of the debts, funeral and administrative expenses, claims, and losses, based on the proportion of the decedent's worldwide estate which is located in the United States. Taxable estates are taxed at rates ranging from 6 to 30 percent. Gifts and generation-skipping transfers by nonresident aliens, however, are taxed at the normal citizen or resident rates of 18 to 70 percent.

United Kingdom Capital Transfer Tax

The U.K. capital transfer tax applies to transfers of property by gift and death, as well as to transfers of settled or trust property. Individuals domiciled in the United Kingdom are subject to taxation on transfers of all their property, wherever situated. Individuals not domiciled in the United Kingdom are taxable only on property having a U.K. situs. All inter-spousal transfers are exempt from taxation, except that only the first £25,000 is exempt if the transferor is domiciled in the United Kingdom but the recipient is not. The tax base is the amount of "loss" to the transferor, but deductions are allowed for debts, expenses, and liabilities chargeable against the property transferred.

The rate of tax depends on the cumulative total of chargeable transfers during life and at death. There are two rate schedules: one for transfers on death or within 3 years of death and another for lifetime transfers. Where the cumulative total is less than £110,000 the rate of tax on lifetime gifts is one-half that imposed on a transfer by death; the schedules then converge and above £310,000 the rates are the same. A married couple's transfers are taxed separately. Nondomiciliaries are taxed according to the same rate schedule as domiciliaries. To lessen international double taxation, a credit against the capital transfer tax may be taken for similar taxes paid to another country on the same property.

Article 1. SCOPE

This Article states that the Convention applies to any person who is subject to a tax covered by the Convention. As set forth in Article 2 (Taxes Covered), the Convention applies in the United States to the Federal gift tax and the Federal estate tax, including the tax on generation-skipping transfers and to the capital transfer tax in the United Kingdom.

Existing U.S. estate tax treaties, as well as the U.S. Model Estate and Gifts Tax Convention, apply to domiciliaries of one or both of the Contracting States. This Convention has a broader application; its scope is not limited to domiciliaries of the two Contracting States.

Article 2. TAXES COVERED

Paragraph (1) identifies the taxes covered by the Convention. The Convention does not apply to any state or local taxes imposed by either Contracting State.

Paragraph (2) provides that the Convention also applies to any substantially similar taxes which are subsequently enacted in addition to, or in place of, the existing taxes. The competent authorities of the Contracting States are to notify each other of any changes which have been made in their respective laws relating to the taxation of estates, gifts, and other transfers.

Article 3. GENERAL DEFINITIONS

Paragraph (1) defines the terms "United States," "United Kingdom," "enterprise," "competent authority," "nationals," "tax," and "Contracting State."

The term "United States" does not include Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, or any other U.S. possession or territory. The term "nationals" means, in relation to the United States, U.S. citizens. According to paragraph 5 of Article 4 (Fiscal Domicile), however, an individual who was at the time of death or other transfer, a resident of a U.S. possession and who became a U.S. citizen solely by reason of (a) being a citizen of such a possession or (b) birth or residence within such possession, will not be considered a national of the U.S. under the Convention. This exclusion conforms with Sections 2209 and 2501(c) of the Internal Revenue Code. In relation to the United Kingdom, "nationals" refers to (a) any citizen of the United Kingdom and Colonies, or (b) any British subject not possessing such citizenship or the citizenship of any other Commonwealth country or territory, if the individual in either case had the right of abode in the United Kingdom at the time of death or transfer.

Paragraph (2) provides that any term which is not otherwise defined in the Convention is, unless the Convention otherwise requires and subject to the provisions of Article 11 (Mutual Agreement Procedure), to have the meaning which it has under the tax laws of the Contracting State whose tax is being determined.

Article 4. FISCAL DOMICILE

This Article sets forth rules for resolving cases of double domicile. The determination of a single treaty domicile is important, since the country of domicile has the primary right to tax the worldwide estate and other transfers, with the exception of property covered by Articles 6 (Immovable Property (Real Property) and 7 (Business Property of a Permanent Establishment and Assets Pertaining to a Fixed Base Used for the Performance of Independent Personal Services).

Under paragraph (1), domicile is determined initially under the law of each Contracting State. An individual is domiciled in the United States (a) if he was a U.S. resident or (b) if he was a U.S. national, and had been a resident in the United States at any time during the preceding 3 years. The Convention uses the term "resident (domiciliary)" because U.S. domestic law equates the term "resident" with the term "domiciliary." The 3 year rule parallels a provision in the U.K. capital transfer tax that a U.K. domiciliary will be deemed to be domiciled in the United Kingdom for a period of 3 years after a change of domicile is actually made.

Paragraph (1) also provides that an individual is domiciled in the United Kingdom if he is (a) a U.K. domiciliary under general principles of U.K. law, or (b) treated as a U.K. domiciliary for purposes of the capital transfer tax. An individual who is not considered domiciled in the United Kingdom under general law is nevertheless deemed to be domiciled there for purposes of the capital transfer tax if he:

(1) was domiciled in the United Kingdom on or after December 10, 1974 and within 3 years immediately preceding the taxable event; or

(2) was resident in the United Kingdom on or after December 10, 1974, in at least 17 of the 20 income tax years of assessment ending with the income tax year in which the taxable event occurs; or

(3) has, since December 10, 1974, become and remained domiciled in the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man and, immediately before becoming domiciled there, was domiciled in the United Kingdom.

For condition (2), "resident" is defined as for income tax purposes except that the availability of a dwelling-house in the United Kingdom is disregarded. An individual is a U.K. resident for income tax purposes for the entire year if he has been present in the United Kingdom for a single day in that year, provided he also has a dwelling-house in the United Kingdom. Thus, the dwelling-house limitation means that an individual whose principal home is not in the United Kingdom, but who comes to the United Kingdom on occasional visits and maintains a flat or house there, will not be subject to capital transfer tax under this deemed domicile provision. By virtue of these "deemed domicile" provisions, an individual who is a foreign domiciliary under general law may be treated as a U.K. domiciliary and subject to capital transfer tax on all his assets wherever situated.

Paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) of the Convention set forth rules for resolving cases where, under the definitions in paragraph (1), there is a double domicile. Paragraph (2) provides that a U.K. national domiciled in both Contracting States shall be deemed to be domiciled in the United Kingdom for purposes of the Convention if he had not been resident in the United States for Federal income tax purposes in 7 or more of the 10 taxable years ending with the year in which the death or transfer occurs. The effect of this rule is to restrict the right of the United States to tax the estate and other transfers of a U.K. national and domiciliary who has been resident in the United States for less than 7 out of 10 years to certain situs property. The rule is based upon the concept that a Contracting State should not tax the estate or other transfers of an individual on a domiciliary basis if the individual has not been present in that State for a significant period of time.

Paragraph (3) is the reciprocal of paragraph (2). It provides that a U.S. national domiciled in both Contracting States shall be deemed to be domiciled in the United States for purposes of the Convention if he had not been resident in the United Kingdom in 7 or more of the 10 income tax years of assessment ending with the year in which the death or transfer occurs. For these purposes, residence in the United Kingdom is determined under the income tax rules, but the fact that a person maintains a dwelling-house in the United Kingdom is disregarded. The dwelling-house limitation has the same effect as in the "deemed domicile" provisions of U.K. internal law; thus a casual visitor who maintains a dwelling-house in the United Kingdom will not be considered a U.K. resident.

Paragraph (4) is subordinate to paragraphs (2) and (3). It provides rules for resolving cases of dual domicile where the 7 of 10 year rules do not apply. Under paragraph (4), an individual's domicile is determined as follows: (a) he will be deemed to be domiciled in the Contracting State in which he maintained his permanent home; if he had a permanent home in both Contracting States or in neither, his domicile will be deemed to be in the Contracting State with which his personal and economic relations were closest (in other words, the State in which his center of vital interests was located); (b) if the Contracting State in which the individual's center of vital interests was located cannot be determined, his domicile will be deemed to be in the Contracting State in which he had an habitual abode; (c) if he had an habitual abode in both Contracting States or in neither, his domicile will be deemed to be in the Contracting State of which he was a national; and (d) if he was a national of both Contracting States or neither, the competent authorities of the Contracting States will settle the issue by mutual agreement. These rules are similar to the rules in the OECD Model Convention on Estates and Inheritances.

Paragraph (5), as previously described, provides that an individual who was a resident of a U.S. possession and, who became a U.S. citizen solely by reason of citizenship, birth, or residence in that possession shall not be considered domiciled in or a national of the United States for purposes of this Convention.

Article 5. TAXING RIGHTS

This Article establishes taxing rights for property taxable other than on a situs basis. Paragraph (1)(a) provides that property of a decedent or transferor domiciled in one of the Contracting States shall not be taxable in the other Contracting State unless it is property covered in Articles 6 (Immovable Property (Real Property)) or 7 (Business Property of a Permanent Establishment and Assets Pertaining to a Fixed Base Used for the Performance of Independent Personal Services). The effect of this provision is to give exclusive taxing rights to the country of domicile with respect to all property except that covered by Articles 6 and 7.

Paragraph (1)(b), however, provides that paragraph (1)(a) does not apply if the decedent or transferor was a national of the State in which he was not domiciled. In effect, this paragraph preserves residual taxation based on nationality.

Paragraph (2) provides that where the decedent or transferor was domiciled in neither Contracting State, but was a national of one, (but not both) of the Contracting States, property taxable in the Contracting State of nationality shall not be taxable in the other Contracting State. Thus, property owned by a third-country domiciliary that is taxable in the Contracting State of nationality is not taxable in the other Contracting State, even if it has a situs in that State, with the exception of property covered by Articles 6 (Immovable Property (Real Property)) and 7 (Business Property of a Permanent Establishment and Assets Pertaining to a Fixed Base Used for Independent Personal Services).

The rules of paragraphs (1) and (2) do not apply to property which is subject to the U.S. tax on generation-skipping transfers or which is comprised in a U.K. settlement. Paragraph (3), however, provides that property held in a generation-skipping trust or trust equivalent shall not be taxable by the United States on the occasion of a generation-skipping transfer if, at the time of the transfer, the deemed transferor was domiciled in the United Kingdom and was not a national of the United States. Paragraph (4) similarly precludes the United Kingdom from taxing property comprised in a settlement if at the time of settlement the settlor was domiciled in the United States and was not a national of the United Kingdom. Settled property includes property held in trust for successive beneficiaries or for anyone contingent on the occurrence of some event. The rules in paragraphs (3) and (4) do not apply to property covered by Articles 6 (Immovable Property (Real Property)) or 7 (Business Property of a Permanent Establishment and Assets Pertaining to a Fixed Base Used for the Performance of Independent Personal Services), which is taxable in the country of situs.

Paragraph (5) provides that the preceding paragraphs of Article 5 (Taxing Rights) shall not prevent a Contracting State from imposing tax where property, under the rules of paragraphs (1) through (4), is taxable only in the other Contracting State but tax, though chargeable, is not paid. A tax, however, shall be deemed paid where tax liability is reduced or eliminated by means of a specific exemption, deduction, exclusion, credit, or allowance.

Paragraph (6) allows the competent authorities to determine by mutual agreement the situs of property if, at the time of death or transfer, the decedent or transferor was not domiciled in either Contracting State and each State would regard the property as situated in its territory and therefore taxable under its laws. An example would be bearer bonds issued by a

U.S. corporation held in a safe deposit box in a U.K. bank by a decedent domiciled in France. The United States would generally consider the bonds to be U.S. situs property because they are issued by a domestic corporation. The United Kingdom would consider the bonds to have a U.K. situs, since bearer bonds are situated where located.

Article 6. IMMOVABLE PROPERTY (REAL PROPERTY)

This Article, which is similar to the immovable property article in the OECD Model Convention on Estates and Inheritances, and the United States-Netherlands Estate Tax Convention, provides that immovable property may be taxed in the Contracting State in which the property is situated. The term "immovable property" is defined in accordance with the law of the Contracting State in which the property is situated. The term generally includes, for example, property accessory to immovable property, livestock and equipment used in agriculture and forestry, and rights to payment for the working of mineral deposits and other natural resources. Debts secured by mortgage or otherwise are not considered immovable property, nor are ships, boats, and aircraft.

Article 7. BUSINESS PROPERTY OF A PERMANENT ESTABLISHMENT AND ASSETS PERTAINING TO A FIXED BASE USED FOR THE PERFORMANCE OF INDEPENDENT PERSONAL SERVICES

Paragraph (1) establishes the general rule that, with the exception of assets referred to in Article 6 (Immovable Property (Real Property)), assets forming part of the business property of a permanent establishment of an enterprise may be taxed in the Contracting State in which the permament establishment is situated.

Paragraph (2) defines the term "permanent establishment" as a fixed place of business through which the business of an enterprise is wholly or partly carried on. Illustrations of a permanent establishment are set forth in paragraph (2)(b). Paragraph (2)(c) states that a building site or construction or installation project constitutes a permanent establishment only if it lasts for more than twelve months. This twelve month period begins when work physically commences in the other Contracting State. A series of contracts or projects which are interdependent both commercially and geographically is to be treated as a single project for the purpose of applying the twelve months test.

Paragraph (2)(d) provides that a permanent establishment does not include: the use of facilities solely for the purpose of storage, display, or delivery of goods or merchandise belonging to an enterprise; the maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to an enterprise solely for the purpose of storage, display or delivery; the maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to an enterprise solely for the purpose of processing by another enterprise; the maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for the purpose of purchasing goods or merchandise, or of collecting information, for an enterprise; or the maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for the purpose of carrying on, for an enterprise, any other activity of a preparatory or auxiliary character. A fixed place of business used solely for one or more of these purposes will not be considered a permanent establishment under the Convention.

Under paragraph (2)(e), a person (other than an agent of an independent status to whom paragraph (2)(f) applies) will be deemed to constitute a permanent establishment if such person is acting in a Contracting State on behalf of an enterprise and habitually exercises in that State an authority to conclude contracts in the name of the enterprise, unless that person's activities are limited to the activities described in paragraph (2)(d).

On the other hand, paragraph (2)(f) provides that an enterprise of one Contracting State will not be deemed to have a permanent establishment in the other Contracting State merely because such enterprise carries on business in the other Contracting State through a broker, general commission agent, or any other agent of an independent status, where the broker or agent is acting in the ordinary course of his business.

Under paragraph (2)(g), the fact that a company which is a resident of a Contracting State controls or is controlled by a company which is a resident of the other Contracting State or which carries on business in that other State shall not of itself constitute either company a permanent establishment of the other.

Paragraph (3) provides that, except for assets described in Article 6 (Immovable Property (Real Property)), assets pertaining to a fixed base used for the performance of independent personal services may be taxed by a Contracting State if the fixed base is situated in that State. The concept of a "fixed base" is analogous to that of a "permanent establishment."

Article 8. DEDUCTIONS, EXEMPTIONS, ETC.

Paragraph (1) states that deductions shall be allowed in accordance with the law in force in the Contracting State in which the tax is imposed. Section 2106(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code accords the estate of a nonresident alien a deduction for allowable expenses in the proportion which the value of the decedent's gross estate situated in the United States bears to the value of his entire gross estate, wherever situated. The Code does not provide for any deductions, other than charitable or marital, for gift tax purposes. Since gifts are valued at their market value, however, any debt of the donor assumed by the donee constitutes a diminution in the total value of the transfer subject to tax. Deductions for generation-skipping tax purposes follow the relevant estate or gift tax rule.

The U.K. capital transfer tax provides that a liability secured by a particular property is deducted from the value of that property. Moreover, a liability to a person resident outside the United Kingdom which is neither payable in the United Kingdom nor an encumbrance on U.K. property is deductible from property outside the United Kingdom. In either case, if the debt exceeds the value of the property against which it is deductible, it may be deducted from the rest of the decedent's or transferor's property.

Paragraph (2) provides the benefits of the U.S. marital deduction for property which may be taxed in the United States and which passes to a spouse from a decedent or transferor who was domiciled in or a national of the United Kingdom. The benefit is given to the same extent as if (a) the decedent or transferor had been domiciled in the United States and (b) the decedent's gross estate or the transferor's transfers were limited to property which may be taxed by the United States.

The estate of a nonresident alien, who was domiciled in or a national of the United Kingdom, would thus be entitled to the full marital deduction provided by Section 2056 of the Code to the extent that the estate has property subject to estate tax in the United States. Thus, the deduction is limited to the greater of $250,000 or 50 percent of the value of the adjusted gross estate taxable in the United States. The marital deduction for gifts would be aggregated under the Convention in the same manner provided in Section 2523 of the Code: the first $100,000 of inter-spousal gifts taxable in the United States would be exempt, the second $100,000 would be fully taxable, and 50 percent of the amount of subsequent inter-spousal gifts would be taxable. All gifts by a transferor are cumulative regardless of whether the deduction has been made available by the Code or the Convention. Thus, if a transferor uses the full $100,000 deductions under the Code while domiciled in the United States and then becomes domiciled in the United Kingdom, the next $100,000 of gifts would be fully taxable under the Convention.

Paragraphs (3) and (4) provide for special marital exemptions for purposes of the U.K. capital transfer tax. In the absence of the Convention, transfers between husband and wife are wholly exempt from such tax, whether they are lifetime gifts or transfers on death and whether the property is settled or not. But where the spouse making the transfer is domiciled in the United Kingdom for purposes of the tax and the other spouse is domiciled outside the United Kingdom, the exemption is limited to a cumulative total of £25,000.

Paragraph (3) provides for exemption to the extent of 50 percent of the value of property which passes to the spouse from a decedent or transferor who was domiciled in or a national of the United States and which may be taxed in the United Kingdom. The exemption is computed after taking into account all exemptions except those for transfers between spouses. The exemption is only available where the transfer would have been wholly exempt had the recipient spouse been domiciled in the United Kingdom and where no larger marital deduction is available under U.K. law, apart from the Convention. Property passing to a spouse domiciled in the United States from a decedent or transferor domiciled in the United States would be wholly exempt under the U.K. capital transfer tax. Thus, in this case, U.K. law provides greater relief than the treaty. On the other hand, the Convention would provide greater relief if the decedent or transferor was domiciled in the United Kingdom.

Paragraph (4)(a) provides for a marital deduction in the United Kingdom for qualifying transfers into a settlement or trust in which the recipient spouse has a life interest. The paragraph applies where property is comprised in a settlement on the death of a U.K. domiciliary and the surviving spouse was domiciled in or a national of the United States. The exemption is only available if: (i) the spouse is entitled to an immediate interest in possession under the settlement, (ii) the transfer would have been wholly exempt if the recipient spouse had been domiciled in the United Kingdom, and (iii) U.K. law apart from the Convention would not provide a larger marital exemption. The exemption consists of 50 percent of the value of the property transferred, calculated in the same manner as the exemption provided for in paragraph (3).

The exemption provided for in paragraph (4)(a) is only available if it is elected by the personal representatives and trustees of every settlement in which the deceased person had an interest in possession immediately before the decedent's death. The personal representatives and trustees may be subsequently liable for capital transfer tax if, for example, the nondomiciled spouse eventually acquires the property outright. Paragraph (4)(b) provides, for example, that the election will be nullified and the settled property taxable as though given outright to the spouse if the spouse becomes absolutely and indefeasibly entitled to such property at any time after the decedent's death. Accordingly, the purpose of the election is to protect the interests of the personal representatives and trustees.

Paragraph (5) provides that U.S. tax imposed on the estate of a national of the United Kingdom, who was neither domiciled in nor a national of the United States, will not be greater than the tax which would have been imposed if the decedent had been domiciled in the United States and taxed by the United States on his worldwide property. Paragraph (5) does not require a formal election; the appropriate information need only be included in an estate tax return, which is filed or amended within the applicable time period.

Article 9. CREDITS

This Article establishes rules for determining which Contracting State will credit the taxes of the other Contracting State where both States tax the same property.

Paragraph (1) applies where the United States imposes tax on the basis of the decedent's or transferor's domicile or nationality. Under paragraph (1)(a), the United States will credit tax paid to the United Kingdom with respect to property covered by Articles 6 (Immovable Property (Real Property)) and 7 (Business Property of a Permanent Establishment and Assets Pertaining to a Fixed Base Used for the Performance of Independent Personal Services). Paragraph (1)(b) requires the United States to credit taxes imposed in the United Kingdom on the basis of the decedent's or transferor's domicile against U.S. taxes imposed on the basis of nationality. This enables the United States to retain the residual right to tax the estate and other transfers of its citizens domiciled in the United Kingdom.

Paragraph (2) establishes reciprocal credit rules for the United Kingdom. Paragraphs (1) and (2) taken together thus grant the Contracting State where the decedent or transferor was domiciled the right to tax the estate or transfers on a worldwide basis, with a credit for tax paid to the other State with respect to property taxed in that State on the basis of situs. The Contracting State of nationality may tax the estate or transfers of its nationals, but must credit the tax paid to the other State on a domiciliary or situs basis. Unlike the United States, the United Kingdom does not tax the estates or transfers of its citizens on a worldwide basis. Under the Convention, however, it can apply its statutory source rules to its non-U.K. domiciled nationals. Thus, the United Kingdom could impose tax, with a credit for U.S. taxes, on registered shares in a U.K. corporation held by a U.K. national domiciled in the United States.

Paragraph (3) prescribes credit rules where the same event gives rise to tax on property held under the trust laws of the two countries. Paragraph (3)(a) requires a Contracting State to credit tax imposed in the other Contracting State on property covered under Articles 6 (Immovable Property (Real Property)) or 7 (Business Property of a Permanent Establishment and Assets Pertaining to a Fixed Base Used for the Performance of Independent Personal Services). Paragraph (3)(b) provides that the United Kingdom will credit the U.S. tax on other property where:

(i) the taxable event was a generation-skipping transfer and the deemed transferor was domiciled in the United States at the time of the deemed transfer;

(ii) the taxable event was the exercise or lapse of a power of appointment and the holder of the power was domiciled in the United States at the time of the exercise or lapse; or

(iii) in situations not covered by (i) or (ii), the settlor or grantor was domiciled in the United States at the time when the tax is imposed.

Paragraph (3)(c) provides that in all situations not covered by paragraph (3)(b), or where the United States may not tax on the basis of situs, the United States will credit the U.K. tax. Although paragraph (3)(c) is worded broadly, paragraph 3(b) preserves primary U.S. taxing jurisdiction in those situations where U.S. domiciliaries, as determined under the treaty, are taxable under the Federal estate, gift, and generation-skipping transfer tax laws of the United States.

Paragraph (4) establishes several general rules for computing the credit allowed under the Article. The credits allowed by a Contracting State shall not include taxes not levied in the other Contracting State because of a credit allowed by that other State. A tax is not creditable unless and until it is paid. In addition, the credit allowed by a Contracting State with respect to any property cannot exceed the portion of the tax paid in that State which is attributable to that property. In making this calculation, the tax paid shall be determined before the credit is given, but shall be reduced by any credit given for another tax.

Consider the estate of a decedent who was a U.S. national domiciled in the United Kingdom, which consisted of assets in the United Kingdom with a fair market value of $100 and U.S. real property with a fair market value of $20. The entire $120 estate would be taxable both in the United States and the United Kingdom. The United States would retain primary taxing jurisdiction over the U.S. real property and the United Kingdom over the other assets. If the U.K. capital transfer tax on the $120 estate were $24 and the U.S. estate tax were $30 before the allowance for any credits, the credits would be computed as follows. The United Kingdom would credit $4 of U.S. tax. Although $5 represents the portion of the U.S. tax of $30 attributable to U.S. real property, ($20/$120) × ($30), the credit would be limited to $4, which is the portion the U.K. tax of $24 attributable to the U.S. real property. The United States would credit $20 of the U.K. tax, which represents the portion of the U.K. tax of $24 attributable to U.K. property, ($100/$120) × ($24). The net U.K. tax liability would be $20 ($24 less $4) and the U.S. tax liability would be $10 ($30—$20).

Paragraph (5) provides that a claim for credit or refund under the Convention generally must be made within six years from the date of the event giving rise to the tax, or, where later, within one year from the last date on which the tax which is to be credited is due. The competent authority may, in appropriate circumstances, extend this time limit where the final determination of the taxes which are the subject of the claim is delayed.

Article 10.
NON-DISCRIMINATION

Paragraph (1)(a) states that nationals of a Contracting State shall not be subjected in the other State to taxation or any other requirement connected therewith which is other or more burdensome than the taxation or requirements connected therewith to which nationals of the other Contracting State in the same circumstances are or may be subjected. Paragraph (1)(b), however, recognizes that a nonresident alien is not in the same circumstances as a U.S. national, who is taxed by the United States on a worldwide basis regardless of his domicile. Paragraph (1)(b) provides that paragraph (1)(a) shall not prevent the United States from taxing a national of the United Kingdom who is not domiciled in the United States as a nonresident alien in accordance with U.S. internal law. Paragraph (3) further points out that this Article does not require either Contracting State to grant to individuals not domiciled in that Contracting State any personal allowances, reliefs, or tax reductions which are granted to its domiciliaries. Paragraphs (1) and (3), however, must be read in conjunction with paragraph (5) of Article 8 (Deductions, Exemptions, Etc.) which specifically limits the U.S. tax imposed on the property of a U.K. national not domiciled in the United States to the tax that would have been imposed had the decedent been domiciled in the United States at the time of death.

Paragraph (2) provides that a permanent establishment which an enterprise of one Contracting State has in the other Contracting State will not be subject in that other Contracting State to less favorable taxation than an enterprise of the other Contracting State carrying on the same activities. Paragraph (4) extends similar protection to an enterprise of a Contracting State, the capital of which is wholly or partly owned or controlled by one or more residents of the other Contracting State.

Paragraph (5) limits the application of this Article to the taxes which are the subject of the Convention, i.e., the Federal gift tax and the Federal estate tax, including the tax on generation-skipping transfers in the United States and the capital transfer tax in the United Kingdom.

Article 11. MUTUAL AGREEMENT PROCEDURE

Under paragraph (1), if a person believes that the actions of one or both of the Contracting States result or will result in taxation which is not in accordance with the Convention, he may present his case to the competent authority of either Contracting State. Although a person need not exhaust any other administrative or judicial remedies prior to resorting to the mutual agreement procedure, it is anticipated that a person usually will do so.

Paragraph (2) provides that, if the competent authority considers the objection justified and cannot by itself arrive at an appropriate solution, it shall attempt to resolve the case by agreement with the competent authority of the other Contracting State. In cases in which the competent authorities reach an agreement, taxes will be imposed and refunds of taxes will be allowed, as appropriate, by the Contracting States. In the case of the United States, where an agreement is reached between the competent authorities which requires the United States to make a refund of tax or to extend any similar credit, the refund or credit will be made, assuming presentation of the case to the competent authority within a reasonable time, notwithstanding any procedural barriers existing under U.S. law, including any statute of limitations. In cases where an agreement cannot be reached between the competent authorities, the United States will not be required to provide any relief from double taxation on a unilateral basis.

Paragraph (3) permits the competent authorities of the Contracting States to endeavor to resolve any difficulties or doubts arising as to the application of the Convention, such as the meaning of terms not otherwise defined in the Convention.

Under paragraph (4), the competent authorities may communicate with each other directly and, when advisable, meet together for an oral exchange of opinions, for the purpose of reaching an agreement.

Article 12. EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION

This Article provides for a system of administrative cooperation between the competent authorities of the two Contracting States. It requires the exchange of available information necessary for carrying out the Convention and the domestic laws of the Contracting States concerning the taxes covered by the Convention. The competent authorities may exchange information in connection with tax compliance generally, not merely illegal acts or crimes.

The information exchanged must be treated as secret. However, the information may be disclosed to persons or authorities (including a court or administrative body) concerned with the assessment, collection, or enforcement of, or prosecution with respect to, the taxes which are the subject of the Convention. No information may be exchanged which would disclose any trade, business, industrial or professional secret or any trade process.

Article 13. EFFECT ON DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR OFFICIALS AND DOMESTIC LAW

Paragraph (1) provides that nothing in the Convention shall affect the fiscal privileges of diplomatic and consular officials under the general rules of international law or under the provisions of special agreements.

Paragraph (2) provides that the Convention will not restrict in any manner any exclusion, exemption, deduction, credit, or other allowance' now or hereafter accorded by the laws of either Contracting State. This rule reflects the principle that a double taxation Convention should not increase the tax burden imposed by a Contracting State.

Article 14. ENTRY INTO FORCE

Paragraph (1) provides that the Convention shall be ratified and that instruments of ratification shall be exchanged at Washington, D.C. as soon as possible after both States have ratified the Convention.

Paragraph (2) provides that the Convention will become effective on the thirty-first day following the date of exchange of instruments of ratification. The Convention shall apply in the United States with respect to the estates of individuals dying and transfers taking effect after the effective date. The Convention shall apply in the United Kingdom with respect to property by reference to which a tax liability arises after the effective date.

Paragraphs (3), (4), and (5) set forth transition rules for determining when the 1945 Estate Tax Convention will cease to have effect. These rules are important because of the transition rules contained in the U.K. capital transfer tax. Paragraph (3) states the general rule that the 1945 Convention shall cease to have effect for property to which the new Convention will apply under paragraph (2). Paragraph (4), however, provides that any provision of the 1945 Convention which would afford greater relief than the new Convention will continue to apply in the United Kingdom with respect to:

(a) any inter vivos gift made by a decedent before March 27, 1974, or

(b) any settled property in which the decedent had a beneficial interest in possession before March 27, 1974 but not at any time thereafter.

These exceptions relate to transition rules in the U.K. capital transfer tax which will cease to have effect with respect to deaths occurring on or after March 27, 1981. Paragraph (5) provides that the 1945 Convention will terminate on the last date on which, under the foregoing rules, it has effect.

Article 15. TERMINATION

Paragraph (1) provides that the Convention shall remain in force until it is terminated by one of the Contracting States. A Contracting State may not terminate the Convention until after it has been in force at least 5 years. After the initial 5 year period, a Contracting State may terminate the Convention by providing the other State at least 6 months' prior notice through diplomaitc channels. If the Convention is terminated in accordance with these procedures, it will continue to apply to taxable events occurring between the time notice is given and the termination date specified in the notice.

Paragraph (2) provides that the termination of the Convention will not have the effect of reviving the 1945 Convention or other treaties previously abrogated.

United States and Tunisia Discuss Income Tax Treaty

Announcement 80-15 [1]

Representatives of the United States and the Republic of Tunisia will meet in Tunis during the week of February 4, 1980, to undertake negotiations of a treaty to avoid double taxation of income.

There is no income tax treaty now in effect between the United States and Tunisia. Prior negotiations took place in September 1975, and there was a preliminary review of the issues to be covered at that time. After preliminary discussion in May, 1979, the Government of Tunisia recently invited the United States to send a delegation to Tunisia to resume the negotiations.

The negotiations are expected to be based on the draft texts exchanged in 1975, the model text published by the United States and by the Organization for Economic Cooperation & Development (OECD) in 1977, and the income tax treaty between the United States and Morocco, which was signed in August 1977 and has been submitted to the Senate for approval. The issues to be discussed will include the taxation by each country of income derived there by residents of the other country, whether from business activity, personal services or investment, as well as assurances of nondiscrimination in tax matters and provisions for administrative cooperation between the tax authorities of the two countries.

Interested persons are invited to send written comments and suggestions concerning the forthcoming negotiations to H. David Rosenbloom, International Tax Counsel, U.S. Treasury, Room 3064, Washington, D. C. 20220.

Automatic Cost-of-Living Adjustment of the Dollar Limitation on Benefits for Defined Benefit Plans

Announcement 80-20

The Service has reconsidered its position on the application of automatic cost-of-living adjustments to the maximum dollar limitation of defined benefit plans in light of the proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations under section 415 of the Internal Revenue Code, published in the Federal Register on January 24, 1980.

[1] Filed by the Office of the Federal Register on December 27, 1979, 8:45 a.m., and published in the issue of the Federal Register for December 28, 1979, 44 F.R. 76824.

[1] Based on a Treasury Department announcement dated January 7, 1980, and published in the issue of the Federal Register for January 10, 1980, 45 F.R. 2142.

Section 415(b)(1)(A) of the Code provides a $75,000 limit on the annual benefit payable to a participant under a defined benefit plan. Section 415(d)(1)(A) annually adjusts the $75,000 for increases in the cost of living. Each year the Service publishes the limit for such year as adjusted for increases in the cost of living.

Although a defined benefit plan may annually revise the $75,000 limit to reflect the published cost-of-living increases, section 5.02 of Rev. Rul. 75-481, 1975-2 C.B. 188, prohibits a plan from incorporating language automatically reflecting these increases.

IRS News Release IR-1681, dated October 21, 1976, permitted defined contribution plans to incorporate by reference the changes in the limitations on contributions annually published by the Service. However, the position for defined benefit plans was not changed.

Section 1.415-5 of the proposed regulations under section 415 of the Code provides that a defined benefit plan may include a provision which provides for an annual automatic cost-of-living adjustment of the $75,000 limitation. However, under the proposed regulations, such a provision may only provide for scheduled annual increases in the plan's maximum dollar limitation which take effect no sooner than the effective date of the applicable adjusted dollar limitation published by the Service. The effect of this limitation will preclude the making of deductible contributions based on anticipated increases of the dollar limitation.

Taxpayers, pending the issuance of final regulations, may now rely on section 1.415-5 of the proposed regulations to adopt provisions for defined benefit plans which provide for annual automatic cost-of-living adjustments of the $75,000 limitation. Further, the Service will now issue opinion, notification, and determination letters, both for new and existing defined benefit plans, on the basis of section 1.415-5 of the proposed regulations. Taxpayers are cautioned, however, that once the final regulations are issued under section 415(d)(1) of the Code, plans may be required to be amended to conform to the final regulations.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants and Enrolled Agents from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, or enrolled agent in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants and enrolled agents are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants and enrolled agents to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent, and the date or period of suspension. Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on Subpart A, Tax Conventions and related Treasury Decisions and Revenue Rulings; Subpart B, Legislation and related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical Indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Price: $1.00 (single copy). Subscription price: $50.00 a year; $12.50 additional for foreign mailing.

However, a stockholders' meeting is required if there is less than unanimous written consent.

Rev. Rul. 80-29

ISSUE

Is a stockholders' meeting required by section 422(b)(1) or 423(b)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code when, in accordance with state law, a corporation's qualified stock option plan or employee stock benefit plan is approved by either the unanimous written consent or, where allowable, by the majority written consent of the stockholders of the corporation?

FACTS

Corporation A obtained approval of a qualified stock option plan and an employee stock purchase plan by obtaining the unanimous written consent of all its stockholders within 12 months after the date the plans were adopted. The law of A's state of incorporation allows such unanimous written consent in lieu of a meeting of the stockholders.

Corporation B obtained approval of a qualified stock option plan and an employee stock purchase plan by obtaining the written consent of a majority of its stockholders within 12 months after the date the plans were adopted. The law of B's state of incorporation allows majority written consent in lieu of a meeting of the stockholders.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 422(b)(1) of the Code provides that a stock option plan must be approved by the stockholders of the granting corporation within 12 months before or after the date the plan is adopted in order for options granted under the plan to be qualified stock options.

Section 1.422-2(b)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations requires that stockholder approval of a qualified stock option plan must comply with all applicable provisions of the corporate charter and bylaws and the law of the state of incorporation, and must represent the express consent of stockholders holding at least a majority of the voting stock of the corporation voting in person or by proxy at a duly held stockholders' meeting.

Section 423(b)(2) of the Code provides that employee stock purchase plans must be approved by the stockholders of the granting corporation within 12 months before or after the date such plan is adopted.

Section 1.423-2(c)(1) of the regulations requires that the approval of the stockholders must comply with all applicable provisions of the corporate charter and bylaws and the law of the state of incorporation, and must represent the express consent of stockholders holding at least a majority of the voting stock of the corporation voting in person or by proxy at a duly held stockholders' meeting.

The above regulations set forth procedures for obtaining stockholder approval to give stockholders as a group control over the issuance of stock options and thereby enable them to protect their equity interests. Sections 1.422-2(b)(1) and 1.423-2(c)(1) of the regulations require that the procedures for obtaining the approval of stockholders afford them a measure of control over the issuance of stock options that is at least equivalent to the control that exists when the holders of a majority of the outstanding voting stock of a corporation consent at a duly held stockholders' meeting. This is done by providing that stockholder approval must represent the consent of stockholders holding at least a majority of voting stock of the corporation voting in person or by proxy at a duly held stockholders' meeting. When, in accordance with state law, the approval of stockholders is obtained by written consent in lieu of a stockholders' meeting, and when that consent is unanimous, the stockholders are afforded the same protection and control over the issuance of stock options that exists when they are given notice of, and have the opportunity to attend, a stockholders' meeting. See also Rev. Rul. 75-256, 1975-2 C.B. 194, which concludes that section 1.422-2(b)(1) requires the express consent of stockholders who hold at least a majority of the outstanding voting stock of a corporation and vote in person or by proxy at a duly held stockholders' meeting.

Various jurisdictions permit less than unanimous written consent in lieu of a meeting of stockholders. A stockholders' meeting provides dissenting stockholders an oportunity to present their views to the other stockholders. Unanimous written consent is a satisfactory alternative to a stockholders' meeting since there are no dissenting stockholders who need to present their views. However, where a corporation allows written consent by a majority of the stockholders, dissenting stockholders are denied the opportunity to convince the other stockholders of their dissenting views at a stockholders' meeting. Thus, the stockholders are not provided the measure of protection required by sections 1.422-2(b)(1) and 1.423-2(c) of the regulations.

HOLDING

A stockholders' meeting is not required by section 422(b)(1) or 423(b)(2) of the Code when, in accordance with state law, a corporation's qualified stock option plan or employee stock benefit plan is approved by unanimous written consent of the stockholders of the corporation. However, a stockholders' meeting is required if there is less than unanimous written consent by the stockholders.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On June 5, 1979, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Employment Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 31) under section 3402 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (44 FR 32251). These amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 5(a) of the Revenue Adjustment Act of 1975 (89 Stat. 975), section 3(a) of the Act of June 30, 1976 (90 Stat. 782), section 2(a)(1) and (b) of the Act of September 3, 1976 (90 Stat. 1201), section 3(a) of the Act of September 17, 1976 (90 Stat. 1273), sections 401 (d)(1) and (e) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1557), section 105(a) of the Tax Reduction and Simplification Act of 1977 (91 Stat. 140), and section 101(e)(1) of the Revenue Act of 1978 (92 Stat. 2770). No comments were received with respect to the proposed amendments, and no public hearing was requested or held. The proposed amendments are adopted by this Treasury decision without change.

WITHHOLDING REQUIREMENTS

Existing regulations provide that the tables contained in Circular E (Employer's Tax Guide) shall govern the amount of tax to be deducted and withheld under the percentage method of withholding on wages paid after April 30, 1975, and before January 1, 1976. The regulations adopted by this Treasury decision require reference to Circular E with respect to wages paid on or after January 1, 1976.

The final regulations adopted by this Treasury decision impose no new reporting or recordkeeping requirements. The principal effect of the final regulations is to conform existing regulations to various statutory changes to the income tax withholding requirements. Evaluation of the effectiveness of these regulations after issuance will be based upon comments received from offices within Treasury and the Internal Revenue Service, other governmental agencies, and the public.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is Susan K. Thompson of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. Section 31.3402(a) is deleted.

Par. 2. Section 31.3402(a)-2 is amended to read as follows:

§ 31.3402(a)-2 Amount of tax to be withheld under percentage method of withholding.

(a) Wages paid after April 30, 1975. With respect to wages paid after April 30, 1975, the amount of tax to be deducted and withheld under the percentage method of withholding shall be determined under the applicable percentage method withholding table contained in Circular E (Employer's Tax Guide).

(b) Wages paid after December 31, 1969, and on or before April 30, 1975. With respect to wages paid after December 31, 1969, and on or before April 30, 1975, the amount of tax to be deducted and withheld under the percentage method of withholding shall be determined in accordance with the tables set forth in section 3402(a), as in effect when such wages are paid.

Par. 3. Sections 31.3402(b), 31.3402(c), 31.3402(d), 31.3402(e), 31.3402(f)(1), 31.3402(f)(2), 31.3402(f)(3), 31.3402(f)(4), 31.3402(f)(5), 31.3402(f)(6), 31.3402(g), 31.3402(h)(1), 31.3402(h)(2), 31.3402(h)(3), 31.3402(h)(4), 31.3402(i), 31.3402(j), 31.3402(k), 31.3402(l), 31.3402(m), 31.3402(n), 31.3402(o), and 31.3402(p) are deleted.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Internal Revenue.

of the Treasury.

Section 4251.—Imposition of Tax [Communications]

26 CFR 49.4251-1: Imposition of tax.

Whether the exemption from the communication taxes provided by section 4253(h) of the Code applies to communication services and facilities furnished jointly to a nonprofit hospital and an associated medical activity. See Rev. Rul. 80-30, below.

Section 4253.—Exemptions [Communications]

(Also Section 4251; 26 CFR 49.4251-1.)

Exemption; communication services; nonprofit hospital and doctors. The exemption from communications taxes provided by section 4253(h) of the Code does not apply to amounts paid by a nonprofit hospital for communication services and facilities that are used exclusively by nonstaff doctors on the hospital premises or that are shared jointly by the doctors and the hospital. The exemption does apply to separate amounts paid by the hospital for communication services and facilities that are furnished for the exclusive use of the hospital in conducting its business. Rev. Rul. 68-382 distinguished.

Rev. Rul. 80-30

ISSUE

Under the circumstances described below, does the exemption from the federal communication taxes provided by section 4253(h) of the Internal Revenue Code apply to communication services furnished jointly to a nonprofit hospital and an associated medical activity?

FACTS

A hospital, incorporated as a separate entity, qualifies as a "nonprofit hospital" for purposes of the exemption under section 4253(h) of the Code. The hospital operates under a contract with a health plan that also provides general medical services through separate contracts with private doctors in the community. The doctors rent and maintain offices that are located in the hospital. Although many of the hospital's patients are under the care of these doctors, none of the doctors are on the hospital staff and their function under the health plan is to administer to any persons in the community enrolled in the plan, whether or not such persons are patients of the hospital.

Various taxable communication services and facilities are furnished for the exclusive use of the hospital. Some services and facilities, such as individual telephone instruments (stations), are furnished for use exclusively by the doctors in their offices. Other communications services and facilities are shared jointly by the hospital and the doctors. The hospital is billed by the telephone company for all services and facilities furnished. The doctors reimburse the hospital for a proportionate share of the charges for communication services and facilities.

The method of billing by the telephone company distinguishes the telephone stations used exclusively by the hospital through means of a coding system. The system is based on a physical identification of the actual telephone lines and equipment furnished exclusively for use by the hospital.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 4251 of the Code imp
a tax on amounts paid for certain c munication services, including l telephone service, toll telephone s ice, and teletypewriter exchange s ice. Under section 4253(h), no is imposed under section 4251 on amount paid by a nonprofit hosp for services furnished to such organ tion. For purposes of section 4253(
the term "nonprofit hospital" mean hospital referred to in section 170(
(1)(A)(iii) which is exempt from come tax under section 501(a).

In Rev. Rul. 66-382, 1966-2 C
474, a nonprofit hospital is furnis telephone service that includes te phones for use by patients in th rooms. The charge for the entire se ice is paid by the hospital to the lo telephone company. The revenue r ing holds that the exemption from t under section 4253(h) of the C applies to the hospital's payment charges for the communication se ices, notwithstanding the fact that t hospital charges its patients for use of its telephone facilities either a per-day basis or on a per-call bas

The circumstances in this case a distinguishable from those in Re
Rul. 66-382. In that revenue rulin the telephones in the rooms of t patients are provided as part of t overall telephone service furnished t hospital for use in conducting i business and the telephones are ava able and charged for by the telepho company whether or not the roo are occupied. Thus, they are regard as being for the sole use of the ho pital in caring for and meeting t needs of its patients and are analogo to other operating costs for which hospital charges patients.

In this case, the medical offices o erated by the doctors on the hospital premises are not part of the hospit business and thus the communicati services and facilities that are use exclusively by the doctors are not fu nished for the use of the hospital an would not have otherwise been pr
vided, but for the needs of the doctor
Further, the communication servic and facilities shared jointly by th hospital and the doctors are great than would normally be necessary to meet the needs of the hospital and, therefore, are not for the sole benefit of the hospital in conducting its business.

HOLDING

The exemption provided by section 4253(h) of the Code does not apply to amounts paid for the taxable communication services and facilities furnished that are used exclusively by the doctors or that are shared jointly by the hospital and the doctors. However, separate amounts paid by the hospital for the communication services and facilities that are furnished for the exclusive use of the hospital in conducting its business come within the exemption.

See Rev. Rul. 78-109, 1978-1 C.B. 360, which holds that the exemption from the communications tax for nonprofit hospitals applies to communication services furnished exclusively to a nonprofit hospital for which there is a separate charge, but does not apply to services that are used jointly by the hospital and a for-profit clinic or to services used solely by the clinic.

Section 4261.—Imposition of Tax [Transportation by Air]

26 CFR 49.4261-7: Examples of payments subject to tax.

Transportation; airline agency service charge. The service charge added by an airline or airline agency to the price of a ticket for taxable transportation to cover administrative costs involving use of the ticket by a different person in a different city is not subject to the tax imposed by section 4261(a) of the Code; Rev. Rul. 77-392 revoked.

Rev. Rul. 80-31

ISSUE

Does the tax on transportation of persons by air apply to amounts paid for a service charge added to the price of a ticket for taxable transportation by an airline or an airline agency to cover certain administrative costs involving the purchase of a ticket for use by another person in a different city?

FACTS

The Internal Revenue Service has given further consideration to Rev. Rul. 77-392, 1977-2 C.B. 380, which holds that a service charge added by an airline agency to the price of a ticket for transportation for use by another person in a different city is a payment for taxable transportation and is subject to the tax on transportation of persons by air. The charge covers the administrative cost of processing the paper work and the reservations connected with the transportation.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

The applicable section of the Code and the Facilities and Services Excise Tax Regulations are 4261(a), which imposes a tax upon the amount paid for taxable transportation of any person by air; 49.4261-7(c), which provides that amounts paid as additional charges for changing the class of accommodations, destination, or route, extending the time limit of a ticket, as "extra fare," or for exclusive occupancy of a section, etc; are taxable; and 49.4261-7(f), which provides that the tax applies to prepaid orders, exchange orders or similar orders for transportation, and to additional amounts paid in procuring transportation in connection with the use of such orders.

Rev. Rul. 55-762, 1955-2 C.B. 660, holds that a time payment differential that is paid in excess of the established cash fare is not part of the amount paid for transportation because it is confined to or representative of the expense incurred by the carrier in selling tickets on the time payment plan, and is not taxable.

In light of the foregoing and upon further consideration of Rev. Rul. 77-392, it has been concluded that the tax imposed by section 4261 of the Code should not apply to a separate charge made by an air carrier or an airline agent for a service not reasonably necessary to the air transportation itself, provided the service is optional and the charge bears a reasonable relation to the cost of providing the service.

Thus, in Rev. Rul. 77-392 the service charge is for an extra service that is not reasonably necessary to the basic air transportation because the ticket could be purchased without the charge in the other city. Therefore, the amount paid for such a charge made by an airline or an airline agency is not a payment for transportation within the scope of section 49.4261-7 of the regulations.

HOLDING

The amount paid for the service charge made by an airline or an airline agency for the costs of issuing the ticket to another person in a different city is not subject to the tax imposed by section 4261(a) of the Code.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 77-392 is revoked.

Section 6041.—Information at Source

26 CFR 1.6041-1: Return of information as to payments of $600 or more.

Information return; power company; payment for use of roads. A power company that paid an individual $3,000 for the unrestricted use of certain roads on the individual's farm for a 10-year period is required to file a Form 1099-MISC reporting the payment.

Rev. Rul. 80-32

ISSUE

Must a company that pays, in the course of its business, $3,000 to an individual for the unrestricted use of certain roads for a ten-year period file a Form 1099-MISC, Statement for Recipients of Miscellaneous Income, reporting the payment?

FACTS

A power company paid $3,000 to an individual for the unrestricted use of certain roads on the individual's farm for a ten-year period. The agreement entered into by the company and the individual giving the company unrestricted use of certain roads was entitled "Lease Agreement" and characterized the $3,000 payment as rent.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 6041(a) of the Internal Revenue Code requires the filing of information returns by all persons engaged in a trade or business and making payment in the course of such trade or business to another person of rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable gains, profits, and income of $600 or more in a taxable year.

Section 1.6041-1(a)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the return required by section 6041(a) of the Code shall be made on Forms 1096 and 1099.

A payment by a person engaged in a trade or business in the course of such trade or business of rent of $600 or more in any taxable year is one of the types of payments specifically mentioned in section 6041(a) of the Code.

HOLDING

The company is required to file a Form 1099-MISC.

BACKGROUND

This document contains temporary regulations governing claims by aerial applicators for payment of an amount equal to the taxes imposed under sections 4081 and 4041 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 on gasoline and special fuels used on farms for farming purposes. Sections 6420 and 6427 of the Code authorize the payments to the user and ultimate purchaser of these fuels. The law was amended by section 3 of the Act of October 14, 1978 (Pub. L. 95-458, 92 Stat. 1257) to permit aerial applicators to receive payments as users and ultimate purchasers of fuels they use on farms for farming purposes. A new Part 140, Temporary Excise Tax Regulations under Section 3 of the Act of October 14, 1978 (Pub. L. 95-458) is added by this document to Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations. The temporary regulations provided by this document will remain in effect until superseded by final regulations.

STATUTORY PROVISIONS

Sections 6420 and 6427 provide, respectively, for payment to the user and ultimate purchaser of an amount equal to the tax imposed under section 4081 on gasoline and under section 4041 on special fuels, if the gasoline or special fuel is used on a farm for farming purposes. For fuel used before April 1, 1979, only the owner, tenant, or operator of a farm is entitled to claim a payment as user and ultimate purchaser. Section 3 of the Act of October 14, 1978, amended sections 6420 and 6427 to entitle aerial applicators to receive these payments for fuels used by them after March 31, 1979. Before an aerial applicator may receive a payment, however, the owner, tenant, or operator of the farm served by the aerial applicator must waive his or her right to receive the payment in a written statement retained by the aerial applicator. The statement waiving the right of the owner, tenant, or operator to be treated as the user and ultimate purchaser of the gasoline or special fuel may be in any form that substantially meets the requirements of the regulations.

WAIVER OF PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENT OF TREASURY DIRECTIVE

There is need for expeditious adoption of the regulations contained in this document because of the need for immediate guidance to owners, tenants, and operators of farms and to aerial applicators using taxpaid gasoline and special fuels on farms for farming purposes. These regulations are necessary to determine whether the owner, tenant, or operator, or the aerial applicator will receive the payments provided in sections 6420 and 6427. For this reason, Jerome Kurtz, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, has determined that the provisions of paragraphs 8 through 14 of the Treasury Directive implementing Executive Order 12044 must be waived.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is H. B. Hartley of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and the Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of the amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, a new part 140, Temporary Excise Tax Regulations under Section 3 of the Act of October 14, 1978 (Pub. L. 95-458), is added to Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations, and the following temporary regulations are adopted:

PART 140—TEMPORARY EXCISE TAX REGULATIONS UNDER SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF OCTOBER 14, 1978 (PUB. L. 95-458)

Sec. 140.6420-1 Payment under section 6420 to be made to aerial applicators in certain cases. 140.6427-1 Payment under section 6427 to be made to aerial applicators in certain cases.

Authority: Sec. 7805, Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917 (26 U.S.C. 7805)), and sec. 3, Act of October 14, 1978 (92 Stat. 1257 (26 U.S.C. 6420, 6427)).

§ 140.6420-1 Payment under section 6420 to be made to aerial applicators in certain cases.

(a) Effective date. This regulation is effective for payment for gasoline used after March 31, 1979, by aerial applicators on farms for farming purposes.

(b) General rule. Section 6420 provides a payment to the user and ultimate purchaser of gasoline used on a farm for farming purposes of an amount equal to the tax imposed on gasoline under section 4081. The general rule of section 6420(c)(3)(A) is that only the owner, tenant, or operator of a farm is entitled to be treated as a user and ultimate purchaser. Section 6420(c)(4) provides that under section 6420(c)(3)(A), an aerial applicator is entitled to be treated as the user and ultimate purchaser of gasoline used by it on a farm for farming purposes, but only if the owner, tenant, or operator who is otherwise entitled to treatment as the user and ultimate purchaser waives his or her right to the payment.

(c) Form and manner of waiver. To waive the right to be treated as user and ultimate purchaser of gasoline which is used on a farm by an aerial applicator, the owner, tenant, or operator of a farm who is otherwise entitled to treatment as user and ultimate purchaser must execute an irrevocable written agreement no later than the date on which the aerial applicator claiming the credit files its return for the taxable year in which the gasoline is used. The agreement must identify the period during which the owner, tenant, or operator waives his or her right to payment. The effective period of the waiver cannot extend beyond the last day of the taxable year of the owner, tenant, or operator of the farm on which the gasoline was used. If the owner, tenant, or operator's taxable year extends beyond the taxable year of the applicator, the applicator can only claim payment for periods included in the applicator's taxable year. Periods after the last day of the applicator's taxable year which are included under the agreement must be claimed on the applicator's return for the next succeeding taxable year. The waiver may be in the form shown under paragraph (g) of this section or in any other form that meets the requirements of these regulations, but must clearly say that the owner, tenant, or operator of the farm knowingly gives up the right to receive a payment.

(d) Agreement included on aerial applicator's invoice. The agreement waiving a right to receive a payment under section 6420 may be a separate document or may appear on the face or the reverse side of an invoice for aerial application services or other unrelated document from the aerial applicator to the owner, tenant, or operator of the farm. If the waiver agreement apears on an invoice or other unrelated document, however, it must be printed in a section of the invoice or other document clearly set off from all other material contained in the invoice or other document, and it must be printed in type sufficiently large to put the owner, tenant, or operator of the farm on notice that he or she has waived his or her right to receive a payment under section 6420. Additionally, if the waiver agreement appears as part of any invoice or other unrelated document, it must be executed separately from any other item included in the invoice or other document which requires the owner, tenant, or operator's signature.

(e) Copies of agreement waiving right to payment. No copies of any agreement waiving a right to payments under section 6420 are to be submitted to the Internal Revenue Service unless a request is made by the Service to the taxpayer for the waivers. Aerial applicators must, however, retain copies of all waivers, and a copy of each waiver must be supplied by the aerial applicator to the owner, tenant, or operator of the farm who waives his or her right to receive a payment. See regulations § 48.6420(f)-1 for general requirements for records to be kept.

(f) Waiver on behalf of owner, tenant, or operator of farm. If any owner, tenant, or operator of a farm desires that an agent (e.g., a cooperative) act for him or her or cannot legally bind himself or herself due to infancy or other incompetency, an agent expressly authorized under local law to bind the owner, tenant, or operator in a waiver of his or her rights to a payment under section 6420 may sign the waiver on his or her behalf.

I hereby waive my right as owner/tenant/operator of a farm located at ______ ______________ to receive payment (address) or credit from the United States for gasoline used by ______________ on the (aerial applicator)

farm in connection with cultivating the soil, or the raising or harvesting of any agricultural or horticultural commodity. This waiver applies to gasoline used during the period ______________, both dates inclusive.

I understand that by signing this waiver, I give up my right to claim any credit or payment for gasoline used by the aerial applicator during the period indicated, and I acknowledge that I have not previously claimed any credit or payment for that gasoline.

(Signature of Owner/Tenant/Operator)

Taxpayer Identification No. ____________

§ 140.6427-1. Payment under section 6427 to be made to aerial applicators in certain cases.

(a) Effective date. This regulation is effective for payments for special fuels used after March 31, 1979, by aerial applicators on farms for farming purposes.

(b) In general. Section 6427 provides for payment to the user and ultimate purchaser of certain fuels used on a farm for farming purposes of an amount equal to the amount of tax imposed on these fuels under section 4041. The general rule is that only an owner, tenant, or operator of a farm is entitled to be treated as a user and ultimate purchaser. Section 6427(c) provides that an aerial applicator is entitled to be treated as the user and ultimate purchaser of fuels which it uses on a farm for farming purposes, but only if the owner, tenant, or operator of the farm who is otherwise entitled to be treated as the ultimate purchaser, waives his or her right to receive the payment.

(c) Rules governing waivers by owners, tenants, and operators of farms. The rules contained in section 6420 and the regulations under that section regarding waivers by owners, tenants, and operators of farms of their rights to payments under section 6420 for gasoline which is used by aerial applicators on a farm for farming purposes apply to waivers under this section.

There is a need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it is found impracticable to issue it with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

FRINGE BENEFIT REGULATIONS

NOVEMBER 29, 1979

Mr. LONG, from the Committee on Finance, submitted the following report to accompany H.R. 5224.[1]

The Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (H.R. 5224) to continue the existing prohibition on the issuance of fringe benefit regulations, through May 31, 1981, and for other purposes, having considered the same, reports favorably thereon with an amendment and recommends that the bill as amended do pass.

The amendment is shown in the text of the bill in italic.

House bill.—H.R. 5224 as it passed the House extends the existing prohibition on the issuance of regulations relating to the taxation of employee fringe benefits until June 1, 1981, extends the existing prohibition on the issuance of rulings or regulations with respect to the deductibility of certain commuting or transportation expenses paid or incurred prior to June 1, 1981, and extends, for 3 additional years, provisions relating to the tax treatment of travel expenses incurred by State legislators while away from home.

Committee bill.—The committee amendment deletes the provision relating to the tax treatment of travel expenses incurred by State legislators and adds provisions relating to the simplification of certain tax procedure rules and the extension of other provisions which are about to expire. The provisions added by the committee are contained in H.R. 5505, which was passed by the House on November 1, 1979. The Subcommittee on Taxation and Debt Management Generally of the Committee on Finance held public hearings on June 22, 1979, on a bill, S. 1062, which contains the simplification amendments.

I. SUMMARY

In general, H.R. 5224 contains changes in the Federal tax laws to extend provisions which are about to expire and to simplify certain procedural provisions. The following is a section-by-section summary of the bill as reported by the committee.

[2] Section 1. Employee fringe benefits

This section prohibits the issuance of final regulations under Code section 61, relating to taxation of employees fringe benefits, before June 1, 1981, and the issuance of proposed or final regulations on that subject which would be effective before June 1, 1981.

Section 2. Commuting expenses

This section prohibits the issuance of Treasury (or Internal Revenue Service) rulings on final regulations with respect to the deductibility of certain commuting or transportation expenses paid or incurred before June 1, 1981.

Section 3. Payment of interest on wrongful levies

This section provides for the payment of interest when the Internal Revenue Service administratively determines that a wrongful levy of property has been made and money is returned to the owner of the property.

Section 4. Repeal of requirement that transferors of certain property to exempt organizations must file returns

This section repeals the requirement that a person, who transfers income-producing property valued at more than $50,000 to an exempt organization, must file an information return if the organization is known to be subject to tax on unrelated business income.

Section 5. Repeal of addition to tax in the case of certain jeopardy assessments

This section repeals the 25-percent penalty imposed when a taxpayer violates or attempts to violate the special termination of taxable year jeopardy assessment provisions under present law.

Section 6. Repeal of requirement that information be furnished to the IRS in connection with certain stock options

This section repeals the requirement that information relating to certain qualified and restricted stock options be furnished to the Internal Revenue Service.

Section 7. Time for filing certain gift tax returns

This section provides that the due date for filing a gift tax return for the fourth calendar quarter or the calendar year is April 15 of the following year. Thus, the gift tax return due date would be consistent with the income tax due date for calendar year taxpayers. This section also provides that an extension for filing an income tax return will automatically extend the time for filing the fourth quarter or annual gift tax return.

Section 8(a). Uniformed Services Health Professions Scholarships

This section extends for one year the exclusion from gross income for amounts received by participants in the Uniformed Services Health Professions Scholarship program. As extended, the exclusion will be available to students entering the program in 1980 and to amounts received by them through 1984.

[3] Section 8(b). National Research Service Awards

This section extends the scholarship exclusion for National Research Service Awards for one year to apply to awards first made in 1980.

Section 8(c). Expenditures to remove architectural and transportation barriers to the handicapped and elderly

This section extends for 3 years, through December 31, 1982, the election to deduct annually up to $25,000 in capital costs incurred during the taxable year for the removal of architectural and transportation barriers to the handicapped and elderly.

Section 8(d). Interim relief for independent contractor status controversies

This second extends for one year, through December 31, 1980, the interim relief provided by the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1] with respect to independent contractor status controversies.

Section 8(e). Postponement of effective date for special limitations on net operating loss carryovers

This section defers for 2 years the effective date for provisions under the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1] relating to special limitations on net operating loss carryovers. These provisions would be deferred until January 1, 1982, with respect to tax-free reorganizations and until June 30, 1982, with respect to taxable acquisitions.

II. EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

A. Employee Fringe Benefits (sec. 1 of the bill and sec. 61 of the Code)

Present law

Section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code defines gross income as including "all income from whatever source derived" and specifies that it includes "compensation for services". The regulations (§ 1.61-2(a)(1)) provide that income includes compensation for services paid for other than in money. Further, the Supreme Court has stated that section 61 "is broad enough to include in taxable income any economic or financial benefit conferred on the employee as compensation whatever the form or mode by which it is effected."[1] In actual practice, however, the "economic benefit" test has not been rigidly followed. Thus, where compensation is paid in some form other than cash, the issue as to taxability has been resolved by statutes, regulations, and administrative rulings which take account of several different factors.

Some fringe benefits, such as the provision of health insurance by an employer for its employees, are expressly excluded from gross income by the Internal Revenue Code; others are excluded by legislation outside the Code; and yet other exclusions are based on judicial authority or on administrative practice. For example, some fringe benefits have been excluded under administrative practice on the basis of a de minimis principle, i.e., accounting for the benefits of small value would be unreasonable or administratively impractical. Other items are excluded due to a combination of valuation difficulties and widely held perceptions that the items do not constitute income.

[4] In 1975, the Treasury Department issued a discussion draft of proposed regulations[2] which contained a number of rules for determining whether various fringe benefits constitute taxable compensation. Under the principles contained in the discussion draft, some employee fringe benefits which, as a matter of prior administrative practice, had not been considered to be taxable compensation would have been treated as subject to tax. Other benefits which might be viewed as taxable compensation would not have been taxed under the discussion draft's proposed rules. The discussion draft was withdrawn by the Treasury Department on December 28, 1976.[3] Thus, the question of whether, and what, employee fringe benefits result in taxable income to employees generally continues to depend on the facts and circumstances in each individual case.

In 1978, Public Law 95-427 [1978-2 C.B. 363] was enacted to prohibit the Treasury Department from issuing final regulations, under section 61 of the Code, relating to the income tax treatment of fringe benefits prior to 1980. The Act further provided that no regulations relating to the treatment of fringe benefits under section 61 were to be proposed which would be effective prior to 1980.

Reasons for change

Although the use of fringe benefits has increased in recent years, few comprehensive or generally applicable income tax rules have been developed. As a result, there has been an inevitable lack of uniformity of treatment of taxpayers who receive different types of benefits even though the benefits may have approximately the same economic value.

The appropriate income tax treatment of various fringe benefits has led to a number of problems aside from the issue of whether a benefit constitutes taxable compensation. Although there are differences between includible "compensation" for income tax purposes and "wages" for payroll tax purposes, the terms are used interchangeably. Thus, employers may be presented with the question of whether employment taxes should be withheld from an employee's wages because of non-cash benefits being provided to employees.[4] In addition, both taxpayers and the Internal Revenue Service must face difficult problems of valuing benefits provided in kind.

[3] 41 Fed. Reg. 56334 (Dec. 28, 1976).

While the committee recognizes that the Internal Revenue Service constantly is reexamining the treatment of fringe benefits in accordance with its obligations to enforce the tax laws, the committee also recognizes that it is primarily the responsibility of the Congress to legislate tax policy. The committee believes that a proper review of these issues requires a longer period of time than is available under Public Law 95-427.

Explanation of provision

The bill provides that the Treasury Department (Internal Revenue Service) is precluded from issuing final regulations, under section 61, relating to the income tax treatment of fringe benefits prior to June 1, 1981. In addition, no regulations relating to the treatment of fringe [5] benefits under section 61 are to be proposed which would be effective prior to June 1, 1981. While the bill would prevent the IRS from deviating from the present administration of the income tax laws as they concern the taxation of fringe benefits as compensation, the bill would not prevent the IRS from continuing to study the question of the appropriate tax treatment of fringe benefits.

Although the provisions of this bill relate only to the issuance of regulations, it is still the intent of the committee that the Treasury Department will not alter, or deviate from, in any significant way, the historical treatment of fringe benefits through the issuance of revenue rulings or revenue procedures, etc.

Effective date

The provision is effective upon enactment.

Revenue effect

This provision would continue present administrative practice and thus would have no effect on budget receipts.

B. Commuting Expenses (sec. 2 of the bill, Rev. Rul. 76-453, and secs. 62, 162, and 262 of the Code)

Present law

In general, a taxpayer is allowed a deduction for ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred in carrying on a trade or business. This includes transportatiaon expenses incurred in the pursuit of a trade or business. However, no deduction is allowed for personal, living, or family expenses, including the cost of commuting to and from work. Problems have arisen in delineating between transportation expenses which are considered to be nondeductible personal commuting expenses and other transportation expenses which are deductible business expenses. Generally, transportation expenses are not deductible if the taxpayer is going to his principal place of work from his residence or is returning to his home from his principal place of work. On the other hand, transportation expenses to temporary worksites other than the taxpayer's principal place of work often are deductible as a business expense.

On November 22, 1976, the IRS published Revenue Ruling 76-453 (1976-2 C.B. 86) which states that a taxpayer's transportation expenses incurred in traveling between the taxpayer's residence and place of work, even though temporary, will be nondeductible commuting expenses, regardless of the nature of the work performed, the distance traveled, the mode of transport, or the degree of necessity. In addition, the ruling states that reimbursement for such expenses will be considered "wages" for purposes of FICA, FUTA, and income tax withholding. The ruling was originally effective for transportation costs paid or incurred after December 31, 1976. The Service postponed the effective date of this ruling, and on September 23, 1977, announced that the ruling was suspended indefinitely and that proposed regulations inviting public comment would be issued shortly. Proposed regulations have not as yet been issued.

Public Law 95-427 was enacted in 1978 to require that the application of the income tax, FICA, FUTA, and withholding provisions relating to the treatment of transportation expenses paid or incurred after 1976 and before January 1, 1980, in traveling between a tax-[6]payer's residence and place of work, shall be made fully in accordance with the rules in effect prior to the issuance of Revenue Ruling 76-453 on November 22, 1976. Thus, the IRS may not issue any ruling or final regulation prior to January 1, 1980, changing the tax treatment of these transportation exepnses paid or incurred prior to that date.

It was intended that the provision would allow Congress time to study this matter prior to the effective date of any changes made by new regulations or ruling issued by the IRS.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that the Congress should have an additional opportunity to study this area prior to the adoption of any rules or regulations by the IRS changing the treatment of expenses for transportation between a taxpayer's residence and place of work.

Explanation of provision

The bill extends the provisions of Public Law 95-427 to apply to expenses, paid or incurred prior to June 1, 1981, for transportation between a taxpayer's residence and place of work.

Effective date

The provision is effective with respect to expenses, paid or incurred after December 31, 1979, and before June 1, 1981, for transportation between a taxpayer's residence and place of work.

Revenue effect

This provision would continue present administrative practice and thus would have no effect on budget receipts.

C. Payment of Interest on Wrongful Levies (sec. 3 of the bill and sec. 6343(b) of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, two remedies are provided for third-party owners whose property is wrongfully seized by the Internal Revenue Service for the collection of a delinquent taxpayer's liability. In general, one remedy provides an administrative procedure for the return of the property wrongfully seized (sec. 6343(b)), and the other authorizes a civil action for an injunction, the return of the property wrongfully seized, or the proceeds from the sale of the property (sec. 7426).

[4] For a recent discussion of differences between the terms "income" and "wages," see Central Illinois Power Service Co. v. United States, 435 U.S. 21, 98 S. Ct. 917 (1978).

Under the administrative procedure, the Internal Revenue Service is authorized to return property (or the proceeds from the sale of the property) to a person when it determines that the levy was wrongful (sec. 6343(b)). Where the Service returns the property or proceeds under the administrative procedure, a person whose property was wrongfully seized is not entitled to the payment of interest for the period the Government held the property or the proceeds therefrom.

On the other hand, the payment of interest is provided if the third party prevails under the judicial remedy, sec. 7426(g).[1]

Under this provision, interest accrues from the date the Service receives money wrongfully levied upon (or the date of the sale of prop-[7]erty wrongfully levied upon) until the date the judgment is paid. The interest is payable at the rate generally established to be paid on the overpayment of taxes (sec. 6621).[2]

Reasons for change

The committee believes that interest should be payable where it is administratively determined by the Internal Revenue Service that a wrongful levy of property has been made and money is returned to the owner of the property by the Service.

Explanation of provision

The bill provides for the payment of interest to a person under the administrative procedure for wrongful levies. Under rules similar to those in the interest provisions for the judicial remedy, interest is to be paid if money is wrongfully seized or if the proceeds from a sale of the property are returned to the owner of the property. The rate of interest is to be determined under the general provision for the payment of interest on overpayments of tax. In the case of a seizure of money, the period for the payment of interest begins with the date the money is seized and ends on a date (to be determined by the Secretary) not more than 30 days prior to the date when the money is returned. In the case of a payment of the proceeds from the sale of property wrongfully seized, the period for the payment of interest begins with the date of sale of the property and ends on a date (to be determined by the Secretary) not more than 30 days prior to the date when the payment to the owner is made.[3]

Effective date

This provision applies to levies made after the date of enactment of the bill.

Revenue effect

This provision will reduce budget receipts by a negligible amount.

D. Repeal of Requirement that Transferors of Certain Property to Exempt Organizations Must File Returns (sec. 4 of the bill and sec. 6050 of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, a person who transfers income-producing property valued at over $50,000 (without regard to any lien thereon) to an exempt organization must file a return (Form 4629) if the transferor knows the recipient is the type of organization subject to tax on its unrelated business income (sec. 6050). The regulations require that the return show a description of property transferred, the date of transfer, the fair market value of the property (without regard to any lien thereon) on that date, and the amount of any mortgage or similar lien on the property immediately after the transfer. This return requirement was added by the Tax Reform Act of 1969 [Pub. L. 91-172, 1969-3 C.B. 10].

[8] Under present law, the Internal Revenue Service can require an exempt organization to maintain records and furnish information with respect to transfers of income-producing property to it (secs. 6001 and 6033). Thus, the information now required to be furnished by the transferor may also be furnished by the transferee exempt organization.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that the reporting requirement for transfers of property to exempt organizations is unnecessary and should be repealed.

Explanation of provision

The bill repeals the requirement that transferors file an information return with respect to transfers to an exempt organization.

Effective date

The provision applies to transfers of property made after the date of enactment of the bill.

Revenue effect

This provision will have no direct effect on budget receipts.

E. Repeal of Addition to Tax in the Case of Certain Jeopardy Assessments (sec. 5 of the bill and sec. 6658 of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, if the Internal Revenue Service determines that the collection of tax is in jeopardy, an assessment and collection of that tax may be made without resorting to the normal time-consuming assessment and collection procedures. For this purpose, there are two basic types of special assessments—termination assessments (sec. 6851) and jeopardy assessments (secs. 6861 and 6862). The termination assessment is limited to the assessment of income tax when the collection of income tax is in jeopardy before the end of the taxpayer's normal tax year or before the due date of return. In other income tax cases and in all cases involving other taxes, the jeopardy assessment procedures are used.

[1] The general provision for payment of interest on a judgment for the overpayment of taxes is sec. 2411 of title 28 of the United States Code. The rate of interest under this provision is determined by reference to section 6621 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

[2] Currently, the rate of interest is 6 percent; however, under the present law provision, the IRS has determined that the rate will be 12 percent, effective on February 1, 1980 (Rev. Rul. 79-366 [1979-45 I.R.B. 16], based on October 12, 1979).

[3] The rule relating to the date after which interest is no longer payable is similar to the rule on interest on overpayment of tax (sec. 6611(b)(2)).

The Code (sec. 6658) provides an addition to tax equal to 25 percent of the amount of tax when a taxpayer violates or attempts to violate the termination assessment provision. No similar penalty applies to jeopardy assessments.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that the addition to tax for a violation, or attempted violation, of the termination assessment provision is unnecessary and should be repealed.

Explanation of provision

The bill repeals the 25-percent addition to tax penalty with respect to termination assessments.

Effective date

This provision applies to violations (or attempted violations) occurring after the date of enactment of this bill.

[9] Revenue effect

This provision will reduce budget receipts by a negligible amount.

F. Repeal of Requirement that Information be Furnished to the Internal Revenue Service in Connection with Certain Stock Options (sec. 6 of the bill and sec. 6039 of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, an annual information return (Form 3921) is required to be filed with the Internal Revenue Service by a corporation which transfers a share of stock to any person pursuant to his exercise of a qualified stock option (described in sec. 422) or restricted stock option (sec. 424).[1] In addition, a return (Form 3922) is required to be filed by every corporation that records (or has its agent record) a transfer of stock which was acquired either through the exercise of an option granted under an employee stock purchase plan (sec. 423) at an exercise price between 85 percent and 100 percent of the stock's value as of the time of the grant of the option, or through the exercise of a restricted stock option (sec. 424) at an exercise price between 85 percent and 95 percent of the value of the stock as of the time of the grant of the option. (Under each of these sections, a portion of the sales price for the stock is treated as ordinary income.)

A written statement concerning information relating to these transfers must also be furnished to the persons listed on the return prior to January 31 of the year following the calendar year covered by the return.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that the requirement that the information relating to certain stock options be furnished to the Service is unnecessary and should be repealed.

Explanation of provision

The bill repeals the requirement that information relating to certain qualified and restricted stock options be furnished to the Internal Revenue Service.

Effective date

This provision applies with respect to calendar years beginning after 1979.

Revenue effect

This provision will have no direct effect on budget receipts.

G. Time for Filing Certain Gift Tax Returns (sec. 7 of the bill and sec. 6075(b) of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, a gift tax return, if required, is due on or before the 15th day of the second month following the close of the calendar quarter. Quarterly returns are required when taxable gifts made [10] during a calendar year exceed $25,000. Where all transfers made in a calendar year which are subject to the gift tax filing requirements do not exceed $25,000 in taxable gifts, a return need be filed only by the filing date for gifts made during the fourth calendar quarter of the calendar year (i.e., February 15 of the following year).

On the other hand, an individual's income tax return is due on or before the 15th day of the fourth month following the close of the taxable year. For the calendar year taxpayer, a return is due on or before April 15. In addition, the Internal Revenue Service may grant an extension of time for filing a return. Presently, the Service grants an automatic 2-month extension for individuals upon timely application and payment of the estimated tax due.

Reasons for change

Because the filing date for the gift tax return is earlier than the due date of an individual's income tax return, a timely gift tax return cannot be filed for a taxable gift if the obligation to file a gift tax return is discovered during a review of the taxpayer's financial transactions in connection with the preparation of this income tax return. The committee believes that conformity of filing dates should be made in order to allow a taxpayer's advisors to review the taxpayer's annual transactions at one time to prepare both the gift and income tax returns.

Explanation of provision

The bill provides that the due date for the fourth calendar quarter or annual gift tax return is April 15. In addition, the bill provides that an extension for filing the income tax return of a calendar year taxpaper will automatically extend the time for filing the fourth quarter or annual gift tax return.

Effective date

The provision applies to gift tax returns for calendar years ending after the date of enactment of this bill.

Revenue effect

This provision will reduce budget receipts by a negligible amount.

H. Uniformed Services Health Professions Scholarships and National Research Service Awards (subsections (a) and (b) of sec. 8 of the bill)

Present law

Uniformed Services Health Professions Scholarships

The Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1] extended the exclusion provided under prior law for participants in the Uniformed Services Health Professions Scholarship programs (including the Armed Forces and Public Health Professions Scholarship programs) so that students entering the programs in 1979 could exclude amounts received under these programs through 1983. This one-year extension generally covered program participants entering medical school in 1979 for their four years of training.

[1] Under a provision added by section 603 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1], options exercised after May 20, 1981, will no longer be treated as qualified or restricted stock options.

[11] National Research Service Awards

In addition, the 1978 Act provided tax-exempt scholarship treatment for National Research Service Awards made through 1979 for the duration of such awards.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that, pending the completion of a comprehensive review of the tax treatment of scholarships, the excludable treatment of amounts received under the Uniformed Services Health Professions Scholarships program and as a National Research Service Award should be continued.

Explanation of provision

The provision extends the tax exemption for participants in the Uniformed Services Health Professions Scholarship programs with respect to students entering programs in 1980, and applies to amounts received by them through 1984.

Also, the tax-exempt scholarship treatment for National Research Service Awards is extended to awards initially made during calendar year 1980.

Revenue effect

The one-year extension of tax exemption for Uniformed Services Health Professions Scholarship programs will reduce budget receipts by less than $5 million per year for fiscal years 1980-1984.

The one-year extension of tax exemption for 1980 National Research Service Awards will reduce budget receipts by $6 million in fiscal year 1981, $6 million in fiscal year 1982, and less than $5 million in fiscal year 1983.

I. Deduction for Expenditures to Remove Architectural and Transportation Barriers to the Handicapped and Elderly (sec. 8(c) of the bill and sec. 190 of the Code)

Present law

The Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1] provided taxpayers with an elective tax deduction for the removal of architectural and transportation barriers to the handicapped and elderly (Code sec. 190). A taxpayer may treat certain expenses for the removal of such barriers as deductible expenses in the year paid or incurred instead of capitalizing them. Deductible expenses are those paid or incurred in order to make more accessible to, and usable by, the handicapped and elderly any facility or public transportation vehicle owned or leased by the taxpayer for use in his trade or business. The maximum deduction for a taxpayer, including a controlled group of corporations filing a consolidated return for any taxable year, is $25,000.

In order to qualify for the deduction, the expenses must be for barrier removal in business facilities which the taxpayer establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary meets standards set by the Secretary of the Treasury with the concurrence of the Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board as established by 1968 legislation.

[12] The deduction was limited to a three-year period ending before January 1, 1980, in order that the Congress could review its effectiveness.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that it is appropriate to extend this provision for an additional period of time so that the review of the effectiveness of the provision may be completed.

Explanation of provision

This provision extends the elective deduction for expenditures to remove architectural and transportation barriers to the handicapped and the elderly for three years, to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1983.

Revenue effect

This provision will result in a reduction in budget receipts of $4 million in fiscal 1980, $10 million per year in fiscal years 1981 and 1982, and $6 million in fiscal year 1983.

J. Extension of Interim Relief in Independent Contractor Status Controversies (sec. 8(d) of the bill and sec. 530 of the Revenue Act of 1978)

Present law

The Revenue Act of 1978 provided interim relief (until January 1, 1980) for certain taxpayers involved in controversies with the Internal Revenue Service over IRS-proposed reclassifications of workers, whom the taxpayers had considered independent contractors, as employees. In general, the Act terminated taxpayers' potential liabilities for Federal income tax withholding, social security and FUTA taxes in cases where taxpayers have a reasonable basis for treating workers other than as employees. In addition, the Act prohibited the issuance of Treasury regulations and Revenue Rulings on common law employment status before January 1, 1980, while the Congress considered legislative proposals for clarifying individuals' employment tax status.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that it is appropriate to extend the interim relief provision to permit the orderly consideration of pending legislation which will provide permanent rules in this area. Although the Subcommittee on Select Revenue Measures of the House Committee on Ways and Means has held hearings on this subject and has completed the markup of a bill (H.R. 5460) providing permanent rules, it may not be possible to complete Congressional action on proposed legislation for permanent rules before 1980 because of the press of other legislative business.

Explanation of provision

This provision extends the relief period, enacted in the Revenue Act of 1978, for one year until 1981, in order to allow the Congress to complete consideration of clarifying legislation.

Revenue effect

The revenue loss of this provision cannot be estimated because it generally affects individuals whose employment tax status under the present common law rules is the subject of dispute.

[13] K. Postponement of Effective Date for Special Limitations on Net Operating Loss Carryovers (sec. 8(e) of the bill and secs. 382 and 383 of the Code)

Present law

Prior to enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1976, generally, if new owners purchased 50 percent or more of the stock of a loss corporation during a two-year period, the corporation's loss carryovers from prior years were allowed in full only if the corporation continued to conduct its prior trade or business or substantially the same kind of business. Generally, if the same business was not continued, however, loss carryovers were completely lost. This "purchase" rule applied where one or more of the 10 largest shareholders increased their stock ownership, within a two-year period, by 50 percentage points or more in a transaction in which the purchasers took a cost basis in their stock (except where the stock was acquired from "related" persons).

In the case of a tax-free reorganization, loss carryovers were allowed on a declining scale. If the former owners of the loss company received 20 percent or more of the fair market value of the stock of the acquiring company, the loss carryovers were allowed in full. For each percentage point less than 20 which the former owners received, the loss carryover was reduced by five percent. It was immaterial whether the business of the loss company was continued after the reorganization.

The 1976 Act extensively revised the Code provisions dealing with the carryover of net operating losses in cases of acquisitions of loss corporations. The limitations on loss carryover attributes were to apply to acquisitions made by purchase or through corporate reorganizations. The new provisions changed the basic concepts underlying the rules by deleting continuity of business requirements for purchases and establishing a new continuity of ownership test applicable to both purchases and reorganizations.

These new provisions were to apply to plans of reorganization adopted on or after January 1, 1978, and to sales or exchanges in taxable years beginning after June 30, 1978. However, the Revenue Act of 1978 extended these effective dates for two years, to January 1, 1980, and June 30, 1980.

Reasons for change

A number of technical problems concerning the 1976 revisions have been brought to the committee's attention. The committee believes that an additional period of time is necessary to complete a review of the provision.

Explanation of provision

This provision delays the effective date of the 1976 Act change for an additional two years, until January 1, 1982, with respect to plans of reorganization adopted on or after that date, or until June 30, 1982, with respect to sales or exchanges occurring in taxable years beginning after that date.

Revenue effect

The provision will reduce budget receipts by less than $5 million annually during the postponement period.

House of Representatives
Report No. 96-448
1st Session

[Bracketed numerals indicate official report page numbers]

SEPTEMBER 20, 1979

Mr. ULLMAN, from the Committee on Ways and Means, submitted the following Report to accompany H.R. 5224.[1]

The Committee on Ways and Means, to whom was referred the bill (H.R. 5224) to continue through December 31, 1980, the existing prohibition on the issuance of fringe benefit regulations, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with amendments and recommend that the bill as amended do pass.

* * * * *

[2] I. SUMMARY

The bill, as amended, contains prohibitions on the issuance of final regulations under Code section 61, relating to the taxation of employee fringe benefits, before June 1, 1981, and the issuance of proposed or final regulations on that subject which would be effective before June 1, 1981.

The bill also contains a prohibition on the issuance of Treasury (or Internal Revenue Service) rulings or final regulations with respect to the deductibility of certain commuting or transportation expenses paid or incurred before June 1, 1981.

The bill also extends, for 3 additional years, provisions relating to the tax treatment of travel expenses incurred by State legislators while away from home. As extended, the provisions would apply to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1981.

These deferrals are to give Congress additional time to review these areas and to consider any proposed changes in Treasury regulations or rulings.

* * * * *

[5] C. State Legislators Business Expenses (sec. 3 of the bill and sec. 162 of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, an individual is allowed a deduction for traveling expenses (including amounts expended for meals and lodging) while away from home overnight in the pursuit of a trade or business (sec. 162(a)). These expenses are deductible only if they are reasonable and necessary in the taxpayer's business and directly attributable to it. "Lavish or extravagant" expenses are not allowable deductions. In addition, no deductions are allowed for personal, living, and family expenses except as expressly allowed under the Code (sec. 262).

Generally, under section 262, expenses and losses attributable to a [6] dwelling unit which is occupied by a taxpayer as his personal residence are not deductible. However, deductions for interest, certain taxes, and casualty losses attributable to a personal residence are expressly allowed under other provision of the tax laws (secs. 163, 164, and 165).

A taxpayer's "home" for purposes of the deduction of traveling expenses generally means his principal place of business or employment. Where a taxpayer has more than one trade or business, or a single trade or business which requires him to spend a substantial amount of time at two or more localities, his "home" is held to be at his principal place of business. A taxpayer's principal place of business is determined on an objective basis taking into account the facts and circumstances in each case. The more important factors to be considered in determining the taxpayer's principal place of business (or tax home) are: (1) the total time ordinarily spent by the taxpayer at each of his business posts, (2) the degree of business activity at each location, (3) the amount of income derived from each location, and (4) other significant contacts of the taxpayer at each location. No one factor is determinative.

[1] Public Law 96-167, page 12.

In 1952 a provision was adopted with respect to the living expenses paid or incurred by a Member of Congress (including a Delegate or Resident Commissioner).[1] Under these rules, the place of residence of a Member of Congress within the congressional district which he represents in Congress is considered his tax home. However, amounts expended by the Member within each taxable year for away from home living expenses are not deductible in excess of $3,000.

Prior to the Tax Reform Act of 1976, no special rule applied to determine a State legislator's tax home. As a result, the tax home of a State legislator was determined in accordance with the general rule described above.

The Tax Reform Act of 1976 provided an election for the tax treatment of State legislators for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1976. This was extended for one year by the Tax Reduction and Simplification Act of 1977 to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1977, and was extended further by Public Law 96-258 to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1978.[2]

Under this election, a State legislator may, for any such taxable year, treat his place of residence within his legislative district as his tax home for purposes of computing the deduction for away from home living expenses. If this election is made, the legislator is treated as having expended for living expenses an amount equal to the sum of the daily amount of per diem generally allowed to employees of the U.S. [7] government for traveling away from home,[3] multiplied by the number of days during that year that the State legislature was in session, including any day in which the legislature was in recess for a period of four or fewer consecutive days. In addition, if the State legislature was in recess for more than four consecutive days, a State legislature may count each day in which his physical presence was formally recorded at a meeting of a committee of the State legislature. For this purpose, the rate of per diem to be used is to be the rate that was in effect during the period for which the deduction was claimed.

These limitations apply only with respect to the away from home living expenses incurred in connection with the trade or business of being a legislator. The 1976 Act did not impose a limitation on living expenses incurred by a legislator in connection with a trade or business other than that of being a legislator. As to any other trade or business, the ordinarily applicable test continues to apply.

In the absence of further congressional action, the tax home of a State legislator, for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1977, has to be determined in accordance with the general rules described previously.

Reasons for change

The provision which allows a State legislator to treat his place of residence within his legislative district as his tax home for purposes of computing the deduction for away from home living expenses only applies to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1978. The committee believes this provision should be extended for a 3-year period during which time the problem can be given further consideration and a permanent rule can be developed.

Explanation of provision

The provision extends, for 3 additional years, the effective date of the provision relating to the tax treatment of certain travel expenses incurred by State legislators while away from home to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1981.

Effective date

The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1977, and before January 1, 1981.

Revenue effect

It is estimated that this provision would reduce budget receipts by $8 million in fiscal year 1980 and by $2 million in fiscal year 1981.

[2] H.R. 3091, which would extend for one additional year the effective date for the tax treatment of travel expenses incurred by State legislators, was passed by the House on March 27, 1979, and by the Senate on March 28, 1979. The Senate amended the House-passed bill by adding certain social service amendments, and no conference action has been taken.

On March 28, 1979, the Subcommittee on Select Revenue Measures of the Committee on Ways and Means conducted hearings on three bills relating to the tax treatment of travel expenses incurred by State legislators and Members of Congress. No legislative recommendations have been referred by the Subcommittee to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Part III. Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous

26 CFR 601.201: Rulings and determinations letters.
(Also Part I, Section 103; 1.103-13.)

Rev. Proc. 80-1

Section 1. Purpose

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to set forth procedures for submission of requests for ruling to the Internal Revenue Service to which section 103(c) of the Internal Revenue Code and sections 1.103-13, 1.103-14, and 1.103-15 of the Income Tax Regulations apply, in those instances in which the requester of the ruling is other than the issuer of the prospective obligations.

Sec. 2. Background

.01 Section 103(a) of the Code provides that gross income does not include interest on 1) the obligations of a state or political subdivision therof, and 2) qualified scholarship funding bonds. Section 103(c)(1) provides that, with certain exceptions, any arbitrage bond will not be treated as an obligation described in section 103(a)(1) or (2). An arbitrage bond is any obligation that is part of an issue all or a major portion (more than 15 percent) of the proceeds of which are reasonably expected to be used to acquire securities that will produce a yield over the term of the issue that is materially higher than the yield on such issue.

.02 Sections 1.103-13, 1.103-14, and 1.103-15 of the regulations provide rules relating to whether bonds are arbitrage bonds as defined in section 103(c)(2) of the Code. Certain provisions of those regulations describe conditions under which an issuer of prospective obligations must obtain a ruling that such obligations will not be arbitrage bonds if certain actions proposed by the issuer are taken. For example, section 1.103-13(c)(1)(ii), relating to computation of yield, provides that in the case of governmental obligations, the computation must be made separately for each issue of obligations issued by a governmental unit, except that a single computation may be made for two or more issues if, before the issuance of the last issue, the issuer establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the single computation will not distort yield or otherwise tend to defeat the purposes of section 103(c).

There are also other situations, in addition to the example described above, under which an issuer must request a ruling pursuant to provisions of sections 1.103-13, 1.103-14 and 1.103-15 or the regulations that prospective obligations are not arbitrage bonds as defined in section 103(c)(2) of the Code.

.03 Rev. Proc. 79-4, 1979-1 C.B. 483, sets forth procedures that preclude the issuance of a ruling to an issuer of prospective obligations unless the issuer has submitted a statement of facts, reasons, and legal authority, together with supporting documents that address all issues pertaining to whether the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a) of the Code. The reason for the requirements set forth in Rev. Proc. 79-4 is that, under section 7478, the issuer (and only the issuer) of the prospective obligations may ultimately petition the United States Tax Court to determine whether the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a).

.04 Rev. Proc. 79-12, 1979-1 C.B. 492, amplifies Rev. Proc. 79-4 and sets forth the procedures for submitting requests for ruling to which section 103 of the Code applies in those instances in which the requester is other than the issuer of the prospective obligations. Rev. Proc. 79-12 permits parties with a material financial interest in the prospective obligations to obtain rulings that address a specific issue pertaining to whether the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a). The Service also will issue rulings to such requesters that the prospective obligations are described in section 103(a).

Sec. 3. Application

.01 In the case of requests for rulings made by a person, other than the issuer, that has a material financial interest in the issuance of governmental obligations, the Service will issue rulings whether such obligations are arbitrage bonds as defined in section 103(c)(2) of the Code in situations referred to in section 2.02 of this revenue procedure. Thus, for example, a party that has a material financial interest in the issue may request a ruling that a single computation of yield may be made pursuant to section 1.103-13(c)(1)(ii) of the regulations. Such requests will be processed under Rev. Proc. 79-12 rather than Rev. Proc. 79-4.

.02 The requester must comply with the requirements of any other applicable revenue procedures, other than Rev. Proc. 79-4, that relate to submission to the Service of requests for ruling.

Sec. 4. Inquiries

Inquiries with respect to this revenue procedure should refer to its number and should be addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: T:I:I or T:C:E, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

Sec. 5. Effect on Other Documents

This revenue procedure amplifies Rev. Proc. 79-12.

Part 351—OFFERINGS OF UNITED STATES SAVINGS BONDS, SERIES EE

§ 351.0 Offering of bonds.

The Secretary of the Treasury offers for sale to the people of the United States, United States Savings Bonds of Series EE, hereinafter referred to as "Series EE bonds" or "bonds." This offer, effective as of January 1, 1980, will continue until terminated by the Secretary of the Treasury.

§ 351.8 Taxation.

(a) General. The increment in value, represented by the difference between the price paid for a Series EE bond and the redemption value received for it, is interest. This interest is subject to all taxes imposed under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended. The bonds are subject to estate, inheritance, gift, or other excise taxes, whether Federal or State, but are exempt from all other taxation now or hereafter imposed on the principal or interest of any State, any possession of the United States or any local taxing authority.

(b) Federal income tax on bonds. The owner of a Series EE bond may use either of the following two methods for reporting the increase in the redemption value of the bond for Federal income tax purposes:

(1) Cash basis. Defer reporting the increase to the year of final maturity, redemption, or other disposition, whichever is earlier; or

(2) Accrual basis. Elect to report the increase each year as it accrues, in which case the election applies to all Series EE bonds then owned by the taxpayer and those subsequently acquired, as well as to any other obligations purchased on a discount basis, such as those of Series E.

If the method in paragraph (b)(1) of this section is used, the taxpayer may change to the method in paragraph (b)(2) of this section without obtaining permission from the Internal Revenue Service. However, once the election to use the method in paragraph (b)(2) of this section is made, the taxpayer may not change the method of reporting unless he or she obtains permission from the Internal Revenue Service. For further information, the District Director of the taxpayer's district, or the Internal Revenue Service, Washington, D.C. 20224, should be consulted.

(c) Tax-deferred exchanges. Department of the Treasury Circular, Public Debt Series No. 2-80 (31 CFR Part 352), authorizes the exchange of Series EE bonds for Series HH bonds with a continuation of the tax-deferral privilege. The rules governing tax-deferred exchanges are contained in that Circular.

(d) Reissue. A reissue that affects the rights of any of the persons named on a Series EE bond may have a tax consequence.

§ 352.7 Issues on exchange.

(a) Securities eligible for exchange. Owners may exchange United States Savings Bonds of Series E and EE and United States Savings Notes (Freedom Shares) at their current redemption values for Series HH bonds. Series E bonds are eligible for exchange until one year after their final maturity dates. Series EE bonds become eligible for exchange six months after their issue dates.

(b) Basis for issue. Series HH bonds will be issued on exchange by an authorized issuing agent upon receipt of a properly executed exchange subscription with eligible securities and additional cash, if any, and any supporting evidence that may be required under the regulations. If eligible securities are submitted directly to a Federal Reserve Bank or Branch or the Bureau of the Public Debt, each must bear a properly signed and certified request for payment. Checks in payment of any cash difference (see paragraph (d) of this section) must be drawn to the order of the Federal Reserve Bank or Branch or Bureau of the Public Debt.

(c) Role of financial institutions. Department of the Treasury Circular No. 750, current revision (31 CFR Part 321), authorizes financial institutions qualified as paying agents for savings bonds and notes to redeem eligible securities presented for exchange and to forward an exchange subscription and full payment to a Federal Reserve Bank or Branch for the issue of Series HH bonds. The securities redeemed on exchange by such an institution must be securities which it is authorized to redeem for cash.

(d) Computation of issue price. The total current redemption value of the eligible securities submitted in exchange in any one transaction must be $500 or more. If the current redemption value is an even multiple of $500, Series HH bonds must be requested in that exact amount. If the total current redemption value exceeds, but is not an even multiple of, $500, the owner has the option either of furnishing the cash necessary to obtain Series HH bonds at the next highest $500 multiple, or of receiving payment of the difference between the total current redemption value and the next lower $500 multiple. For example, if the eligible securities presented for exchange in one transaction have a total current redemption value of $4,253.33, the owner may elect to:

(1) Receive $4,000 in Series HH bonds and the amount of the difference, $253.33; or

(2) Pay the difference, $246.67, necessary to obtain $4,500 in Series HH bonds.

(e) Registration. A Series HH bond issued on exchange may be registered in any authorized form (see Subpart B of Circular No. 3-80), subject to the following restrictions:

(1) If the securities submitted in exchange are in single ownership form, the owner must be named as owner or first-named co-owner on the Series HH bonds. A co-owner or beneficiary may be named.

(2) If the securities submitted in exchange are in coownership form, and one coowner is the "principal coowner," the "principal coowner" must be named as owner or first-named coowner. A beneficiary or coowner may also be named. The "principal coowner" is a coowner who (i) purchased the securities submitted for exchange with his or her own funds, or (ii) received them as a gift, inheritance or legacy, or as a result of judicial proceedings, and had them reissued in coownership form, provided he or she has received no contribution in money or money's worth for designating the other coowner on the securities.

(3) If the securities submitted in exchange are in coownership form and both coowners shared in the purchase of the securities or received them jointly as a gift, inheritance or legacy, or as a result of judicial proceedings, both persons must be named as coowners on the Series HH bonds.

(4) If the securities submitted in exchange are in beneficiary form, the owner must be named on the Series HH bonds as owner or first-named coowner. If the owner is deceased, a surviving beneficiary must be named as owner or first-named coowner. In either case, a coowner or beneficiary may be named.

A reissue that affects the rights of any of the persons required to be named on the Series HH bond may have a tax consequence.

(f) Dating. Series HH bonds issued on exchange will be dated as of the first day of the month in which the eligible securities presented for exchange are redeemed by a Federal Reserve Bank, the Bureau of the Public Debt, or a qualified paying agent, as evidenced by the payment stamp on the bonds and subscription form.

(g) Tax-deferred exchanges.—(1) Continuation of tax-deferral. Pursuant to the provisions of Section 1037(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended, an owner who has not been reporting the interest on his or her Series E or EE savings bonds and savings notes on an accrual basis, for Federal income tax purposes, and who exchanges those securities for Series HH bonds, may continue to defer reporting the interest on the securities exchanged until the taxable year in which the Series HH bonds received in the exchange reach final maturity, are redeemed, or are otherwise disposed of, whichever is earlier.

(2) Tax-deferral legend. Each bond issued on a tax-deferred exchange shall bear a legend showing how much of its issue price represents interest on the securities exchanged. This interest must be treated as income for Federal income tax purposes and reported in accordance with paragraph (g)(1) of this section.

(3) Reporting of interest for any difference paid on exchange. The amount of any difference paid to the owner (see paragraph (d)(1) of this section) must be treated as income for Federal income tax reporting purposes for the year in which it is received, up to the amount of the total interest on the securities exchanged.

(h) Exchanges without tax-deferral. The rules prescribed for exchanges under paragraphs (a) through (f) of this section also apply to exchanges by owners who (1) report the interest on their bonds of Series E and EE and savings notes annually for Federal income tax purposes; (2) elect to report all such interest in the year of the exchange, regardless of whether or not it exceeds the amount of any cash difference received (see paragraph (d)(1) of this section); or (3) are tax-exempt under the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended. However, no amount will appear in the tax-deferral legend printed on the bond, and any part of the cash difference received (see paragraph (d)(1) of this section) which represents interest previously reported for Federal income tax purposes need not be treated as income.

§ 352.8 Reinvestment of matured Series H bonds.

(a) General. The face amount of Series H bonds purchased for cash that have reached final maturity may be reinvested in Series HH bonds. The Series H bonds, bearing properly signed and certified requests for payment, must be submitted to a Federal Reserve Bank or Branch or the Bureau of the Public Debt with a reinvestment application.

(b) Rules. The reinvestment transaction will be subject to the rules governing exchanges, as set forth in § 352.7, and the Series HH bonds issued on reinvestment will be identical in all respects with those issued on a non-tax-deferred exchange.

The interest paid on Series HH bonds is subject to all taxes imposed under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended. The bonds are subject to estate, inheritance, gift, or other excise taxes, whether Federal or State, but are exempt from all taxation now or hereafter imposed on the principal or interest by any State, any of the possessions of the United States, or any local taxing authority.

Original Issue Discount Reporting Changed

Announcement 80-12

Form 1099-OID, Statement for Recipients of Original Issue Discount, has been revised for 1980.

The 1979 version required payers to show all payments of original issue discount in Box 1. The ratable monthly portion was shown in Box 2.

The 1980 version requires issuers of certificates of deposit, time deposits, bonus savings plans, and other deposit arrangements having a term of more than one year to use Box 1 to report the amount earned as original issue discount. Issuers of corporate obligations with deferred payments of earnings will use Box 2 to report the original issue discount earned for the year.

A new Box 5 has been added for reporting the ratable monthly portion of the discount, previously shown in Box 2. Boxes 3 and 4 are unchanged for 1980.

Nominees who receive Form 1099-OID on behalf of the actual owner must show the same information on the 1087-OID that they issue to the owner. Both of these forms will be available on or about January 15, 1980, at Internal Revenue Service offices.

Error in the 1979 Package X Version of Schedule J (Form 1041), Information Return, Trust Allocation of an Accumulation Distribution (IRC Section 665), and Related Instructions

Announcement 80-13

As printed in the 1979 Package X, Informational Copies of Federal Tax Forms, Schedule J (Form 1041) and the related instructions each contain an error. The errors appear on pages 136 and 138 of Package X. With regard to the "throwback" year 1978, the last part of line 22 and the instructions for line 22 provide for the entry of the captial gains deduction. The correct entry for the 1978 throwback year column is the net long-term capital gain allocated to the trust less the capital gains deduction.

Line 22, Schedule J (Form 1041), reads, "Enter 50% of line 13(e), Schedule D (Form 1041) for 1969-1970, 50% of line 17(e), Schedule D (Form 1041) for 1971-1977, amount from line 23 Form 1041 for 1978." As corrected, line 22 should read, "Enter 50% of line 13(e), Schedule D (Form 1041) for 1969-1970, 50% of line 17(e), Schedule D (Form 1041) for 1971-1977, amount from line 23 Form 1041 subtracted from line 17(e) or line 31, Schedule D (Form 1041), whichever is applicable for 1978."

The information for line 22 in the Instructions for Schedule J (Form 1041) reads in part, "For throwback year 1978 enter the amount from Form 1041 line 23." As corrected, the instruction should read, "For throwback year 1978 enter the amount from Form 1041 line 23 subtracted from line 17(e) or line 31, Schedule D (Form 1041), whichever is applicable."

This error appears only in the Schedule J (Form 1041) and instructions that are printed in Package X for 1979. The first version of the 1979 separate Schedule J (Form 1041) and instructions were replaced with corrected versions (Revised December 1979). The revised versions are available from the Internal Revenue Service.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on Subpart A, Tax Conventions and related Treasury Decisions and Revenue Rulings; Subpart B, Legislation and related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical Indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Price: $1.00 (single copy). Subscription price: $50.00 a year; $12.50 additional for foreign mailing.

Rev. Rul. 80-33

ISSUE

Whether under the circumstances described below, the distribution of voting preferred stock, which is section 306 stock, was in pursuance of a plan having as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of federal income tax within the meaning of section 306(b)(4)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code so that upon the contribution of the preferred stock to a charitable organization described in section 170(c) of the Code, the amount of the charitable contribution will be reduced under section 170(e)(1)(A).

FACTS

X corporation has outstanding 28,000*x* shares of voting common stock and 2,000*x* shares of voting preferred stock. Individual A owns 8,500*x* shares of the common stock and all of the shares of the preferred stock. Individual B owns 10,000*x* shares of the common stock. The remaining 9,500*x* shares of the common stock are widely held and are traded in the over-the-counter market.

A is not related to any of the other X shareholders. B was formerly the sole shareholder of corporation Z which was acquired by X in 1969 in a stock-for-stock exchange. A, who is 80 years old, served as chief executive officer of X from 1933 until 1969, when A turned over the management and control of X to younger officers, including B. B is on the board of directors of X.

The laws of the state of incorporation of X require a two-thirds vote of the outstanding stock of corporations in order for mergers, consolidations, liquidations and sales of substantially all of the assets to be undertaken.

Prior to 1964, X had only 10,000*x* shares of voting common stock outstanding, all of which were owned by A. In 1965, X and A sold, respectively, 1,000*x* and 1,500*x* shares of common stock to the public, reducing A's ownership of X to approximately 77 percent.

Shortly after the public offering, A received 2,000*x* shares of X voting preferred stock in exchange for all of the outstanding stock of corporation Y in a stock-for-stock exchange in accordance with section 369(a)(1)(B) of the Code. The preferred stock received by A was "section 306 stock." A's ratable share of X's earnings and profits exceeded the fair market value of the preferred stock issued by X. A caused X to acquire Y because Y was engaged in financing sales of some of the products manufactured by X, and A wanted to avoid any conflict of interest charges by the minority shareholders of X. Although A was willing to accept X common stock in exchange for the Y stock, the underwriters who had managed the public sale of X stock advised X to issue preferred stock to A. The issuance of additional common stock would dilute the earnings per share of X common stock, and the underwriters believed it would appear as if A was taking advantage of the new public shareholders. The underwriters' advice was also motivated by X's plans to make another public offering of common stock. They believed the dilution of earnings per share that would result from the issuance of common stock in the acquisition would make the planned offering more difficult.

In 1969, X issued 10,000*x* shares of common stock to B in the acquisition of Z corporation. In 1973, X made an additional public offering of 7,000*x* shares of common stock. As a result of the issuance of these additional shares of common stock, A's voting power in X was reduced to 35 percent.

A now wishes to give the 2,000*x* shares of the voting preferred stock to several charitable organizations described in section 170(c) of the Code. The fair market value of the preferred stock exceeds its adjusted basis to A. There is no plan for the contributed stock to be redeemed by X.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 170(a) of the Code provides for the deduction of charitable contributions. Section 170(e)(1)(A) provides that the amount of any charitable contribution of property will be reduced by the amount of gain that would not have been long-term capital gain if the property contributed had been sold by the taxpayer at its fair market value. Section 1.170A-4 of the Income Tax Regulations provides that section 170(e)(1)(A) applies to section 306 stock to the extent that, after applying section 306, gain on the disposition of the stock would not have been long-term capital gain if the stock had been sold at its fair market value at the time of its contribution to the charities.

Section 306(a)(1) of the Code provides that if a shareholder sells section 306 stock, the amount realized will be treated as ordinary income to the extent the amount realized does not exceed the stock's ratable share of the amount that would have been a dividend at the time the stock was distributed if the corporation had distributed money, in lieu of section 306 stock, in an amount equal to the fair market value of the stock at the time of the distribution.

Section 306(b)(4)(A) provides an exception to the general rule of section 306(a), if it is established to the satisfaction of the Secretary or his delegate that the distribution, and the disposition or redemption, were not in pursuance of a plan having as one if its principal purposes the avoidance of federal income tax. The Congressional intent of this section is to provide an exception to the general rule in the case of distributions and isolated dispositions of section 306 stock by minority shareholders who do not in the aggregate have control of the distributing corporation because it was inappropriate to impute to noncontrolling shareholders an intention to bail-out earnings and profits at capital gains rates. S. Rep. No. 1622, 83rd Cong., 2d Sess. 243 (1954); see section 1.306-2(b)(3) of the regulations.

Consistent with the limited application of section 306(b)(4)(A), the Service has ruled that the receipt of section 306 stock by a shareholder in a merger with a widely-held corporation in which the shareholder was not a controlling shareholder and the disposition of that stock not in redemption or in anticipation of redemption, other than pursuant to the terms of a sinking fund, is not pursuant to a plan having as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of federal income tax. See Rev. Rul. 56-116, 1956-1 C.B. 164; Rev. Rul. 57-103, 1957-1 C.B. 113; Rev. Rul. 57-212, 1957-1 C.B. 114. See also Rev. Proc. 77-37, 1977-2 C.B. 568.

In Fireoved v. United States, 462 F.2d 1281 (3d Cir. 1972), the taxpayer received a preferred stock dividend as part of a business combination of his wholly-owned corporation and an unrelated two-person partnership. The preferred stock was section 306 stock. When the corporation later redeemed some of the preferred stock, the Government argued that the amount realized should be treated as a distribution of property under section 301 of the Code, as provided for by section 306(a)(2). The taxpayer claimed the exception of section 306(b)(4)(A), arguing that the sole purpose of the stock dividend, to leave needed capital in the business while equalizing the common stock interests of the shareholders of the surviving corporation, was motivated by business considerations and not by a desire to avoid tax.

The court reviewed the legislative history of section 306 of the Code and concluded that section 306 was enacted to prevent the "preferred stock bail-out" by which the controlling shareholders withdraw earnings from the corporation at the more favorable tax rates for capital gains while retaining their ownership interests in the corporation. In analyzing the issuance of the preferred stock, the court pointed out that the taxpayer could have accomplished his business objective by taking a cash dividend and loaning the proceeds to the corporation. The court concluded that if the reason for distributing a stock dividend instead of a cash dividend was to avoid the tax at ordinary income rates, then one of the principal purposes of the stock dividend would have been the avoidance of federal income tax. Finally, the court concluded that the taxpayer had not borne his burden of proving that none of the principal purposes of the plan was the avoidance of federal income tax.

In the present case, A was in control of X at the time A received the voting preferred stock. A has shown that one of the principal purposes for the issuance of the preferred stock was to prevent the adverse effect of the issuance of common stock on X's ability to raise capital from the public in the future. However, A has not shown that X could not have accomplished the same business objective by issuing A long term bonds, instead of preferred stock. If one of the principal purposes for which X issued the preferred stock instead of long term bonds was to avoid the ordinary dividend to A that would have resulted upon the receipt of the bonds, then one of the principal purposes for the issuance of the preferred stock was the avoidance of federal income tax. Consequently, A has not borne the burden of showing that none of the principal purposes for the issuance of the preferred stock was the avoidance of federal income tax.

HOLDING

Section 306(b)(4)(A) of the Code would not be available to except a sale by A of the section 306 stock from the ordinary income characterization of section 306(a)(1). Therefore, A's charitable contribution will be reduced under section 170(e)(1)(A).

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Tax treatment of certain short-term corporate obligations and certificates of deposit and similar deposit arrangements

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations concerning the tax treatement of certain short-term corporate obligations and certificates of deposit, time deposits, bonus plans, or other deposit arrangements issued or entered into by banks or similar financial institutions. The regulations reflect a change in the position of the Internal Revenue Service with respect to the tax treatment of these types of obligations and deposits and provide the public with needed guidance.

DATES: The amendment to § 1.451-2(a)(2) of the regulations is effective for corporate obligations and certificates of deposit, time deposits, bonus plans, and other deposit arrangements issued or entered into after December 31, 1978. In general, the amendment to § 1.1232-3(b)(1)(iii)(a) of the regulations is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1978. However, the amendment to § 1.1232-3(b)(1)(iii)(a) does not apply for taxable years beginning before September 19, 1979, if for the issuer's last taxable year beginning before September 19, 1978, the issuer properly applied the rules of § 1.163-4 (relating to deduction for original issue discount on certain obligations issued after May 27, 1969).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On September 19, 1979, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 451(a) and 1232(b)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (44 FR 54315). The amendments were proposed to clarify the tax treatment of certain short-term corporate obligations and certificates of deposit, time deposits, bonus plans, and other deposit arrangements. After consideration of all comments received in response to the notice of proposed rulemaking and at the public hearing on the proposed amendments which was held on November 1, 1979, those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

The proposed regulation contained an example to be added to § 1.451-2(a)(2) of the regulations to provide that if three months' interest must be forfeited upon withdrawal or redemption before maturity of a one year certificate of deposit or similar deposit arrangement, then the earnings payable on premature withdrawal or redemption of the deposit would be substantially less when compared with the earnings available at maturity. Thus, under § 1.451-2(a)(2) such an interest forfeiture penalty would be a substantial limitation or restriction on the taxpayer's control and no interest earned on the certificate of deposit or similar deposit arrangement would be constructively received by the taxpayer before maturity. In response to a comment on the notice, paragraph 1 of this Treasury decision amends the facts of this example so that the term of the deposit is one year or less to make it clear that the rule illustrated by the example applies to certificates of deposit or similar deposit arrangements with terms of not only one year, but also with a term of less than one year.

Paragraph 2 of this Treasury decision makes several changes to the amendments that were proposed by the notice to § 1.1232-3(b)(1)(iii) of the regulations. A number of persons submitting comments urged that the effective date of the final regulations be postponed because they felt that in this case it was not appropriate to issue regulations late in 1979 affecting the tax treatment to the issuer in 1979. In response to these concerns it was decided to provide in this Treasury decision that the amendment to § 1.1232-3(b)(1)(iii)(a) does not apply for taxable years beginning before September 19, 1979, if for the issuer's last taxable year beginning before September 19, 1978, the issuer properly applied the rules of § 1.163-4 (relating to deduction for original issued discount on certain obligations issued after May 27, 1969). Thus, for example, if a calendar year bank or similar financial institution properly deducted original issue discount as interest and prorated or amortized the amount over the term of a certificate of deposit before January 1, 1979, it can continue to do so during 1979. In connection with these amendments normal rules for a change in method of accounting apply.

The amendments proposed by the notice to § 1.1232-3(b)(1)(iii) provided that the term of the obligation included renewal periods. The Supplementary Information in the notice indicated that the proposed amendment would thus not apply to a one year certificate of deposit or similar deposit arrangement that was renewable for a specified number of years and indicated that the tax treatment of this type of instrument would continue to be governed by § 1.1232-3A(e)(4) of the regulations. A number of comments on the notice expressed confusion about the circumstances under which renewal periods would be included in determining the term of the obligation. In response to these concerns, the proposed amendment is modified by this Treasury decision to provide that the term of the obligation includes all renewal periods with respect to which, under the terms of the obligation, the holder may either take action or refrain from taking action which would prevent the actual or constructive receipt of any interest on the obligation until the expiration of the renewal period. This rule thus parallels the rule of § 1.1232-3A(e)(4)(iii) concerning renewal periods in the case of obligations having a term of one year or less. It is illustrated by the example in § 1.1232-3A(e)(4)(iv) of the regulations.

Under sections 871 and 881 of the Code, original issue discount on certain bonds or other evidences of indebtedness with a term of six months or less are exempt from the 30% tax imposed by those sections on income not effectively connected with a United States business of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations. See S. Rep. No. 92-437, 92d Cong., 1st Sess. 76 (1971) [1972-1 C.B. 599]. Under the proposed amendment to § 1.1232-3(b)(1)(iii)(a), corporate obligations with a term of one year or less on which an amount based on a fixed rate of simple or compound interest is payable at maturity would not have original issue discount.

Thus, because there would be no original issue discount, amounts earned on such obligations would be subjected to the 30% tax under sections 871 and 881. In order to avoid the imposition of this tax on corporate obligations with a term of six months or less and to implement Congressional intent to exempt amounts earned on such obligations from the 30% tax, the amendment proposed by the notice to § 1.1232-3(b)(1)(iii)(a) has been limited so that it will not apply for purposes of applying sections 871 and 881. Thus, such obligations will be treated as having original issue discount only for purposes of exempting them from the 30% tax. For all other purposes under the Code, the obligations will not have original issue discount.

Evaluation of the effectiveness of these regulations will be based on comments received from offices within Treasury and the Internal Revenue Service, other governmental agencies, State and local governments, and the public. These regulations will impose no new reporting or recordkeeping requirements.

REVENUE RULING 79-72

The regulations adopted by this Treasury decision apply to the time deposit certificates to which Revenue Ruling 79-72, 1979-1 C.B. 278, relating to Federal income tax treatment of interest on short-term nonnegotiable time deposit certificates issued by financial institutions where the term of the certificate overlaps the end of the holder's taxable year, applied. Therefore, this Treasury decision supersedes Revenue Ruling 79-72.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is John A. Tolleris of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Council, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. Paragraph (a)(2) of § 1.451-2 is amended to read as follows:

§ 1.451-2 Constructive receipt of income.

(a) General rule. * * *

(2) The fact that the taxpayer would, by withdrawing the earnings during the taxable year, receive earnings that are not substantially less in comparison with the earnings for the corresponding period to which the taxpayer would be entitled had he left the account on deposit until a later date (for example, if an amount equal to three months' interest must be forfeited upon withdrawal or redemption before maturity of a one year or less certificate of deposit, time deposit, bonus plan, or other deposit arrangement then the earnings payable on premature withdrawal or redemption would be substantially less when compared with the earnings available at maturity);

* * * * *

Par. 2. Paragraph (b)(1)(iii) of § 1.1232-3 is amended by deleting the second and third sentences of subdivision (a) and inserting in lieu thereof three new sentences and by adding a new subdivision (e) at the end thereof. The new provisions read as follows:

§ 1.1232-3 Gain upon sale or exchange of obligations issued at a discount after December 31, 1954.

(b) Definitions—(1) Original issue discount. * * *

(iii) Stated redemption price at maturity—(a) Definition * * * If any amount based on a fixed rate of simple or compound interest is actually payable or will be treated as constructively received under section 451 and the regulations thereunder either—

(1) At fixed periodic intervals of one year or less during the entire term of an obligation, or

(2) Except as provided in subdivision (e) of this paragraph (b)(1)(iii), at maturity in the case of an obligation with a term of one year or less, any such amount payable at maturity shall not be included in determining the stated redemption price at maturity. For purposes of subdivision (a)(2) of this paragraph (b)(1)(iii), the term of an obligation shall include any renewal period with respect to which, under the terms of the obligation, the holder may either take action or refrain from taking action which would prevent the actual or constructive receipt of any interest on such obligation until the expiration of any such renewal period. To illustrate this paragraph (b)(1)(iii), assume that a note which promises to pay $1,000 at the end of three years provides for additional amounts labeled as interest to be paid at the rate of $50 at the end of the first year, $50 at the end of the second year, and $120 at the end of the third year. * * *

(e) Application of definition. Subdivision (a)(2) of this paragraph (b)(1)(iii) shall not apply—

(1) For taxable years beginning before September 19, 1979, if for the issuer's last taxable year beginning before September 19, 1978, the rules of § 1.163-4 were properly applied by the issuer, or

(2) In the case of an obligation with a term of six months or less held by a nonresident alien individual or foreign corporation, but only for purposes of the application of sections 871 and 881.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Section 4253.—Exemptions [Communications]

(Also Sections 4251, 4252; 26 CFR 49.4251-1.)

Communications; exemption; travel agencies. The communications tax exemption for common carriers does not apply to amounts paid for wide area telephone service (WATS) by travel agencies that sell tours to the general public but charter the necessary aircraft and buses from airlines and bus companies; Rev. Rul. 75-296 distinguished.

Rev. Rul. 80-34

ISSUE

Does the communication tax exemption for common carriers apply to amounts paid for wide area telephone service (WATS) furnished to certain travel agencies?

FACTS

X, a travel agency, is primarily engaged in selling air tours to the general public through its tour division as a principal, and charters necessary aircraft from domestic airlines. It collects, reports, and pays air transportation taxes to the government. Further, as agent for hotels, motels, and airlines, X sells tickets and accommodations.

Y travel agency operates similar to X except that Y sells bus tours through its tour division.

Both X and Y subscribe to the wide area telephone service (WATS) that is used exclusively in their charter tour divisions.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 4251 of the Internal Revenue Code imposes a tax on amounts paid for local and toll telephone service. Section 4252(b)(2) defines WATS, a specific type of toll telephone service. Section 4253(f) provides common carriers with an exemption from the WATS tax for toll telephone service used in the conduct of their business as common carriers.

Rev. Rul. 76-405, 1976-2 C.B. 352, concludes that for the purpose of section 4253(f) of the Code a common carrier is one holding itself out to the public as engaged in the business of transportation of persons or property from place to place for compensation, offering its services to the public generally. The distinctive characteristic of a common carrier is that it undertakes to carry for all people indifferently.

X and Y hold themselves out to the public as travel agencies. In the operation of their businesses in connection with their chartered tours that include air transportation, hotel reservations, meals, tour guide, and tips, they charter aircraft or buses from commercial airlines or bus companies. The airplanes or buses leased from the airlines or bus companies are operated and controlled by the lessor; therefore, the airlines or bus companies are the carriers and, hence the ones furnishing the transportation. Accordingly, X and Y are not common carriers for purposes of the exemption provided by section 4253(f) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 75-296, 1975-2 C.B. 440, is distinguishable from the present situation. Rev. Rul. 75-296 considers whether an independent travel agency that arranges and sells tours that include chartered air transportation is required under section 4291 of the Code to collect the air transportation tax imposed by section 4261 of the Code. Section 4291 provides that every person receiving any payment for facilities or services on which tax is imposed must collect the tax from the person making the payment. Rev. Rul. 75-296 concludes that where the travel agency is selling the taxable air transportation as a principal rather than as an agent, it is required to collect the tax. This does not mean that the travel agency was acting as an air carrier. Rather, it was purchasing transportation from an air carrier under charter and reselling the transportation to others.

HOLDING

X and Y do not qualify for the exemption provided by section 4253(f) of the Code with respect to the tax imposed by section 4251 on amounts paid for WATS, as described in section 4252(b).

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 75-296 is distinguished.

Section 6601.—Interest on Underpayment, Nonpayment, or Extensions of Time for Payment of Tax

26 CFR 301.6601-1: Interest on underpayments.

Employers in Alabama, Nevada, and New Hampshire who take advantage of a conditional credit that may be rescinded. See Rev. Proc. 80-3, page 16.

Section 6695.—Other Assessable Penalties with Respect to the Preparer of Income Tax Returns for Other Persons 26 CFR 1.6695-1: Other assessable penalties with respect to the preparation of income tax returns for other persons.

Penalties; return preparers; deposit of refund checks. A business manager prepares income tax returns for clients who maintain special checking accounts against which the business manager is authorized to sign certain checks on their behalf. The clients' federal income tax refunds are mailed to the business manager, who has the clients endorse the checks and deposits them in the special accounts. The business manager is not subject to the penalty imposed by section 6695(f) of the Code regarding the negotiation of checks by return preparers.

Rev. Rul. 80-35

ISSUE

Is an income tax return preparer subject to the penalty imposed by section 6695(f) of the Internal Revenue Code if the preparer, acting as the business manager of the taxpayer, deposits a Federal income tax refund check in the client's special checking account after the client has endorsed the check?

FACTS

X, a business manager, prepares income tax returns for clients and is an income tax return prepared as defined in section 7701(a)(36) of the Code.

X requires each client to have a checking account, against which under a power of attorney on file with the bank, X is authorized to sign checks on behalf of the client. X may sign checks only upon the specific authorization of the client.

Pursuant to a power of attorney on file with the Internal Revenue Service, the client's Federal income tax refund is mailed to X. X has the client endorse the check and then, pursuant to the client's specific instructions, X deposits the check in the client's checking account.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 6695(f) of the Code provides that any person who is an income tax return preparer who endorses or otherwise negotiates (directly or through an agent) any check made in respect to the taxes imposed by subtitle A which is issued to a taxpayer (other than the income tax return preparer) shall pay a penalty of $500 with respect to each such check.

Section 1.6695-1(f) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that no person who is an income tax return preparer may endorse or otherwise negotiate, directly or through an agent, a check for the refund of tax under subtitle A of the Code which is issued to a taxpayer other than the preparer if the person was a preparer of the return which gave rise to the refund check.

Section 3-202(1) of the Uniform Commercial Code provides that negotiation is the transfer of an instrument in such form that the transferee becomes a holder. If the instrument is payable to order it is negotiated by delivery with any necessary indorsement; if payable to bearer it is negotiated by delivery.

In this situation, the client has not transferred any rights in the check to the business manager (income tax return preparer), who is an agent for the client. The business manager delivers the check to the bank pursuant to the client's specific instructions. It is the client, and not the business manager that is transferring the check to the bank and, therefore, it is the client that is negotiating the check. This is true whether the client endorses the refund check "for deposit only," "Pay to the order of" (name of the depository bank), or with only his or her own name. The delivery of the check by the business manager is done on behalf of the client and is performed solely in the business manager's capacity as an agent.

HOLDING

X is not subject to the penalty imposed by section 6695(f) of the Code for depositing a Federal income tax refund check in a client's special account after the client has endorsed the check.

Part II. Treaties and Tax Legislation

Subpart A.—Tax Conventions

United States-Japan Income Tax Convention
1973-1 C.B. 630

(Also Part I, Sections 117, 894; 1.117-4, 1.894-1.)

Japanese citizen performing medical research in U.S. Examples are set forth in which amounts paid to a citizen of Japan for performing research at a heart research foundation in the U.S. are either compensation for services rendered or payments made under a "grant, allowance, or award" within the meaning of Article 20(1) of the U.S.-Japan Income Tax Convention; Rev. Rul. 76-567 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-36

ISSUE

Are amounts paid to a citizen of Japan for performing research at a heart research foundation in the United States compensation for services rendered or payments made under a "grant, allowance, or award" within the meaning of Article 20(1) of the United States-Japan Income Tax Convention (Convention), TIAS 7365, 1973-1 C.B. 630?

FACTS

Situation 1.—A is a citizen of Japan who is a specialist in cardiology from a Japanese university. A was a resident of Japan when A arrived in the United States on June 1, 1977 to begin research work at X, a tax-exempt foundation. X's primary function is heart research and its staff, including A, is primarily engaged in heart research. The foundation is funded by public contributions and a grant from a charitable organization, Y. The grant was provided to finance a specific research project, including payments to skilled specialists such as A. It is expected that the project will continue after A's return to Japan.

A, who replaced another specialist in cardiology, will remain in the United States for 2 years and then return to Japan. A, in turn, will then be replaced by another specialist in cardiology who will continue to work on the project. X will publish the results of the research upon its completion.

The research project is directed by a physician employed by X, who supervises A's work. While doing research at X, A is paid $15,000 per year by X.

Situation 2.—B is also a citizen of Japan who is a research specialist in cardiology from a Japanese university. B was a resident of Japan when B arrived in the United States on June 1, 1977 to do research at X. However, B had applied for a research grant from Y several months before coming to the United States. B was awarded the grant to do research on a project that B had chosen. The research was to be done at X because of X's facilities. Neither X nor Y have any right to the product of B's research.

B carries out the research project in accordance with a plan submitted with the grant application, but B is not supervised by any employee of X or Y, and B directs the project. The grant is for a period of 2 years and B receives $15,000 per year from Y, plus a smaller sum for equipment, as well as the use of X's facilities. At the end of the 2 years, B is entitled, but not required, to publish the results of the research. B will also return to Japan at that time.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1.117-4(c)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that amounts paid to an individual to enable that person to pursue studies or research primarily for the benefit of the grantor are not scholarship or fellowship grants.

Section 894(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that income of any kind, to the extent required by any treaty obligation of the United States, shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this subtitle.

Article 20(1)(a)(iii) of the Convention provides that an individual who is a resident of Japan at the beginning of a visit to the United States and who is temporarily present in the United States for the primary purpose of studying or doing research as a recipient of a grant, allowance, or an award from a governmental, religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational organization shall be exempt from Federal income tax with respect to the amounts described in Article 20(1)(b) for a period not exceeding 5 taxable years from the date of the individual's arrival in the United States.

Article 20(1)(b) of the Convention provides that pursuant to Article 20(1)(a) the following amounts shall be exempt from Federal income tax: (i) gifts from abroad for the purpose of maintenance, education, study, research, or training; (ii) the grant, allowance, or award; and (iii) income for personal services performed in the United States in an aggregate amount not in excess of 2,000 United States dollars for any taxable year.

In Rev. Rul. 76-567, 1976-2 C.B. 491, the taxpayer, a citizen and resident of Japan, received funds from a charitable organization paid in connection with the taxpayer's research work at an institute located in the United States. The ruling concludes that the amount paid to the taxpayer for the research work is a grant, allowance, or award from a charitable organization within the meaning of Article 20(1)(a)(iii) of the Convention and, thus, is exempt from Federal income tax. However, the ruling does not distinguish between an amount paid under a grant for research and an amount paid as compensation for services rendered in performing research. Although Rev. Rul. 76-567 does not specifically so state, the amounts paid were not for services rendered to the institute.

The term "grant" is not defined in the Convention, but the phrase "fellowship grant" is defined in regulations under section 117 of the Code. Under Article II(3) of the Convention, any term not defined in the Convention shall have the meaning it has under applicable United States law. Section 117(a) provides in part that in the case of an individual gross income does not include any amount received as a fellowship grant. Section 1.117-3(c) of the regulations provides in part that a "fellowship grant" generally means an amount paid or allowed to an individual to aid that person in the pursuit of study or research. Section 1.117-4(c) provides that payments shall not be considered a fellowship grant if they represent compensation for services, if they represent payment for services that are subject to the direction or supervision of the grantor, or are paid to the individual to enable that person to pursue research primarily for the benefit of the grantor.

The phrase "studying or doing research" in Article 20(1)(a)(iii) of the Convention indicates that the intent of the provision, with respect to persons doing research, does not extend to professional researchers receiving compensation for performing research services. This is further indicated by the fact the exemption is limited to persons receiving a "grant, allowance or an award." The use of such terms suggests that ordinary compensation for services rendered is not within the intent of the exemption. In fact, Article 20(1)(b) grants a separate but limited exemption for income for personal services. Thus, the term "grant" has a meaning similar to that of "fellowship grant" as used in section 117 of the Code and defined in section 1.117-4(c) of the regulations.

In Situation 1, A is performing valuable research services under the supervision of the grantor that are primarily for the benefit of the grantor of the payments, X. The knowledge A is getting is merely an incidental benefit from what is essentially an employment relationship. Rev. Rul. 69-425, 1969-2 C.B. 16.

In Situation 2, B is being paid an amount to aid B in the pursuit of a specific research goal. B's work is not subject to direction or supervision by any other person, and B is entitled, but not required to publish the results of the research. No other person has any right to the product of B's research.

HOLDINGS

1. Amounts paid to A for performing research at X are compensation for services rendered and are not payments made under a "grant, allowance, or award" within the meaning of Article 20(1) of the Convention.

2. Amounts paid to B for performing research at X are payments made under a "grant, allowance, or award" within the meaning of Article 20(1) of the Convention.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 76-567 is superseded.

STATE LEGISLATORS' BUSINESS EXPENSES

March 21, 1979

Mr. Ullman, from the Committee on Ways and Means, submitted the following report to accompany H.R. 3091.[1]

The Committee on Ways and Means to whom was referred the bill (H.R. 3091) to extend for one year the provisions of law relating to the business expenses of State legislators, having considered the same, report favorably thereon without amendment and recommend that the bill do pass.

I. Summary

H.R. 3091 extends, for 1 additional year, the effective date for the tax treatment of travel expenses incurred by State legislators while away from home to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1979.

II. General Statement

Present law

Under present law, an individual is allowed a deduction for traveling expenses (including amounts expended for meals and lodging) while away from home overnight in the pursuit of a trade or business (sec. 162(a)). These expenses are deductible only if they are reasonable and necessary in the taxpayer's business and directly attributable to it. "Lavish or extravagant" expenses are not allowable deductions. In addition, no deductions are allowed for personal, living, and family expenses except as expressly allowed under the Code (sec. 262).

Generally, under section 262, expenses and losses attributable to a dwelling unit which is occupied by a taxpayer as his personal residence are not deductible. However, deductions for interest, certain taxes, and casualty losses attributable to a personal residence are expressly allowed under other provisions of the tax laws (secs. 163, 164, and 165).

A taxpayer's "home" for purposes of the deduction of traveling expenses generally means his principal place of business or employment. When a taxpayer has more than one trade or business, or a single trade or business which requires him to spend a substantial amount of time [2] at two or more localities, his "home" is held to be at his principal place of business. A taxpayer's principal place of business is determined on an objective basis taking into account the facts and circumstances in each case. The more important factors to be considered in determining the taxpayer's principal place of business (or tax home) are: (1) the total time ordinarily spent by the taxpayer at each of his business posts, (2) the degree of business activity at each location, (3) the amount of income derived from each location, and (4) other significant contacts of the taxpayer at each location. No one factor is determinative.

In 1952 a provision was adopted with respect to the living expenses paid or incurred by a Member of Congress (including a Delegate or Resident Commissioner).[2] Under these rules, the place of residence of a Member of Congress within the congressional district which he represents in Congress is considered his tax home. However, amounts expended by the Member within each taxable year for living expenses are not deductible in excess of $3,000. Prior to the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1], * * * [these special rules for a member of Congress were not] applied in the case of a State legislator. As a result, the tax home of a State legislator was determined in accordance with the general rule described above.

The Tax Reform Act of 1976 provided an election for the tax treatment of State legislators for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1967. This was extended for one year by the Tax

[2] Prior to this time Members of Congress were not allowed a deduction for these expenses because Washington, D.C. was considered to be their tax home. See George W. Lindsay, 34 B.T.A. 840, 843 (1936).

Reduction and Simplification Act of 1977 [Pub. L. 95-30, 1977-1 C.B. 451] to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1977, and was extended further by Public Law 95-258 to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1978.

Under this election, a State legislator may, for any such taxable year, treat his place of residence within his legislative district as his tax home for purposes of computing the deduction for living expenses. If this election is made, the legislator is treated as having expended for living expenses an amount equal to the sum of the daily amount of per diem generally allowed to employees of the U.S. government for traveling away from home,[2] multiplied by the number of days during that year that the State legislature was in session, including any day in which the legislature was in recess for a period of four or less consecutive days. In addition, if the State legislature was in recess for more than four consecutive days, a State legislator may count each day in which his physical presence was formally recorded at a meeting of a committee of the State legislature. For this purpose, the rate of per diem to be used is to be the rate that was in effect during the period for which the deduction was claimed.

These limitations apply only with respect to living expenses incurred in connection with the trade or business of being a legislator. The 1976 Act did not impose a limitation on living expenses incurred by a legislator in connection with a trade or business other than that of being a legislator. As to any other trade or business, the ordinary and necessary test of prior law will continue to apply.

[3] In the absence of further congressional action, the tax home of a State legislator, for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1977, has to be determined in accordance with the general rules described previously.

Reasons for change

The provision which allows a State legislator to treat his place of residence within his legislative district as his tax home for purposes of computing the deduction for living expenses only applies to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1978. The committee believes this provision should be extended for a 1-year period during which time the problem can be given further consideration and a permanent rule can be developed.

Explanation of the bill

The bill extends, for 1 additional year, the effective date of the provision relating to the tax treatment of certain travel expenses incurred by State legislators while away from home to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1979.

Effective date

The bill applies to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1979.

[7] JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3091) to extend for one year the provisions of law relating to the business expenses of State legislators, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

1. BUSINESS EXPENSES OF STATE LEGISLATORS

Both the House and Senate versions contain a provision extending for one year the provisions of law relating to the business expenses of State legislators.

[8] 3. PROVISIONS RELATING TO AUTHORITY TO HIRE WELFARE RECIPIENTS AS CHILD CARE WORKERS

House bill.—No provision.

Senate amendment.—The amendment would restore the authority of the States to use social services funds under title XX to pay the costs of employing welfare recipients in child care jobs. This authority was available in fiscal years 1977 and 1978. The amendment would make this authority permanent, retroactive to October 1, 1978. It would also make certain changes to conform and better coordinate it with the provisions under which employers obtain a tax credit for hiring welfare recipients. Specifically, the amendment would—

1. extend the authority to use title XX funds to reimburse the costs of hiring welfare recipients in child care jobs;

2. incorporate this authority as a permanent part of the basic title XX statute;

3. increase the maximum per recipient annual combined tax credit and title XX reimbursement from $5,000 to $6,000—the same level of wages that is eligible for the new welfare recipient tax credit;

4. make the payment and credit available for part-time as well as full-time employment in child care jobs;

5. permit the credit to be computed on the basis of the full wages including the part reimbursed under title XX—subject to a maximum combined tax credit and title XX payment not to exceed 100 percent of the first $6,000 of wages; and

6. make the tax credit coverage applicable to the period between the date it previously expired (October 1, 1978) and the effective date of the new credit enacted last year (January 1, 1979).

[2] The maximum per diem allowance generally is $35.00. Greater maximum amounts apply, however, to designated high rate geographical areas, including the capitals of Alaska ($70), Connecticut ($39), Hawaii ($58), Massachusetts ($49), Minnesota ($41), New York ($39), Rhode Island ($40), and West Virginia ($39).

Conference Agreement.—The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, except the authority to use title XX funds to make grants to qualified child day care providers would be effective only for the period October 1, 1978 through March 31, 1980, and the tax credit for hiring welfare recipients would apply only with respect to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1978 and before January 1, 1980.

Part III. Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous

26 CFR 601.602: Forms and instructions.
(Also Part I, Section 3302; 31.3302(c)-1.)

Rev. Proc. 80-2

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to bring up to date the procedure to be followed in computing reductions in the credit against the tax reportable on Form 940, Employer's Annual Federal Unemployment Tax Return, for 1979.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

Section 3301 of the Internal Revenue Code imposes an excise tax on employers on wages paid to employees. Section 3306(a) defines the term "employer" for purposes of the tax imposed by section 3301.

Section 3302 of the Code provides for credits against the tax imposed by section 3301. Reductions in the amount of credit otherwise allowable are provided for in section 3302(c). Section 3302(c)(2) provides that the reductions shall occur if an employer pays wages for services performed in a state that has not restored amounts that were advanced under title XII of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. sections 1321-1324 (1976). Section 3302(d)(3) provides that credit reductions for any year may be forestalled if a state restores to the United States Treasury, before November 10 of that year, the full amount of the advances.

SEC. 3. CREDIT REDUCTIONS FOR 1979

For the years 1975 through 1979 the credit reduction is not applicable if, upon the application of any state, the Secretary of Labor finds that such state has studied and taken appropriate action with respect to the financing of its unemployment programs so as substantially to accomplish the purpose of restoring the fiscal soundness of the state's unemployment account in the Unemployment Trust Fund and permitting the repayment within a reasonable time of any advances made to such account under title XII of the Social Security Act. Emergency Compensation and Special Unemployment Assistance Extension Act of 1975, section 110, 1975-2 C.B. 513, 515, as amended by the Emergency Unemployment Compensation Extension Act of 1977, section 201, 1977-1 C.B. 437, 440.

As of November 10, 1970, the States of Delaware and Pennsylvania had not repaid the advances made to them in 1975. For the years 1977 and 1978, the first two years in which the States would have had to repay the advances to avoid the credit reductions under section 3302(c) of the Code, the Secretary of Labor determined that both States met the criteria of section 110 of the Emergency Compensation and Special Unemployment Extension Act of 1975, as amended, for deferral of a federal unemployment tax credit reduction. However, in 1979, the Secretary of Labor determined that the States of Delaware and Pennsylvania did not qualify for deferrals of the credit reductions under section 110. Therefore, the credit reductions will take effect as provided for in section 3302(c)(2) of the Code in the amount of 0.3 percent of the wages (as defined in section 3306(b)) paid during 1979 for services performed in Delaware and Pennsylvania.

SEC. 4. PROCEDURE

If a credit reduction applies, it is computed on Part II, Line 2, or Part III, Line 4, of the Form 940 for 1979, whichever is applicable to the employer.

Rev. Proc. 80-3

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This revenue procedure sets forth the procedure to be folowed on the 1979 Form 940, Employer's Annual Federal Unemployment Tax Return, by employers who claim certain credits based on their contributions to the unemployment funds of the States of Alabama, Nevada, and New Hampshire.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

Section 3302(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides for a credit against the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) tax imposed on employers by section 3301. The amount of the credit depends upon the amount of contributions paid by an employer into an unemployment fund maintained during the taxable year under the unemployment compensation law of a state that is certified as provided in section 3304.

Section 3302(b) of the Code provides an additional credit to employers who are permitted by a state to pay less than the highest rate in a taxable year under the provisions of an unemployment compensation law of the state if the law is certified as provided in section 3303. Section 3303 sets forth the standards by which a state unemployment compensation law may allow certain employers reduced rates under their experience rating provisions.

The certification of state unemployment compensation laws for sections 3303 and 3304 are to be made by the Secretary of Labor. As a precondition to certification under section 3303, the unemployment compensation law of a state must first be certified under section 3304.

SEC. 3. STATUS OF ALABAMA, NEVADA, AND NEW HAMPSHIRE

The Secretary of Labor has informed the Secretary of the Treasury that the States of Alabama, Nevada, and New Hampshire are not included in the list of certified states for 1979 under section 3304. 44 Fed. Reg. 64368, 64383 (1979). Notifications of the finding that certification may be withheld have been sent to the Governors of those States.

Pursuant to section 3310 of the Code the States of Alabama, Nevada, and New Hampshire have filed with the United States Courts of Appeals for the appropriate circuits, petitions for review of the Secretary of Labor's action. Section 3310(d)(2) provides that the commencement of judicial proceedings shall stay the Secretary of Labor's action for a period of 30 days, and the court may thereafter grant interim relief, if warranted, including a further stay of the Secretary of Labor's action and including such other relief as may be necessary to preserve status or rights.

SEC. 4. EFFECT ON ALABAMA, NEVADA, AND NEW HAMPSHIRE EMPYOYERS

Since the Secretary of Labor has been precluded from finally withholding the certifications until the appropriate court has finally determined whether the proposed action of the Secretary of Labor is appropriate, or until the court determines that preliminary equitable relief is no longer justified, employers that have made contributions to the unemployment funds of the States of Alabama, Nevada, and New Hampshire will be permitted to file the 1979 Form 940 as if certifications have not been withheld for 1979. However, if certification for 1979 is later withheld by the Secretary of Labor, any affected employer will be liable for any additional tax due, plus interest under section 6601 of the Code. The Internal Revenue Service will announce the final determinations with respect to whether the unemployment compensation laws of the States of Alabama, Nevada, and New Hampshire are entitled to certification for 1979.

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedue is to set forth the procedures to be followed by state and local health and welfare agencies wishing to act as agents, under section 3504 of the Internal Revenue Code, for welfare recipients who become the employers of individuals furnished by the agencies to provide in-home domestic service for the welfare recipients.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Rev. Proc. 70-6, 1970-1 C.B. 420 sets forth the procedures to be followed in requesting authorization to act as an agent under section 3504 of the Code. Pursuant to section 31.3504-1 of the Employment Tax Regulations, the authorization is applicable to the taxes required to be paid under sections 3101, 3111, and 3403 of the Code.

.02 Titles XIX and XX of the Social Security Act, as amended, 42 U.S.C. sections 1396 and 1397, respectively, (1976), provide for federal grants to states under programs administered either by state or local governments through their health and welfare agencies.

.03 In some instances, workers who perform in-home domestic services paid for with funds supplied by such state or local agencies are the employees of the welfare recipients who receive those services. In cases in which the services are provided under a statewide, uniform program, the state may file one application under Rev. Proc. 70-6 to act as the agent for the recipient/employers; in cases in which the programs vary from local government to local government, each local government that desires to act as an agent should file an application.

.04 Section 3.01 of Rev. Proc. 70-6 provides that application for authorization as agent to perform acts required of an employer should be made in writing by the agent to the Director, Internal Revenue Service Center, with whom the agent will file returns upon approval of the application.

.05 Section 3.04 of Rev. Proc. 70-6 provides that an application (for authorization to act as an agent under section 3504 of the Code) covering more than one employer must be accompanied by a properly executed Form 2678, Employer Appointment of Agent under Section 3504 of the Internal Revenue Code, from each of the employers.

.06 Under sections 3306(a)(3) and 3306(c)(2) of the Code, persons who pay cash remuneration of $1,000 or more during any calendar quarter of the calendar year (or the preceding calendar year) to individuals performing domestic services in private homes are subject to the tax imposed by section 3301 with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1977, for services performed after that date.

.01 The large number of welfare recipient/employers who receive in-home domestic services paid for with funds supplied by state and local governments makes it impractical to comply with the requirement that each employer submit a Form 2678. Accordingly, the Internal Revenue Service will not enforce the requirement that each employer must submit that form to the state or local government.

.02 In order for a state or local health or welfare agency to secure the authorization to act as an agent under section 3504 of the Code for welfare recipient/employers, it is sufficient for the agency to include with its application to the Service a reference to the document that the welfare recipient/employers have filed (or will file) with the agency appointing the agency to act as a collection agent. The state or local agency may include such appointment to act as an agent in the application form required to be signed and filed by welfare recipient/employers in order to receive in-home domestic service. The execution of the application by a welfare recipient/employer constitutes an authorization by the employer and becomes (by reference) a part of the agency's application to the Service.

.03 Details with respect to the application for authorization to act as agent should be worked out between the state or local agency and the Director of the Internal Revenue Service Center with whom the employment tax returns are filed. The Director will indicate the length of time that the state or local agency must retain the document filed by the welfare recipient/employer appointing the agent.

.04 In those instances in which a welfare recipient/employer is liable for the tax under section 3301 of the Code, the Service will interpose no objection if the state or local agency acting as an agent under section 3504 for taxes required to be paid under sections 3101, 3111, and 3403 also acts as an agent for the reporting and paying of the taxes imposed by section 3301.

.05 This revenue procedure does not apply to state and local welfare agencies that contract with outside organizations to provide the services or that use their own employees, as in Rev. Rul. 73-268, 1973-1 C.B. 415.

SEC. 4. EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE PROCEDURES

Rev. Proc. 70-6 is amplified.

Grantors and contributors may thereafter rely upon such ruling or determination letter as provided in section 1.509(a)-7 of the Income Tax Regulations. It is not the practice of the Service to announce such revised classification of foundation status in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

United States and Austria to Discuss Income and Estate and Gift Tax Treaties

The Treasury Department has announced that representatives of the United States and Austria will conduct exploratory talks in Austria during the week of February 18 with a view to beginning negotiations of an estate and gift tax treaty between the two countries. Discussions will be based upon the United States Model Estate and Gift Tax Treaty of 1979 and will consider the allocation of taxing jurisdiction between the two countries on the basis of citizenship, domicile, and location of property, in order to avoid double taxation. Rules for resolving the issue of domicile will also be discussed.

Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on Subpart A, Tax Conventions and related Treasury Decisions and Revenue Rulings; Subpart B, Legislation and related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical Indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Price: $1.00 (single copy). Subscription price: $50.00 a year; $12.50 additional for foreign mailing.

Announcement Relating to Decisions of the Tax Court

It is the policy of the Internal Revenue Service to announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin at the earliest practicable date the determination of the Commissioner to acquiesce or not acquiesce in a decision of the Tax Court which disallows a deficiency in tax determined by the Commissioner to be due.

Notice that the Commissioner has acquiesced or nonacquiesced in a decision of the Tax Court relates only to the issues or issues decided adversely to the Government.

Actions of acquiescences in adverse decisions shall be relied on by Revenue officers and others concerned as conclusions of the Service only to the application of the law to the facts in the particular case. Caution should be exercised in extending the application of the decision to a similar case unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same, and consideration should be given to the effect of new legislation, regulations, and rulings as well as subsequent court decisions and actions thereon.

Acquiescence in a decision means acceptance by the Service of the conclusion reached, and does not necessarily mean acceptance and approval of any or all of the reasons assigned by the Court for its conclusions.

No announcements are made in the Bulletin with respect to memorandum opinions of the Tax Court.

The announcements published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletins are consolidated semiannually and annually. The semiannual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for July and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the first half of the year and the annual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for the following January and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the last half of the year.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 167.—Depreciation

26 CFR 1.167(a)-11: Depreciation based on class lives and asset depreciation ranges for property placed in service after December 31, 1970.

Sale of property held for sale or lease; CLADR system. A taxpayer that manufactures, leases, and sells electronic data processing equipment elected to depreciate the equipment, which is leased under lease-with-option-to-purchase arrangements, under the CLADR system. Gain on sales to the lessees is ordinary income for the year of sale. The unadjusted basis of the equipment sold is to be removed from the taxpayer's vintage account, the accrued depreciation is to be removed from the reserve for depreciation, and the equipment's salvage value is to be removed from the salvage value of the vintage account.

Rev. Rul. 80-37

ISSUE

What is the proper treatment for sales of equipment to leasing customers by a taxpayer who is regularly engaged in the dual business of renting and selling such equipment and who has, during the rental period, elected to depreciate such equipment under the Class Life Asset Depreciation Range (CLADR) system?

FACTS

The taxpayer is a corporation engaged in manufacturing, leasing, and selling electronic data processing equipment.

The taxpayer elected the CLADR system as provided by section 1.167 (a)-11 of the Income Tax Regulations and the leased equipment was included in the appropriate guideline class. All of this equipment is subject to lease agreements to a minimum period of one year, and the rental is expressed as a monthly rate.

An addendum to the lease agreement gives the lessee the option to acquire the equipment at the established price in effect on the date of purchase. A portion of the rental payments may be applied against the purchase price.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 167(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides there shall be allowed as a depreciation deduction a reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property used in a trade or business or for property used for the production of income.

Section 167(m) of the Code provides that in the case of a taxpayer who has made an election to use the CLADR system, the term "reasonable allowance" means only an allowance based on lives prescribed by the Secretary that reasonably reflect the anticipated useful life of that class of property to the industry.

Section 1.167(a)-11(a) of the regulations provides an asset depreciation range and class life system for designated classes of assets placed in service after December 31, 1970. The system is optional with the taxpayer, and the taxpayer must make an annual election. Generally, an election for a taxable year must apply to all additions of eligible property during the taxable year of election.

Section 1.167(a)-11(b)(2) of the regulations defines "eligible property" as tangible property that is subject to the allowance for depreciation provided by section 167(a) of the Code but only if—

(i) an asset guideline class and asset guideline period are in effect for such property for the taxable year of election,

(ii) the property is either section 1245 property as defined in section 1245(a)(3) or section 1250 property as defined in section 1250(c).

Section 1.167(a)-11(d)(3)(i) of the regulations provides for the treatment of retirements from vintage accounts. An asset in a vintage account is retired when such asset is permanently withdrawn from use in a trade or business or in the production of income by the taxpayer. A retirement may occur as a result of a sale or exchange, by another act of the taxpayer amounting to a permanent disposition, or by physical abandonment of an asset. A retirement may also occur by transfer of an asset to supplies of scrap.

Section 1.167(a)-11(d)(3)(ii) of the regulations defines ordinary and extraordinary retirements. The term "ordinary retirement" means any retirement of section 1245 property from a vintage account that is not treated as an "extraordinary retirement" under this subparagraph. The retirement of an asset from a vintage account in a taxable year is an "extraordinary retirement" if the asset is section 1250 property or the asset is section 1245 property retired as a direct result of a cessation, termination, curtailment, or disposition of a business.

Section 1.167(a)-11(d)(3)(iii) of the regulations provides for the nonrecognition of loss upon an ordinary retirement from a vintage account. All proceeds from ordinary retirements are to be added to the depreciation reserve of the vintage account from which the asset is retired.

Section 1.167(a)-11(d)(3)(ix) of the regulations provides that in the case of a vintage account for section 1245 property, gain is to be recognized for each taxable year to the extent of the excess of the depreciation reserve over the unadjusted basis of such account.

Such gain shall constitute section 1245 gain to the extent that it does not exceed the total amount of depreciation allowances in the related year-end depreciation reserve reduced by previously recognized section 1245 gain. Any excess over such total amount so reduced may constitute gain to which section 1231 of the Code applies.

At the time section 167(m) of the Code was enacted and the regulations were promulgated, a body of case law had been developed with respect to dual purpose property. The cases, including Recordak Corporation v. United States, 325 F.2d 460 (Ct. Cl. 1963), Continental Can Company, Inc. v. United States, 422 F.2d 405 (Ct. Cl. 1970), cert. den. 400 U.S. 819 (1971), and International Shoe Machine Corporation v. United States, 491 F.2d 157 (1st Cir 1974), cert.

den., 419 U.S. 834 (1974), interpreted the term "primarily" as invoking a contrast between sales made in the ordinary course of business and those made in the liquidation of inventory rather than between sale and lease. This interpretation is viewed by the courts as being consistent with the decision in Malat v. Riddell, 383 U.S. 569 (1966), Ct. D. 1906, 1966-1 C.B. 184, in which the Supreme Court of the United States held that "primarily" means "of first importance" or "principally." The sale-and-rent cases cited above hold that when a manufacturer is regularly engaged in the dual business of selling and renting the equipment it manufactures, then income resulting from either activity satisfies the "primarily" concept since both activities are part of the normal stream of the taxpayer's business. Hence, sales of such leased equipment are not sales of depreciable property at the time of sale and capital gains treatment is forbidden.

In the present case, because the leased asset does not cease to be depreciable property until the year of sale, it is treated, during the rental period, as are all assets in the vintage account for property used in the trade or business of the taxpayer. During this period CLADR provisions are applicable to the dual purpose asset. However, on the date of sale of the dual purpose asset, the asset becomes property held by the taxpayer for sale to customers in the ordinary course of business. The CLADR regulations cease to have any applicability, and the tax treatment of the asset is determined under the case law and statutory provisions dealing with gain from the sale of assets held for sale in the ordinary course of business. See section 1231(b)(1)(B) of the Code.

Under the CLADR regulations, sales of dual purpose property cannot, by definition, be considered to be extraordinary retirements. Similarly, sales of dual purpose property cannot be treated as ordinary retirements because the retirements discussed in sections 1.167(a)-11(d)(3)(iii) and (ix) of the regulations are necessarily retirements of property held for use in the taxpayer's trade or business, and as of the date of sale, dual purpose assets have ceased to be so held. Since, on the date of sale, the asset is held for sale to customers in the ordinary course of business it must, at that time, be removed from the depreciation vintage account. Further, in order not to distort the depreciation deduction on the balance of the vintage account as well as to compute properly the ordinary income on the sale of the equipment now held primarily for sale in the ordinary course of business, the depreciation attributable to such property must be removed from the depreciation reserve. Also, the salvage value of the account should be adjusted for salvage of the asset removed from the account.

HOLDINGS

The gain from the sale of this dual purpose property is part of the taxpayer's normal business operations and is ordinary income for the year of sale notwithstanding that the property had been held for the dual purpose of rent or sale and had, in fact, been depreciated in accordance with the taxpayer's election to apply the CLADR system of depreciation.

The unadjusted basis of the property sold is to be removed from the vintage account, the accrued depreciation is to be removed from the reserve for depreciation, and the salvage value of the vintage account is to be adjusted by removal of the salvage value of the property sold.

Section 170.—Charitable, Etc., Contributions and Gifts

26 CFR 1.170A-8: Limitations on charitable deductions by individuals.
(Also Section 664; 1.664-1.)

Charitable remainder trust; percentage limitation; remote contingency. A taxpayer created a charitable remainder trust with the remainder intrest payable to a public university described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) and (c)(2)(B) of the Code. The trust instrument provides that if the university is not an organization described in section 170(c) when the trust is to be distributed, the trustee will then select a beneficiary described in section 170(c). The possibility that the remainder will not go to an organization described in section 170 (b)(1)(A) is so remote as to be negligible, and the 50 percent limitation is applicable with respect to the taxpayer's transfer to the trust.

Rev. Rul. 80-38

ISSUE

What percentage limitation is applicable to a charitable contributions deduction under section 170 of the Internal Revenue Code, in view of the trustee's power to designate an alternative remainder beneficiary, in the circumstances described below?

FACTS

The taxpayer made an inter vivos transfer of property to a valid charitable remainder trust described in section 664(d) of the Code. Under the terms of the trust, the remainder interest is payable to a public university that qualifies as an educational organization described in section 170(c)(2)(B) and in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii).

The trust instrument also provides that if the designated charitable remainder beneficiary is not an organization described in section 170(c) of the Code when the trust remainder is to be distributed, the remainder shall be distributed to one or more organizations, to be selected in the sole discretion of the trustee, that are then described in section 170(c). The trust terms do not expressly require that, in exercising the power to select alternative remainder beneficiaries, the trustee must choose organizations that are described in section 170(b)(1)(A) as well as in section 170(c).

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 170 of the Code provides, subject to certain limitations, a deduction for charitable contributions (as defined in subsection (c)).

Section 170(f)(2) of the Code provides that in the case of property transferred in trust, no deduction shall be allowed under section 170 for the value of the contribution of a remainder interest unless the trust is one of the specified types described in section 664(d) or section 642(c)(5).

Under sections 664(d)(1)(C) and 664(d)(2)(C) of the Code, a charitable remainder trust must provide for payment of the remainder interest to an organization described in section 170(c).

Section 170(c) of the Code describes various types of charitable organizations to which transfers qualify as charitable contributions for the purposes of section 170. An organization that is described in section 170(c) may be an organization described in section 170(b)(1)(A) or it may be an organization to which a contribution described in section 170(b)(1)(B) is made.

Section 170(b)(1)(A) of the Code sets forth a list of various types of organizations and provides that contributions by an individual taxpayer to those organizations are allowable as deductions in a total amount of not more than 50 percent of the taxpayer's contribution base for the taxable year.

Under section 170(b)(1)(B) of the Code, if charitable contributions are made to organizations that are not described in section 170(b)(1)(A), the maximum amount allowable as a deduction for such contributions by an individual taxpayer is 20 percent of the taxpayer's contribution base for the taxable year.

Thus, if a contribution is made by an individual taxpayer to an organization described in section 170(c) of the Code, the amount deductible is subject to either the 50 percent limitation of section 170(b)(1)(A) or the 20 percent limitation of section 170(b)(1)(B), depending on whether the transferee organization is described in section 170(b)(1)(A).

Section 1.170A-1(e) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that if the interest in property transferred to charity may be defeated by the subsequent performance of some act or by the happening of some event, the deduction is nevertheless allowable if the possibility that the act or event will occur and defeat the charity's interest is so remote as to be negligible.

In Rev. Rul. 76-307, 1976-2 C.B. 56, a trustee was empowered to select one or more organizations described in section 170(c) of the Code if the designated remainder beneficiary was not described in section 170(c) when the trust terminated. The revenue ruling concludes that although the governing instrument limited the alternative remainder beneficiaries to organizations described in section 170(c), without reference to their also being described in section 2522(a), a charitable deduction is allowable for federal gift tax purposes under section 2522 because the possibility that the designated beneficiary would not continue to be an organization described in both sections 170(c) and 2055(a) was so remote as to be negligible.

Rev. Rul. 76-307 also concludes that in the situation described a deduction is allowable for federal income tax purposes under section 170(a) of the Code. The revenue ruling did not reach the question as to the proper percentage limitation under section 170(b).

Because the designated organization in the present case is a public university, there is small likelihood that it will cease to exist as an organization described in sections 170(c) and 170(b)(1)(A) of the Code. Therefore, the possibility that the remainder interest will not go to an organization described in section 170(b)(1)(A) is so remote as to be negligible.

HOLDING

The 50 percent limitation of section 170(b)(1)(A) of the Code is applicable with respect to the taxpayer's transfer to the charitable remainder trust.

Section 243.—Dividends Received by Corporations

26 CFR 1.243-1: Deduction for dividends received by corporations.

Whether a United States corporation, which is treated as a Virgin Islands inhabitant, is a "domestic corporation" for purposes of the dividends received deduction of section 243 of the Code. See Rev. Rul. 80-40, page 12.

Section 446.—General Rule for Methods of Accounting

26 CFR 1.446-1: General rule for methods of accounting.

Whether the Internal Revenue Service will impose a condition in a change of method of accounting, which requires the remaining balance of a section 481(a) adjustment applicable to a division of the taxpayer going out of business to be taken into account in the year in which the taxpayer ceases to engage in that (the division's) trade or business. See Rev. Rul. 80-39, below.

Section 481.—Adjustments Required by Changes in Methods of Accounting

26 CFR 1.481-1: Adjustments in general. (Also Section 446; 1.446-1.)

Change in accounting method; condition; remaining adjustment. A domestic corporation carries out its business operations through several divisions. Each division is in a different trade or business, and each keeps a complete and separate set of books and records. The corporation seeks permission to change its method of accounting for the trade or business conducted by one of the divisions. In granting a change in method of accounting, the Service will impose a condition that requires any remaining balance of a section 481(a) adjustment applicable to the trade or business conducted by that division to be reported in the year in which the corporation ceases to engage in that trade or business.

Rev. Rul. 80-39

ISSUE

In granting a change in method of accounting with respect to a trade or business, what condition will the Internal Revenue Service impose on the taxpayer regarding the remaining balance of the adjustment required by section 481(a) of the Internal Revenue Code in the event the taxpayer ceases to operate that trade or business?

FACTS

M, a domestic corporation, carries out its business operations through several divisions. Each division is in a different trade or business, and each keeps a complete and separate set of books and records. Division 1 has been in existence for 15 years and has accounted for income and expenses under its present method of accounting during that time.

M seeks permission to change its method of accounting for the trade or business conducted in division I from its present method to another method. In accordance with Rev. Proc. 70-27, 1970-2 C.B. 508, M filed an Application for Change in Method of Accounting (Form 3115) with respect to the trade or business conducted in division I with the Service, proposing that M take the necessary resulting section 481(a) adjustment into account ratable over 10 taxable years. One of the conditions prescribed by the Service is that if M ceases to engage in the trade or business for which the change in method of accounting is granted at any time prior to the expiration of the 10-year period, M will take into account, for federal income tax purposes for the year in which M ceases to engage in that trade or business, the balance of the section 481(a) adjustment not previously taken into account in computing taxable income.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1.446-1(e)(3)(i) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that permission to change a taxpayer's method of accounting will not be granted unless the taxpayer and the Service agree to the terms, conditions, and adjustments under which the change will be effected. Under this provision, the Service may prescribe the necessary terms and conditions under which a change in method of accounting will be effected in order to prevent amounts from being duplicated or omitted.

The section 481(a) adjustment applicable to the trade or business conducted in division I is totally unrelated to M's other trades or businesses. Should M continue to spread the section 481(a) adjustment applicable to the trade or business conducted in division I over years subsequent to the time that M ceases to engage in that trade or business, such continued spread of the adjustment would distort the income of M during such period.

HOLDING

The Service will impose a condition that requires the remaining balance of a section 481(a) adjustment applicable to the business conducted in division I of the taxpayer to be taken into account in the year in which the taxpayer ceases to engage in that trade or business.

Section 613A.—Limitation on Percentage Depletion in Case of Oil and Gas Wells

(Also Section 1372; 26 CFR 1.1372-1.)

Depletion; proven oil or gas property; small business corporation election. The election to be treated as a small business corporation under section 1372(a) of the Code is not a transfer, within the meaning of section 613A(c)(9), of an interest in any proven oil or gas property.

Rev. Rul. 80-43

ISSUE

Is the filing of an election to be treated as a small business corporation under section 1372(a) of the Internal Revenue Code a transfer, within the meaning of section 613A(c)(9), of an interest in any proven oil or gas property?

FACTS

M is a corporation that owns and operates proven oil and gas properties. In 1978, M made a valid election to be treated as a "small business corporation" in accordance with the provisions of section 1372 of the Code.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 613A(a) of the Code provides that, except as otherwise provided in that section, the allowance for depletion under section 611 with respect to any oil or gas well shall be computed without regard to section 613.

Section 613A(c)(9)(A) of the Code provides that, in the case of a transfer (including a sublease) after December 31, 1974, of an interest (including an interest in a partnership or trust) in any proven oil or gas property, the allowance for percentage depletion that is provided under section 613A(c)(1) does not apply to the transferee (or sublessee) with respect to production of crude oil or natural gas attributable to such interest, and such production shall not be taken into account for any computation by the transferee (or sublessee) under section 613A(c).

Section 1372(a) of the Code allows a small business corporation, as defined in section 1371, to elect not to be subject to the taxes imposed by Chapter 1 of the Code, but to have all its income taxed directly to its shareholders.

Section 1373(a) of the Code provides that the undistributed taxable income of an electing small business corporation for any taxable year shall be included in the gross income of the shareholders of such corporation in the manner and to the extent set forth in section 1373. Section 1373(b) provides that each person who is a shareholder of an electing small business corporation on the last day of a taxable year of such corporation shall include in gross income, for the taxable year in which or with which the taxable year of the corporation ends, the amount the shareholder would have received as a dividend, if on such last day there had been distributed pro rata to its shareholders by such corporation an amount equal to the corporation's undistributed taxable income. Section 1373(c) defines "undistributed taxable income" as taxable income determined without regard to certain deductions, not relevant here, reduced by the taxes imposed by sections 56 and 1378(a) and by the amount of money distributed as dividends during the taxable year to the extent that any such amount is a distribution out of earnings and profits of the taxable year as specified in section 316(a)(2).

A "transfer" of any proven oil or gas property means a change in legal or equitable ownership in the oil or gas property. Any change that increases a taxpayer's proportionate share of income from an oil or gas property is also a transfer.

The filing of an election under section 1372(a) of the Code does not cause a transfer of legal or equitable ownership of any property from or to M. M owns the same oil and gas properties before and after the election. The amount included in the gross income of a shareholder of an electing small business corporation under section 1373 is an "adjusted" taxable income from which the allowance for depletion has been deducted. Thus, the shareholder's proportionate share of income from an oil or gas property is not increased as a result of the election under section 1372(a).

HOLDING

The filing of an election under section 1372(a) of the Code is not a transfer within the meaning of section 613A(c)(9) of an interest in any proven oil or gas properties.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 5B.—TEMPORARY INCOME TAX REGULATIONS UNDER THE FOREIGN EARNED INCOME ACT OF 1978

The foreign earned income exclusion

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides temporary regulations relating to the foreign earned income exclusion. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Foreign Earned Income Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-615, 1978-26.B. 415, 416]. These regulations affect individuals residing in camps located in hardship areas.

DATE: The regulations apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1977.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains temporary regulations under section 911 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The amendments are being proposed to conform the regulations under section 911 relating to the foreign earned income exclusion to section 202 of the Foreign Earned Income Act of 1978 (Pub. L. No. 95-615, 92 Stat. 3098). The temporary regulations provided by the document will remain in effect until superseded by final regulations on this subject.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISION

This Treasury decision contains only amendments to § 5b.911-1(c) relating to the definition of camp. The amended temporary regulations, § 5b.911-1(c), amplify the statutory definition of camp. Paragraph (c)(1) of § 5b.911-1 sets forth the general definition of camp. A rule has been added, providing that two or more common areas or enclaves which house employees who work on the same project are considered to be one common area or enclave in determining whether the lodging accommodates 10 or more employees performing services at the taxpayer's worksite.

Paragraph (c)(2) of § 5b.911-1 provides that lodging will be considered to be substandard if it is appreciably below the standard of housing typically occupied in the United States by individuals whose income equals the lesser of the median salary paid to American employees residing in the common area or the salary of an employee of the United States who is compensated at an annual rate paid for step 1 of grade GS-14. A list of facts and circumstances to be considered in determining whether lodging is substandard is provided. In addition a list of presumptions is provided.

Paragraph (c)(3) of § 5b.911-1 provides a new definition of remote area which focuses on the availability of satisfactory housing. A list of facts and circumstances to be considered in determining whether an area is remote is provided. In addition a list of presumptions is provided.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of the regulation is Mary E. Dean of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

The amendments to 26 CFR Part 5b are as follows:

Paragraph 1. Section 5b.911-1(c) is revised to read as follows:

§ 5b.911-1 Individuals qualifying for the exclusion.

* * * * *

(c) Camp—(1) In general. A camp is lodging which is all of the following:

(i) Substandard;

(ii) Provided by or on behalf of the employer for the convenience of the employer because the place where the taxpayer renders services is in a remote area where satisfactory housing is not available to the taxpayer on the open market;

(iii) Located as near as practicable to, and in the vicinity of, the worksite of the taxpayer; and

(iv) Furnished in a common area or enclave which is not available to the general public for lodging or accommodations and which normally accommodates 10 or more persons who are either employees of the taxpayer's employer or other employees performing services at the taxpayer's worksite.

For purposes of paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section, the term "for the convenience of the employer" has the same meaning which it has for purposes of section 119. For purposes of paragraph (c)(1)(iv) of this section, a cluster of housing units is not a common area or enclave if it is adjacent to or surrounded by substantially similar housing available to the general public. For purposes of paragraph (c)(1)(iv) of this section, two or more common areas or enclaves which house employees who work on the same project (for example, a highway project) are considered to be one common area or enclave in determining whether they normally accommodate 10 or more employees performing services at the taxpayer's worksite.

(2) Substandard lodging—(i) In general. Lodging is considered to be substandard if, under all the relevant facts and circumstances, it is appreciably below the standard of housing typically occupied in the United States by individuals whose income equals the lesser of the median salary paid to American employees residing in the common area or the salary of an employee of the United States who is compensated at an annual rate paid for step 1 of Grade GS-14. Relevant facts and circumstances which may indicate that lodging is substandard include (but are not limited to) the following:

(A) Inadequate living space;

(B) Lack of privacy occasioned by communal dining halls or other shared facilities;

(C) Temporary nature of the lodging, such as that inherent in prefabricated housing set in position on cinder blocks or housing consisting of movable units such as mobile homes, trailers, or portable camp facilities;

(D) An immediate environment that exposes the occupants of the housing to unsanitary or unhealthy conditions (for example, open sewers immediately adjacent to the housing) or to unusual risk of personal harm or property loss due to terrorism or civil unrest;

(E) Lack of improvements typically found in residential areas in the United States, such as paved and lighted streets, recreational areas, sewage facilities, and landscaping; or

(F) The cost per square foot of the lodging if constructed in the United States would be substantially less than the median cost per square foot to construct housing in the United States.

The general environment in which lodging is located (e.g., the climate, prevalence of insects, etc.) does not of itself make lodging substandard. The general environment is relevant, however, if lodging is inadequate to protect the occupants from environmental conditions. The individual employee's income level is under no circumstances relevant to whether lodging is substandard. Thus, lodging occupied by a particular employee which is substantially inferior to the housing previously occupied by that individual in the United States is not substandard unless it is also substantially inferior to housing typically occupied in the United States by individuals whose income equals the lesser of the median salary paid to American employees residing in the common area or the salary of a GS-14, step 1, U.S. Government employee.

(ii) Presumptions. Lodging will generally be considered to be substandard if it consists of any of the following:

(A) Portable, temporary, or movable housing occupied by employees who are not accompanied by spouse or dependents, in which the living space intended to be occupied by each employee is less than 250 square feet;

(B) Portable, temporary, or movable housing occupied by employees who are accompanied by spouse or dependents, in which the total interior living space intended to be occupied by a family unit is less than 800 square feet plus 200 square feet for each family member, other than the employee's spouse, who is expected to reside with the employee, and is no more than 1200 square feet;

(C) Housing which lacks adequate and reliable heating or air conditioning if appropriate for the climate, or adequate and reliable utilities such as electricity or sewage facilities; or

(D) Housing which lacks private sleeping quarters for unrelated individuals, private bath or toilet facilities for unrelated individuals, or fresh hot and cold piped water.

Notwithstanding the fact that lodging is described in paragraph (c)(2)(ii)(A), (B), or (C), lodging will not be considered substandard if it is clearly not inferior to housing typically occupied in the United States by individuals whose income equals the lesser of the median salary paid to American employees residing in the common area or the salary of a GS-14, step 1, U.S. Government employee. For purposes of paragraph (c)(2)(ii)(A) and (B), living space does not include shared areas, such as dining halls, lavatories, or storage facilities which are used by unrelated employees. For purposes of paragraph (c)(2)(ii)(A) and (B), housing is not portable, temporary or movable merely because it is prefabricated.

(iii) Determination of median salary. In determining the median salary of American employees residing in the common area, any reasonable method may be used. For example, the median salary may be determined by taking the average of the median salaries of American employees at the beginning and end of the calendar year.

(3) Remote area. Solely for purposes of section 911, a remote area is a place where satisfactory housing is unavailable to the taxpayer on the open market within a reasonable commuting distance of the place at which the taxpayer renders services.

(i) Facts and circumstances. Facts and circumstances to be considered in determining if satisfactory housing is unavailable within a reasonable commuting distance include (but are not limited to):

(A) The inaccessibility to available housing due to geographic factors or the quality of the roads;

(B) The number of housing units available on the open market within a reasonable commuting distance in relation to the number of housing units required for the employer's employees;

(C) The cost of housing available on the open market; or

(D) Terrorism or civil unrest present in the area where housing would be available which would subject U.S. citizens to unusual risk of personal harm or property loss.

(ii) Presumptions. Satisfactory housing will generally be considered to be unavailable to the employee on the open market if any of the following conditions is satisfied:

(A) The foreign government requires the employer to provide housing for its employees other than housing available on the open market;

(B) An unrelated person awarding work to an employer requires that the employer's employees occupy housing specified by such person; or

(C) The place at which the employee renders services is not within a reasonable commuting distance of a community with a population of 50,000 or more individuals.

The conditions of paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(A) and (B) are not fulfilled if the requirement described therein applies primarily to American employers or employers of American employees and there is a significant number of foreign employers or employees other than Americans.

Section 934.—Limitation on Reduction in Income Tax Liability Incurred to the Virgin Islands

26 CFR 1.934-1: Limitation on reduction in income tax liability incurred to the Virgin Islands.
(Also Sections 243, 864, 881, 882, 7701; 1.243-1, 1.864-2, 1.881-1, 1.882-1, 301.7701-1.)

U.S. corporation; Virgin Islands inhabitant. A situation is described in which a U.S. corporation that has its principal office in the Virgin Islands and qualifies for certain Virgin Islands tax incentives is treated as a Virgin Islands inhabitant so that it satisfies its U.S. income tax obligation by paying tax on its income from all sources to the Virgin Islands. The same corporation is a domestic corporation for purposes of the dividends received deduction.

Rev. Rul. 80-40

ISSUES

(1) Is a United States corporation that has its principal office in the Virgin Islands and qualifies for certain Virgin Islands tax incentives treated as a Virgin Islands inhabitant so that it satisfies its United States income tax obligation by paying tax on its income from all sources to the Virgin Islands?

(2) Is such a United States corporation a "domestic corporation" for purposes of the dividends received deduction of section 243 of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

P, a corporation organized in state X, is engaged in manufacturing in state X. In order to take advantage of certain income tax incentives offered by the Virgin Islands, P organized S to carry out part of P's manufacturing operations in the Virgin Islands. S is incorporated in state Y.

S conducts all of its manufacturing operations in the Virgin Islands and derives 80 percent or more of each taxable year's gross income from Virgin Islands sources, and 50 percent or more of each taxable year's gross income from the active conduct of its business in the Virgin Islands. S maintains its principal office in the Virgin Islands. Management and control of S is in the Virgin Islands and all policy is made there. Board of directors and shareholders' meetings are held in the Virgin Islands, and all officers and some directors of S are Virgin Islands residents. S's corporate receipts are received in the Virgin Islands and deposited in Virgin Islands bank accounts. All disbursements are made from the Virgin Islands and the corporate books and records are maintained and audited there.

LAW AND ANALYSIS—ISSUE (1)

Section 934(a) of the Code prevents the Virgin Islands from reducing by subsidy its income tax on United States source income of a United States corporation. However, section 934(b) provides that in the case of a domestic corporation, subsection (a) shall not apply to the extent such corporation derived its income from sources without the United States: (1) if 80 percent or more of the gross income of such corporation for the 3-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year (or for such part of such period immediately preceding the close of such taxable year as may be applicable) was derived from sources within the Virgin Islands: and (2) if 50 percent or more of the gross income of such corporation for such period or such part thereof was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within the Virgin Islands.

Section 1.934-1(b)(3) of the Income Tax Regulations explains how to compute income tax liability incurred to the Virgin Islands and attributable to income derived from sources without the United States by a United States corporate inhabitant of the Virgin Islands. Section 1.934-1(b)(5) explains how to make a similar computation for a United States corporation which is not an inhabitant of the Virgin Islands. Section 934(d) of the Code provides that section 934(b) will only apply to corporations who supply the information required by section 1.934-1(d) and (e) of the regulations.

Section 1.901-1(g)(5) of the regulations states that a United States foreign tax credit is not allowable to persons who are inhabitants of the Virgin Islands.

Authority for income taxation in the Virgin Islands is derived from the Naval Appropriations Act, approved July 12, 1921 (U.S.C. 1937). This Act mirrors the income tax laws of the United States into the Virgin Islands as if the Virgin Islands legislature had adopted the Internal Revenue Code and applied it to United States persons in the same way the United States applies the Code to foreigners.

Under the mirror system the United States and the Virgin Islands are separate and distinct taxing jurisdictions even though their income tax laws arise from an identical statute applicable to each (the Code). See Rev. Rul. 73-315, 1973-2 C.B. 225. Thus, the effect of this mirror system of taxation is to require all persons including United States corporations incurring income tax obligations to both the United States and the Virgin Islands under Chapter 1 of the Code (as applicable in each jurisdiction) to file tax returns and pay income tax to both jurisdictions.

Section 28(a) of the Revised Organic Act of the Virgin Islands (R.O.A.), 48 U.S.C. section 1642 (Supp. 1979), makes substantial changes in this system as it affects "inhabitants of the Virgin Islands." Section 28(a) requires inhabitants to satisfy their United States and Virgin Islands income tax obligations arising under Chapter 1 of the Code (as applicable in each jurisdiction) by filing a single return with, and paying to, the Virgin Islands the Virgin Islands territorial income tax (the Code as mirrored into the Virgin Islands) on their income from all sources. See Rev. Rul. 60-291, 1960-2 C.B. 407.

Section 28(a) of the R.O.A. defines "inhabitants of the Virgin Islands" as all persons whose permanent residence is the Virgin Islands."

A United States corporation can qualify as an inhabitant of the Virgin Islands because (1) under section 7701(a)(1) of the Code, the term "person" includes a corporation, and (2) in adopting section 28(a), Congress rejected an attempt to limit the definition of "inhabitants of the Virgin Islands" to—"U.S. citizens" instead of "all persons." See Conf. Rept. No. 2105, 83rd Cong., 2d Sess. 22 (1954). Also, section 934 of the Code and section 1.934-1(b)(3) of the regulations operate on the assumption that a United States corporation can qualify as an inhabitant of the Virgin Islands. See S. Rept. No. 1767, 86th Cong., 2d Sess. 3 (1960).

In the present situation, all of the officers and some directors of S are Virgin Islands residents. All significant business operations, shareholder meetings, and Board of Directors meetings are conducted in the Virgin Islands, and S meets the percentage tests of section 934(b) of the Code. In addition, S is carrying on a trade or business in the Virgin Islands within the meaning of section 864(a). This is sufficient to constitute S a permanent resident, and therefore an inhabitant, of the Virgin Islands for purposes of section 28(a) of the R.O.A.

The United States does not tax a foreign corporation on its non-United States source income that is not effectively connected with the corporation's conduct of a trade or business within the United States. See sections 881(a) and 882. Therefore, under an exact mirror system, non-Virgin Islands source income that is not effectively connected with a United States corporate inhabitant's conduct of a Virgin Islands trade or business would escape territorial income tax since the inhabitant is considered a foreign corporation by the Virgin Islands. However, Congress, in section 28(a) of the R.O.A., made it clear that such income of inhabitants of the Virgin Islands would not escape taxation by using the words "paying their tax on income derived from all sources both within and outside the Virgin Islands into the Treasury of the Virgin Islands" (emphasis added). Thus, in effect, S is taxed as if it were a Virgin Islands corporation and satisfies both its United States and Virgin Islands income tax obligations by paying the Virgin Islands territorial income tax on its income from all sources. If S fails to file a return or pay tax on its income from all sources to the Virgin Islands, then S does not satisfy its U.S. tax obligations.

LAW AND ANALYSIS—ISSUE (2)

Under section 243 of the Code, a deduction is allowed for dividends received from a domestic corporation that is subject to taxation under Chapter 1 of the Code.

As a domestic corporation, S is still subject to taxation under Chapter 1 of the Code as applicable in the United States. Section 28(a) of the R.O.A. merely requires S to satisfy this obligation by paying income tax to the Virgin Islands on S's income from all sources. Thus dividends paid by S are not excluded from qualifying for treatment under section 243 when received by P.

HOLDINGS

(1) S is treated as an inhabitant of the Virgin Islands and must satisfy its United States and Virgin Islands income tax obligations by paying tax on its income from all sources to the Virgin Islands.

(2) S is a domestic corporation for purposes of the dividends received deduction of section 243 of the Code.

Section 1011.—Adjusted Basis for Determining Gain or Loss

26 CFR 1.1011-1: Adjusted basis.

Basis; film rights; cost exceeding fair market value. A corporation purchased certain motion picture exhibition rights in an arm's length transaction and resold them to a limited partnership whose general partner was the corporation's majority shareholder for a cash downpayment greater than the corporation's original cost plus a nonrecourse note. The partnership is unable to demonstrate that the fair market value of the rights exceeds the corporation's original cost, and the partnership's basis in the rights is limited to their fair market value.

Rev. Rul. 80-42

ISSUE

What is the basis of the motion picture exhibition rights for federal income tax purposes under the circumstances described below, where the cash downpayment for the rights is in excess of their fair market value?

FACTS

On October 15, 1979, X, a limited partnership, acquired the rights from M, a corporation, to exhibit a completed motion picture in the United States. A, the general partner of X, is a majority shareholder of M, but there is no relationship between M and the limited partners of X. X uses the accrual method of accounting. The purchase agreement between X and M stated that the purchase price was 2,000*x* dollars. The stated purchase price was agreed upon in order to establish a higher basis for the property. Pursuant to the agreement, X paid 500*x* dollars on delivery of the film rights and gave a note to M in the face amount of 1,500*x* dollars. As collateral for the note, X gave M a security interest in the film rights and in one-half the net receipts earned from exploitation of the film. The note was non-negotiable, bearing interest at the annual rate of eight percent with principal and interest due and payable on October 14, 1983. Prepayment of principal and interest was required to the extent of 50 percent of the net receipts derived from distribution of the picture.

Neither X nor any of the partners of X was personally liable for payment of the note. The sole recourse of M in the event of default was to the collateral securing the note.

The motion picture had been produced in a foreign country. M had acquired the United States exhibition rights from the foreign producer in an arm's length transaction for 400*x* dollars a few months before transferring the rights to X. X is unable to demonstrate that the fair market value of the acquired rights exceeded 400*x* dollars.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1011(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that, in general, the adjusted basis for determining gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property, whenever acquired, shall be the basis determined under section 1012, adjusted as provided in section 1016.

Section 1012 of the Code provides that, in general, the basis of property shall be its cost.

In Rev. Rul. 77-110, 1977-1 C.B. 58, the Service concludes that the liability on a nonrecourse interest-bearing note given as part of the purchase price of film distribution rights, whose value could not be shown to approximate the amount of the note, may not be included in the basis of the rights and no deduction is allowable for interest accrued on the note.

In this case, X is unable to establish that the fair market value of the film rights purchased from M exceeds 400*x* dollars. The burden is on X to prove that the payment to M for the film rights that is in excess of their fair market value is not for a purpose other than the acquisition of the film rights. See Majestic Securities Corp. v. Commissioner, 120 F.2d (8th Cir. 1941), aff'g 42 B.T.A. 698 (1940); and New Hampshire Fire Insurance Co. v. Commissioner, 2 T.C. 708 (1943).

HOLDING

The cash payment made by X to M that is in excess of the fair market value of the film exhibition rights may not be included in the basis of the film rights. The basis of the film rights purchased by X is limited to their fair market value.

Consistent with Rev. Rul. 77-110, the liability created by the nonrecourse note given by X to M may not be included in the basis of the film rights.

Meals furnished to hotel and restaurant employees. The Service will not follow the Hotel Conquistador decision holding that the value of certain meals furnished without charge to hotel and restaurant employees was not wages under the FICA and FUTA.

Rev. Rul. 80-41

ISSUE

In Hotel Conquistador, Inc. v. United States, 597 F.2d 1348 (Ct. Cl. 1979), cert. denied January 14, 1980, the Court of Claims held that the value of certain meals furnished without charge to hotel and restaurant employees was not "wages" under sections 3121(a) and 3306(b) of the Internal Revenue Code.

It is the long standing position of the Service that the value of meals furnished without charge, for example, to hotel or restaurant employees, or to seamen or other employees aboard vessels, is wages under sections 3121 (a) and 3306(b) of the Code. This position has been supported by the courts in S. S. Kresge Co. v. United States, 379 F.2d 309 (6th Cir. 1967), concerning free meals furnished to lunch stand employees, and Pacific American Fisheries, Inc. v. United States, 138 F.2d 464 (9th Cir. 1943), concerning the value of board and lodging furnished to salmon packing plant employees.

For these reasons, the Service will not follow the decision of the United States Court of Claims in the Hotel Conquistador case, and employers must continue to treat the value of such free meals furnished to their employees as wages under sections 3121(a) and 3306(b) of the Code.

(Also Part I, Section 7122; 301.7122-1.)

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to set forth the jurisdictional changes pertaining to the consideration and disposition of offers in compromise under Delegation Order No. 11 (Rev. 11), 1979-43 I.R.B. 25; to outline general guidelines relating to the acceptability of an offer in compromise; and also to supersede and restate in a current document the practices and procedures set forth in prior revenue procedures applicable to comparable positions and organizational components.

SEC. 2. DECENTRALIZED AREAS OF RESPONSIBILITY

.01 Certain functions of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue with respect to the compromise of civil cases involving doubt as to liability or collectibility, incurred under the regulatory provisions of the Internal Revenue Code and related statutes have been delegated under Order No. 11 (Rev. 11) as follows:

1 Assistant Commissioner (Compliance), for cases originating in the Office of International Operations, and Regional Commissioners.—Delegated authority to accept, under section 7122 of the Code, compromises of civil cases involving tax liabilities of $100,000 or more (including any interest, penalty, additional amount or addition to tax) based solely upon doubt as to liability. This authority may not be redelegated.

2 Director, Collection Division and Regional Commissioners.—Delegated authority to accept, under section 7122, compromises of civil cases involving liabilities of $100,000 or more (including any interest, penalty, additional amount or addition to tax) based on doubt as to collectibility or doubt as to both collectibility and liability and offers submitted under section 3469 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (31 U.S.C. 194) insofar as claims arising in the administration of the Internal Revenue laws are concerned. This authority may not be redelegated.

3 District Directors, the Director of International Operations, Assistant District Directors and the Assistant Director of International Operations. —Delegated authority to accept, under section 7122, compromises of civil cases involving liabilities under $100,000 (including any interest, penalty, additional amount or addition to the tax), to accept offers involving specific penalties, and reject offers to compromise civil cases (subject to the appeal procedures prescribed by section 6 of this revenue procedure) regardless of the amount of the liability involved. This authority may not be redelegated except that the authority to reject offers may be redelegated, but not lower than to Division Chief. The District Director in a streamlined district may not redelegate this authority. In addition, those Service officials delegated rejection authority are authorized to close, regardless of the amount of the liability involved, by written notification to the offeror, all compromise cases where the offer has been withdrawn.

4 Regional Directors of Appeals, Chiefs and Associate Chiefs, Appeals Offices.—Delegated authority to accept, under section 7122, compromises of civil cases involving liabilities under $100,000 (including any interest, penalty, additional amount or addition to the tax), to accept offers involving specific penalties, and reject offers to compromise civil cases regardless of the amount of the liability involved. This authority may not be redelegated.

5 Service Center Directors and Assistant Service Center Directors.—Delegated authority to accept, under section 7122, compromises of civil cases under $100,000 involving penalty liabilities based solely on doubt as to liability, and reject offers in compromise, limited to penalties (subject to the appeal procedures prescribed by section 6 of this revenue procedure), regardless of the amount of the liability involved. This authority may be redelegated, but not lower than to Division Chief. In addition, those Service officials delegated rejection authority are authorized to close, regardless of the amount of the liability involved, by written notification to the offeror, all compromise cases where the offer has been withdrawn.

The above delegations are "limited" to the extent that the delegated authority must be exercised in accordance with the limitations prescribed by section 301.7122-1 of the Regulations on Procedure and Administration and with procedures established by the National Office. See section 3 with respect to offers excepted from this delegated authority.

.02 Appeals Offices.—The District Director, Director of International Operations or Service Center Director refers two types of offer in compromise cases for consideration by the appropriate Office of Regional Director of Appeals. The first type relates to offers in compromise based in whole or in part on doubt as to liability, which liability, irrespective of the amount involved, is pending before or was determined by an Appeals office. The second type involves consideration of a taxpayer's appeal from a rejection or proposed rejection by the District Director, Director of International Operations or Service Center Director. (The procedure governing appeals is applicable only to those offers with respect to which the Directors have processing jurisdiction and which relate to a tax over which the Appeals office has authority to function. See section 3.01.) In considering either type of case referred to above, the Appeals office may call upon the originating office to conduct any investigation considered necessary to reach a conclusion on the disposition of the offer. See section 6.02.

.03 Chief Counsel. — The Chief Counsel has delegated authority to review and dispose of offers in compromise to the Director, General Litigation Division, for cases that are accepted or rejected at the National Office of the Commissioner, and to the Regional Counsel or delegate. C.C. Order 1030.1B. The following legal functions are performed by these delegates:

1 The Director, General Litigation Division, reviews cases recommended for acceptance by the Director of International Operations involving liabilities of $100,000 or more (including any interest, penalty, additional amount or addition to the tax) and any other cases referred to the National Office of the Commissioner, signs the legal opinion required under section 7122(b), and forwards the case to the appropriate delegated Service official for signature on the Abstract and Statement and issuance of the acceptance letter.

2 The Regional Counsel, for cases involving liabilities of $100,000 or more, and the District Counsel reviews:

(a) Cases recommended for acceptance prepared by the District Director which involve liabilities (including any interest, penalty, additional amount or addition to the tax) of $500 or more, those relating to specific penalties, and those submitted under section 3469 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (31 U.S.C. 194), insofar as claims arising in the administration of the Internal Revenue laws are concerned; signs the legal opinion required under section 7122(b), and then forwards the case to the appropriate delegated Service official (depending upon the amount of the liability) for signature on the Abstract and Statement and issuance of the acceptance letter.

(b) Cases recommended for acceptance prepared by Service Center Directors which involve penalty liabilities of $500 or more, signs the legal opinion required under section 7122(b) of the Code, and then forwards the case to the appropriate delegated Service official (depending upon the amount of the liability) for signature on the Abstract and Statement and issuance of the acceptance letter; and

(c) Cases described as Chief Counsel cases which involve the compromise of tax liabilities in the following categories:

(1) Cases in which recommendations for prosecution are pending in the Office of the Chief Counsel, the Department of Justice, or Offices of United States Attorneys, including cases in which criminal proceedings have been instituted but not disposed of, and related cases in which offers in compromise have been submitted or are pending;

(2) Cases in which the taxpayer is in receivership or is involved in a proceeding under any provision of the Bankruptcy Act;

(3) Cases in which the taxpayer is deceased; in joint liability cases, where either taxpayer is deceased;

(4) Cases involving proposals to discharge property from the effect of tax liens or to subordinate the lien or liens;

(5) Cases involving insolvent banks;

(6) Cases involving assignments for the benefit of creditors;

(7) Cases involving liquidation proceedings; and

(8) Other cases in which court proceedings are pending, except cases pending before the Tax Court of the United States.

Where appropriate, Regional Counsel or District Counsel prepares the legal opinion required under section 7122(b), and forwards the case to the appropriate delegated Service official (depending upon the amount of the liability) for signature on Counsel's determination and issuance of the appropriate letter to the offeror.

3 The Regional Counsel, where appropriate, and the District Counsel furnishes legal advice in the form of an advisory opinion when the District Director or Service Center Director submits a specific request involving a question of law or regarding which, for any other reason in the judgment of the Director, Counsel's opinion should be obtained.

SEC. 3. LIMITATIONS ON DELEGATED AUTHORITY

.01 Regardless of the amount of the liability involved, the Assistant Commissioner (Compliance), the Director, Collection Division, Regional Commissioners, District Directors, the Director of International Operations, Assistant District Directors, the Assistant Director of International Operations, Service Center Directors, Assistant Service Center Directors, Regional Directors of Appeals, and Chiefs and Associate Chiefs, Appeals Offices have not been delegated authority to accept offers in compromise in the following classes:

1 Cases in which recommendations for prosecution are pending in the Department of Justice or United States Attorneys' offices, including cases in which criminal proceedings have been instituted but not disposed of.

2 Cases in which recommendations for prosecution or defense are pending in the Office of the Chief Counsel, and in related cases in which offers in compromise have been submitted.

3 Cases in which the acceptance of an offer by the Internal Revenue Service is dependent upon the acceptance of a related offer or a settlement under the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice.

4 Cases arising under laws relating to alcohol, tobacco and firearms taxes.

5 Cases involving liabilities "in suit," including those where the tax lien has been reduced to judgment.

SEC. 4. GENERAL GUIDELINES RELATING TO THE ACCEPTABILITY OF AN OFFER IN COMPROMISE

.01 The compromise of a tax liability rests upon but one or both of two grounds—(1) doubt as to liability or (2) doubt as to collectibility. The doubt as to liability must be supported by evidence and the amount acceptable will depend upon the degree of doubt found in the particular case. Where doubt as to collectibility is involved, an acceptable offer must reflect all that can be collected from a taxpayer's income, present or prospective, after giving effect to all priorities granted to the Government. In any case involving a large liability and a nominal offer, or involving a criminal violation under the Internal Revenue laws, additional consideration is usually required for the acceptance of offers based in whole or in part on inability to pay. The additional consideration required is dependent upon the facts in the particular case, but generally is provided for by the submission of collateral agreements. The agreements most commonly employed pertain to payments from future income and, where applicable, to the relinquishment of certain present or potential tax benefits.

.02 A Statement of Financial Condition and Other Information, Form 433, signed by the taxpayer, is required in all offer in compromise cases based on the taxpayer's inability to pay the total amount due, regardless of the type of tax or amount of liability involved.

SEC. 5. FUNCTIONAL ALIGNMENT AND COORDINATION AMONG SERVICE CENTERS, DISTRICT OFFICES, REGIONAL OFFICES AND NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 Service Centers.

1 The service center is responsible for the initial processing of offers in compromise. When these processes are completed, the offers are then referred to the appropriate office for further disposition.

2 The service center Collection function has jurisdiction over the consideration of penalty offers based solely on doubt as to liability (except 100-percent penalties and those arising under laws relating to alcohol, tobacco and firearms) prior to the Service Center Director or Assistant Service Center Director exercising delegated authority to accept or reject the offer.

.02 District Offices and Office of International Operations.—Prior to the Director or Assistant Director exercising delegated authority to accept or reject an offer in compromise recommended for acceptance by District officials:

1 District Collection functions will have jurisdiction over:

(a) Investigating and processing offers in compromise based on doubt as to collectibility, in the following type cases:

(1) Taxes of all classes, except alcohol, tobacco, and firearms, including penalties and interest;

(2) Fraud, negligence, and delinquency penalties, including interest;

(3) Penalties relating to declaration of estimated taxes;

(4) 100-percent penalties, as provided by sections 6671 and 6672 of the Internal Revenue Code, based either on doubt as to liabiilty or doubt as to collectibility;

(5) Penalties relating to failure to pay;

(6) Offers submitted under section 3469 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (31 U.S.C. 194);

(7) Consideration of all offers in default, regardless of whether the offer was based on doubt as to liability or doubt as to collectibility; and

(8) Disposition of offer cases referred from service center Collection functions.

(b) Investigative responsibility for Chief Counsel cases involving the types of offers in compromise enumerated above.

(c) Offers in compromise based on both doubt as to collectibility and doubt as to liability, but only as to the collectibility aspects of the offer. If a conclusion is reached that there is no doubt as to collectibility, the case will be transferred to the Examination function for investigation as a doubt as to liability case.

2 District Examination functions will have jurisdictional responsibility for consideration and disposition of offers in compromise based on doubt as to liability for taxes or for both taxes and statutory additions, except alcohol, tobacco, and firearms taxes, including investigative jurisdiction over such offers in compromise in Chief Counsel cases.

3 If the District Director recommends aceptance of an offer in compromise of a liability of $100,000 or more, the complete compromise file will be forwarded to the appropriate Regional Office for consideration. If the Director of International Operations recommends acceptance of an offer in compromise of a liability of $100,000 or more, the complete compromise file will be forwarded to the National Office for consideration.

.03 Regional Offices.—Prior to the Regional Commissioner exercising the delegated authority to accept an offer in compromise recommended for acceptance by district or service center officials the:

1 Review of cases covering liabilities of $100,000 or more based upon doubt as to collectibility or doubt as to both collectibility and liability is vested in the Office of the Assistant Regional Commissioner (Collection).

2 Review of tax cases covering liabilities of $100,000 or more based upon doubt as to liability is vested in the Office of the Assistant Regional Commissioner (Examination).

.04 National Office.—

1 The Collection Division coordinates all compromise activities for the National Office. Liaison is maintained with the Office of the Chief Counsel, the Examination Division, the Appeals Division, and with the Department of Justice in connection with the review of acceptance recommendations prior to approval.

2 The review of offers requiring the Assistant Commissioner's (Compliance) approval is vested in the Special Programs Branch, Special Examination Section, of the Examination Division.

SEC. 6. APPEALS PROCEDURES

.01 Referring Office Procedures.—Upon request, either before or after rejection of an offer in compromise, and subject to the exceptions set forth in section 3.01, the taxpayer or proponent—disagreeing with the recommendation of the examining officer—may request that the District Director, Service Center Director or Director of International Operations forward the case directly to the Office of Regional Director of Appeals. (If the offer pertains to a case concurrently under consideration in the Appeals office or the proponent wishes to appeal to the Appeals office, no written protest will be required unless the tax and/or proposed addition to tax, penalty and assessed interest exceeds $2,500 for any taxable year, taxable period, or taxable event.)

.02 Appeals Procedures. — Upon receipt of a protested rejection from the originating office, the facts in the case are independently considered by an Appeals office, the taxpayer is granted a hearing and if necessary, a further investigative report is procured. After consideration, the Appeals Office notifies the offeror of the disposition of the case in accordance with the conclusions reached at the Appeals level, subject to the requirements for review and approval by Counsel, Regional Office or National Office. The case file will then be returned to the originating office for other necessary closing actions.

Sec. 7. Public Inspection of Accepted Offers

.01 Authority.—Public inspection of any offer in compromise accepted under section 7122 of the Code is authorized by section 6103(k)(1).

.02 Procedure.—For a period of one year, a copy of the Abstract and Statement for each accepted offer is made available for examination in the office of the District Director, Service Center Director, or the Director of International Operations which originally accepted or recommended acceptance of the offer. No lists are prepared and no releases are distributed by the Internal Revenue Service in connection with these cases.

Sec. 8. Effect on Other Documents

Rev. Proc. 64-44, 1964-2 C.B. 974, and Rev. Proc. 66-53, 1966-2 C.B. 1266, are superseded.

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, or enrolled agent in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants and enrolled agents are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants and enrolled agents to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following persons have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

William P. Renner	Hagerstown, MD	Certified Public Accountant	Twenty-four months effective December 11, 1979

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on Subpart A, Tax Conventions and related Treasury Decisions and Revenue Rulings; Subpart B, Legislation and related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical Indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Price: $1.00 (single copy). Subscription price: $50.00 a year; $12.50 additional for foreign mailing.

The value of credit units received is includible in the gross incomes of members for the taxable year in which the units are credited to their accounts. The dollar value of units received for services by an employee of the club, who may use the units in the same manner as other members, is includible in gross income for the taxable year in which received.

The standard mileage rate for charitable, medical, or moving expenses is eight cents per mile. Effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1979, for purposes of the optional method, an automobile that has been used for more than five years for business is considered to be fully depreciated. ---

26 CFR 1.61-2: Compensation for services, including fees, commissions, and similar items.

Section 104.—Compensation for Injuries or Sickness

26 CFR 1.104-1: Compensation for injuries or sickness.
(Also Section 105; 1.105-1.)

Disability benefits; inclusion in gross income. The tax treatment of disability payments is discussed in a situation in which the retired employee is entitled to benefits that comprise the larger of an amount based on years of service or an amount determined without regard to either years of service or age. The effect of the employee's election to decrease the retirement allowance in order to increase the survivor's benefit is also discussed.

Rev. Rul. 80-44

ISSUE

Are amounts received by an employee and the employee's survivors excludable from gross income under the provisions of either section 104(a)(1) or section 105(d) of the Internal Revenue Code under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

Under statutes adopted by City M, any individual employed by M may retire on account of a disability that is incurred in such employment and is compensable under the workmen's compensation act of the state, provided that written notice is given to the city board of the intended retirement and its effective date, and provided further that a medical examiner, after examining the individual, certifies that the individual is mentally or physically incapacitated for the further performance of duty, that the incapacity is likely to be permanent, and that the individual should be retired. The statutes provide in general, that the service-connected disability retirement allowance shall be an amount equal to the greater of (A) 60 percent of the individual's average final compensation, or (B) the amount to which the individual would be entitled under the ordinary, nonoccupational disability pension provisions of M's statutes (a pension based on years of service). Under these statutes the individual may elect to decrease the retirement allowance in order to increase the survivor's benefit to the employee's spouse.

Neither the occupational disability plan nor the nonoccupational disability plan is contributory.

As a result of a service-connected injury, A, an employee of M, retired in 1978 pursuant to the disability retirement provisions of the city plan. Because of years of service, A was entitled to an allowance of 80 percent of average final compensation. A elected to receive that allowance because it is greater than the disability retirement allowance of 60 percent of average final compensation. A's average final compensation was $200 per week.

LAW

Section 61(a) of the Code and the Income Tax Regulations thereunder provide that, except as otherwise provided by law, gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including compensation for services.

Section 104(a)(1) of the Code provides, with certain exceptions not pertinent to this case, that gross income does not include amounts received under workmen's compensation acts as compensation for personal injuries or sickness.

Section 1.104-1(b) of the regulations states that section 104(a)(1) of the Code excludes from gross income amounts received by an employee under a workmen's compensation act or under a statute in the nature of a workmen's compensation act that provides compensation to the employee for personal injuries or sickness incurred in the course of employment. However, the exclusion under section 104(a)(1) does not apply to a retirement pension or annuity to the extent that it is determined by reference to the employee's age or length of service, or the employee's prior contributions, even though the employee's retirement is occasioned by an occupational injury or sickness.

Section 105(d) of the Code provides, subject to certain limitations, that gross income does not include amounts received by an employee through accident or health insurance for personal injury or sickness if those amounts constitute wages or payments in lieu of wages for a period during which the employee is absent from work on account of permanent and total disability. Generally, for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976, the exclusion is available only if the taxpayer is retired on disability, was permanently and totally disabled at the time of retirement, and has not reached age 65 before the end of the taxable year.

ANALYSIS AND HOLDINGS

The lifetime benefits in question here are authorized by a statute that provides benefits to a class restricted to employees with service-incurred disabilities. These benefits are thus payments for those disabilities. Accordingly, this statute is a statute in the nature of a workmen's compensation act. Rev. Rul. 72-291, 1972-1 C.B. 36; Rev. Rul. 72-44, 1972-1 C.B. 31.

The allowance received by an employee under the service connected disability retriment provisions of M's statutes is therefore excludable from a recipient's gross income under section 104(a)(1) of the Code to the extent that the allowance (before any reduction to increase the survivor's benefit) does not exceed 60 percent of the recipient's average final compensation. The excess of that allowance (before any reduction to increase the survivor's benefit), if any, is attributable to the length of service and is not excludable under section 104(a)(1). See Rev. Rul. 72-44.

A's average final compensation was $200 per week, so that A receives an allowance of $160 (80 percent of average final compensation). Of this amount, $120 (60 percent × $200) is treated as workmen's compensation and is excludable under section 104(a)(1) of the Code. $40 (20 percent × $200) is attributable to years of service and is not excludable under section 104(a)(1). However, this amount is excludable from gross income to the extent permitted by section 105(d) for years in which the requirements of that section are met. See Rev. Rul. 58-43, 1958-1 C.B. 45, which applies section 105(d) to military disability retirement pay in excess of the amounts that are excludable under section 104(a)(4).

If an employee elects to reduce the employee's lifetime allowance in order to increase the survivor's benefit, the reduction is attributable pro rata among the components of the lifetime allowance. Thus, if as a result of such an election A's lifetime benefit were to be reduced to $100 per week, $75 (120/160 × $100) of the amount is treated as workmen's compensation. The balance, $25, is attributable to years of service and is not excludable under section 104(a)(1) of the Code. This $25 is excludable to the extent permitted by section 105(d) for taxable years in which the requirements of that section are met.

The resulting increase in survivor's benefits is directly attributable to a reduction in the employee's lifetime benefits. The percentage of the increase equal to the percentage of lifetime benefits excludable under section 104(a)(1) of the Code is thus a continuation of lifetime section 104(a)(1) benefits. This percentage of the increase thus qualifies as payments under a workmen's compensation act to survivors of a deceased employee, and under section 1.104-1(b) of the regulations it is excludable from gross income under section 104(a)(1). As a result, 75 percent (120/160) of any increase in benefits to A's survivors is excludable under section 104(a)(1).

VITA volunteers; unreimbursed expenses. Unreimbursed expenses for transportation, paper and pencils, newspaper advertising, and similar items incurred by volunteers in connection with their participation in the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program are deductible under section 170 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-45

ISSUE

Are unreimbursed expenses incurred by volunteers participating in the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program deductible under section 170 of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

VITA is an on-going program established under the auspices of the Internal Revenue Service to further the policy of the Service to help taxpayers to comply voluntarily with federal tax laws and to assist taxpayers in meeting their obligations under the tax laws. The aim of the program is to provide free assistance to low-income, elderly, and non-English speaking individuals in the preparation of their federal income tax returns. VITA volunteers are trained by the Service, which provides instructors and materials at no cost to the volunteers. When the training is completed, the Service continues to assist the volunteers by making available area coordinators (who are Internal Revenue Service employees) and by providing IRS publications and technical assistance. A special telephone number is furnished to the volunteers so that they can obtain immediate assistance. The volunteers include members of retirement, religious, and civic organizations, college students, members of social action groups, and Internal Revenue Service employees. The Service monitors the program by requiring the volunteers to place the letters "VITA" on each return they prepare under the program.

Unreimbursed out-of-pocket expenses incurred by VITA volunteers include transportation costs to and from the training and tax assistance sites and, in some instances, the cost of paper and pencils used at tax assistance sites, newspaper advertising expenses incurred to publicize provision of tax assistance, and similar items directly connected with participation in the VITA program.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1.170A-1(g) of the regulations provides that no deduction is allowable under section 170 of the Code for a contribution of services. However, unreimbursed expenditures made incident to the rendition of services to an organization contributions to which are deductible may constitute a deductible contribution. For example, out-of-pocket transportation expenses necessarily incurred in performing donated services are deductible.

Rev. Rul. 65-285, 1965-2 C.B. 56, holds that individuals invited by the Department of Justice and the Office of Economic Opportunity to attend a conference and contribute their advice and services regarding methods of meeting legal problems of the poor may deduct their out-of-pocket expenses in connection therewith under section 170 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 67-362, 1967-2 C.B. 117, holds that retired business executives participating in the Small Business Administration's SCORE program by counseling owners of small businesses may deduct reasonable, unreimbursed expenditures necessarily incurred in providing such assistance.

HOLDING

Unreimbursed expenses for transportation, paper and pencils, newspaper advertising and similar items incurred by VITA volunteers while rendering gratuitous services pursuant to the VITA program are incurred "for the use of" the United States within the meaning of section 170(c)(1) of the Code and are deductible under section 170, subject to the limitations of section 170(b)(1)(B).

Section 269.—Acquisitions Made to Evade or Avoid Income Tax

26 CFR 1.269-1: Meaning and use of terms.

Acquisition to avoid tax; reorganization; control; attribution of sole owner's stock. An acquired corporation owned all the stock of two subsidiary corporations. The acquiring corporation, owning 45 percent of the stock of the acquired corporation before the merger, did not have control of the acquired corporation under section 269 of the Code where the acquiring, corporation's sole stockholder also owned 10 percent of the stock of the acquired corporation because the attribution rules of constructive ownership do not apply. The acquiring corporation has acquired control of the acquired corporation's subsidiaries.

Rev. Rul. 80-46

ISSUE

Has the taxpayer acquired control of any corporation within the meaning of section 269(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

The taxpayer, M corporation, owned 45 percent of the stock of X corporation. A, an individual, owned 10 percent of the stock of X and 100 percent of the stock of M. The balance of the X stock was owned by unrelated third parties. The assets of X consisted solely of 100 percent of the stock of both Y corporation and Z corporation.

In June 1975, X was merged into M under the laws of state T. Pursuant to the merger agreement, all the stock of Y and Z was transferred to M. The transaction qualified as a statutory merger within the meaning of section 368(a)(1)(A) of the Code. Y and Z became subsidiaries of M and filed consolidated federal income tax returns with M for years subsequent to the merger.

The principal purpose of the merger was to avoid federal income tax by securing the benefit of a deduction, credit, or other allowance that M would not otherwise have enjoyed.

The specific questions presented are (1) whether the X stock owned directly by A before the merger can be attributed to M so that M had control of X before the merger and therefore did not acquire it within the meaning of section 269(a)(1) of the Code, and if not, (2) whether the acquisition of Y and Z stock pursuant to a statutory merger under section 368(a)(1)(A) is an acquisition of control within the meaning of section 269(a)(1).

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 269(a) of the Code provides that if—

> (1) any person or persons acquire, or acquired on or after October 8, 1940, directly or indirectly, control of a corporation, or
> (2) any corporation acquires, or acquired on or after October 8, 1940, directly or indirectly, property of another corporation, not controlled, directly or indirectly, immediately before such acquisition, by such acquiring corporation or its stockholders, the basis of which property in the hands of the acquiring corporation, is determined by reference to the basis in the hands of the transferor corporation, and the principal purpose for which such acquisition was made is evasion or avoidance of federal income tax by securing the benefit of a deduction, credit, or other allowance that such person or corporation would otherwise enjoy, then the Secretary may disallow such deduction, credit, or other allowance. For purposes of paragraphs (1) and (2), control means the ownership of stock possessing at least 50 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or at least 50 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of the corporation.

Section 1.269-2(b) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that amounts otherwise constituting a deduction, credit, or other allowance will be disallowed under section 269 of the Code when the effect of the deduction, credit or other allowance would be to distort the liability of the taxpayer when the "essential nature" of the transaction or situation is examined in the light of the basic purpose or plan that the deduction, credit or other allowance was designed by the Congress to effectuate.

Section 1.269-3 of the regulations provides that if either section 269 (a)(1) or (a)(2) of the Code is applicable because the principal purpose of the acquisition was to evade or avoid federal income tax, it is immaterial by what method or by what conjunction of events the benefit was sought.

In Brick Milling Company v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1963-305, during 1956 two brothers acquired direct control of a manufacturing corporation that had net operating losses for several years before the acquisition. About a year before the acquisition, the brothers incorporated their family partnership, which operated several mills in the same area as the acquired manufacturing corporation. On October 23, 1957, the brothers transferred their stock in the manufacturing corporation to the milling corporation, which immediately liquidated the manufacturing corporation and received all of its assets in distribution. For its taxable years ending March 31, 1958, and 1959, the milling corporation deducted the net operating losses of the manufacturing corporation. The losses were disallowed under section 269 of the Code.

The court found that since the brothers had control of both corporations prior to the liquidation of one into the other, section 269(a)(2) of the Code was inapplicable. The milling corporation contended that section 269(a)(1) was also inapplicable because it had indirect control of the liquidated manufacturing corporation prior to the contribution of that corporation's stock to its capital by the brothers. The pre-existing indirect control purportedly arose because the stock ownership of the brothers in the liquidated corporation should be attributed to the milling corporation. As a result, the milling corporation contended that it did not acquire control of the liquidated corporation immediately prior to the liquidation. In reply, the court said that the attribution rules of section 318 do not apply in determining control within the meaning of section 269 because section 318 applies only to subchapter C of the Code and section 269 is in subchapter B. No other provisions of the Code would attribute ownership of the manufacturing corporation stock to the milling corporation. The court also said that section 269 applies to the acquisition of control of one corporation by another corporation even if both are owned by the same shareholder. The court held, therefore, that section 269 (a)(1) applied to the acquisition by the milling corporation of the controlling stock interest of the manufacturing corporation.

In the present situation, M directly owned only 45 percent of X and thereby indirectly owned only 45 percent of Y and Z before the merger. The 10 percent interest in X held by A cannot be attributed to M because there are no rules of constructive ownership of stock expressly made applicable to section 269 of the Code.

Further, while the merger may properly be characterized as a transfer of property for purposes of section 368 (a)(1)(A) of the Code, this characterization does not limit the application of section 269(a)(1). Section 269 (a)(1) refers to the acquisition of control of a corporation. It is immaterial how that control is acquired. In the present situation, X transferred all of the stock of Y and Z to M. Thus, the essential nature of the transaction is that M acquired control of Y and Z upon the merger of X into M.

HOLDING

Because the X stock owned by A is not attributed to M, M did not have control of X, Y, or Z within the meaning of section 269(a)(1) of the Code before the merger of X into M. Therefore, M acquired control of Y and Z, the subsidiaries of X, within the meaning of section 269(a)(1).

Section 274.—Disallowance of Certain Entertainment, Etc., Expenses

26 CFR 1.274-5: Substantiation requirements.
(Also Section 162; 1.162-17.)

Travel expenses; reimbursements or per diem and mileage allowances. For taxable years beginning after 1978, reimbursement arrangements or per diem allowances for travel away from home not exceeding the greater of $44 per day, or the maximum authorized to be paid by the Federal Government in the locality in which the travel is performed, and a mileage allowance not exceeding 18.5 cents per mile for transportation paid by employers to employees will be regarded as satisfying the substantiation and adequate accounting requirements of sections 1.162-17(b) and 1.274-5 of the regulations; Rev. Ruls. 74-433 and 77-410 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-62

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to update Rev. Rul. 74-433, 1974-2 C.B. 92, as modified by Rev. Rul. 77-410, 1977-2 C.B. 85, to provide rules for the substantiation of expenditures for ordinary and necessary business expenses for subsistence of an employee traveling away from home and ordinary and necessary expenses of transportation whether or not traveling away from home that most nearly represent present reasonable limits in light of current costs.

Section 274(d) of the Internal Revenue Code and section 1.274-5 of the Income Tax Regulations, provide rules for the substantiation of business expenditures for travel, and for reimbursement arrangements or per diem allowances for ordinary and necessary expenses of an employee traveling away from home (exclusive of transportation costs to and from destination), and mileage allowances for similar transportation expenses. Under the authority granted to the Commissioner by section 1.274-5(f) of the regulations, such arrangements or allowances that are in accordance with reasonable business practices may be regarded (1) as equivalent to substantiation by adequate records or other sufficient evidence of the amount of such traveling expenses for purposes of section 1.274-5(c), and (2) as satisfying the requirements of an adequate accounting to an employer with respect to such amounts for purposes of section 1.274-5(e).

Pursuant to such authority, it is held as follows:

If, in the case of expenses for travel away from home (exclusive of costs of transportation to and from destination), an employer reimburses employees for subsistence or provides the employees with a per diem allowance in lieu of subsistence in an amount that does not exceed the greater of (1) $44 per day or (2) the maximum per diem rate authorized to be paid by the Federal Government in the locality in which the travel is performed, such reimbursements and allowances shall be deemed substantiated within the meaning of section 1.274-5(c) of the regulations if (1) the employer reasonably limits payment of such travel expenses to those that are ordinary and necessary in the conduct of the trade or business and (2) the elements of time, place, and business purposes of travel are substantiated in accordance with paragraphs (b)(2) and (c) (other than subparagraph (2)(iii)(a) thereof) of section 1.274-5.

The district director will determine whether an employer reasonably limits the payment of expenses for travel away from home to such expenses as are ordinary and necessary in the conduct of trade or business by (1) in the case of reimbursements for actual subsistence expenses, determining whether the employer maintains adequate internal audit controls, such as requiring an employee's expense account to be verified and approved by a responsible person other than the employee incurring the expense, and (2) in the case of per diem allowances in lieu of subsistence, determining whether the employer's travel allowance practices are based on reasonably accurate estimates of travel costs, including recognition of cost variances encountered in different localities. If the amount of traveling expenses away from home is deemed substantiated for purposes of section 1.274-5(c) of the regulations, the adequate accounting requirements of section 1.274-5(e) shall be deemed satisfied.

As used in this revenue ruling, the term "subsistence" includes, but is not limited to, reasonable travel expenses for meals and lodging, laundry, cleaning and pressing of clothing, and fees and tips for services, such as for waiters and baggage handlers. The term "subsistence" does not include taxicab fares or the costs of telegrams or telephone calls.

If a fixed mileage allowance not exceeding 18.5 cents per mile is used by an employer in payment of an employee's ordinary and necessary expenses of transportation while traveling away from home and the elements of time, place, and business purpose of the travel are substantiated in accordance with paragraphs (b)(2) and (c) (other than subparagraph (2)(iii)(a) thereof) of section 1.274-5 of the regulations, such an allowance shall be deemed as satisfying, with respect to such travel amounts, the substantiation requirements of section 1.274-5(c) and the adequate accounting requirements of section 1.274-5(e). Also, if an employer grants an allowance not exceeding 18.5 cents per mile to an employee for ordinary and necessary transportation expenses not involving travel away from home, such an arrangement shall be considered to be an accounting to the employer within the meaning of section 1.162-17(b). However, an employer may grant an additional allowance for parking fees and tolls attributable to the traveling and transportation expenses as separate items.

Pursuant to section 1.274-5(e)(2) of the regulations if an employee, under a travel expense arrangement or allowance practice discussed above, receives an amount from an employer equal to the deductible business expenses (that do not include personal, living, or family expenses or travel expenses disallowed by section 274(c) of the Code), the employee need not report such reimbursement in gross income.

If an employee, under a travel expense arrangement or allowance practice discussed above, receives an amount from an employer in excess of the deductible business expenses (that is, expenses which do not include personal, living, or family expenses or travel expenses disallowed by section 274(c) of the Code), the employee must report such excess amount in gross income.

If an employee, under a travel expense arrangement or allowance practice discussed above, receives an amount from an employer less than the deductible business expenses (that do not include personal, living, or family expenses or travel expenses disallowed by section 274(c) of the Code), and the employee wants to claim a deduction for such excess expenses, the employee must report the reimbursements in gross income and claim deductions for all the ordinary and necessary business expenses.

The provisions of this revenue ruling relating to reimbursement arrangements or per diem allowances will not apply in any case when an employer and an employee are related within the meaning of section 267(b) of the Code, but for this purpose the percentage of ownership interest referred to in section 267(b)(2) shall be 10 percent.

With respect to expenses paid or incurred after December 31, 1978, this Revenue Ruling supersedes Rev. Rul. 74-433 and Rev. Rul. 77-410.

Section 401.—Qualified Pension, Profit-Sharing, and Stock Bonus Plans

26 CFR 1.401-1: Qualified pension, profit-sharing and stock bonus plans.
(Also Section 410; 1.410(b)-1.)

Coverage; participation limited; employee election. A plan will not fail to qualify under section 401(a) of the Code merely because it denies participation to employees who do not authorize salary withholding or take a physical examination to determine eligibility for life insurance, so long as these provisions do not result in discrimination and are applied in a nondiscriminatory manner.

Rev. Rul. 80-47

The purpose of this Revenue Ruling is to update and restate Rev. Rul. 71-312, 1971-2 C.B. 187, and Rev. Rul. 74-96, 1974-1 C.B. 92, in view of the enactment of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1.

The issue in Rev. Rul. 71-312 and Rev. Rul. 74-96 is whether a pension plan will fail to qualify under section 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code merely because employees are required to take certain specified actions as a condition of participation.

The plan of a corporation provides that all participants shall contribute a stated percentage of their compensation. The employee contributions, plus a portion of the employer's contributions, are used to provide incidental life insurance protection on the lives of insurable participants. The plan also provides that an employee shall become a participant only after signing a prescribed form authorizing salary withholding in accordance with the plan and taking a physical examination to determine eligibility for life insurance coverage. However, an employee who authorizes salary withholding and takes the physical examination is not barred from participation merely because that person is found to be uninsurable.

The plan further requires that all employees be informed at the time of their employment of their eligibility to participate in the plan and of the conditions for eligibility. Any employee who has not complied with the eligibility conditions within 30 days after the date of employment must then be given written notification of eligibility to participate in the plan and of the necessity for signing the prescribed salary withholding form and taking the physical examination. This written notice must also inform the employee that failure to sign the form or take the examination will prevent participation in the plan.

The plan further provides that any employee who does not sign the form or take the physical examination within six months after receiving this written notification, in accordance with the terms of the plan, will be barred from participation.

Section 410(b) of the Code and section 1.410(b)-1 of the Income Tax Regulations provide that a qualified plan must benefit a certain percentage of employees as set forth in section 410(b)(1)(A) or, as provided in section 410(b)(1)(B), if a classification is set up by the employer, it must not discriminate in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, or highly compensated.

Thus, the qualification requirements of section 410(b)(1) of the Code may be met even though a plan provides for denial of participation for failure to enter the plan upon becoming eligible, if it can be shown that the provisions do not discriminate in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, or highly compensated. Further such provisions must be applied in a nondiscriminatory manner.

Accordingly, this plan does not fail to qualify under section 401(a) of the Code merely because it denies participation to employees who do not authorize salary withholding or take a physical examination, so long as these provisions do not result in discrimination in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, or highly compensated, and so long as such provisions are applied in a nondiscriminatory manner.

The same result would also apply with respect to a qualified plan which limits participation to employees who have elected to have amounts withheld from their salaries to purchase annuity contracts on their behalf.

The principles and conclusion stated herein are applicable to plans described in section 410(c) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 71-312 is modified and superseded. Rev. Rul. 74-96 is superseded because the position stated therein is restated under current law in this Revenue Ruling.

Section 451.—General Rule for Taxable Year of Inclusion

26 CFR 1.451-1: General rule for taxable year of inclusion.
(Also Section 636; 1.636-1.)

Mineral production payments; gas; "take or pay" purchase contract. Payments received for gas that is to be taken in the future under a "take or pay" gas purchase contract are not mineral production payments under section 636(a) of the Code and are includible in gross income under the provisions of section 451.

Rev. Rul. 80-48

ISSUE

Are the payments received by the taxpayer for gas, to be taken in the future under a "take or pay" gas purchase contract, mineral production payments for federal income tax purposes under section 636(a) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

The taxpayer sells gas to corporation Y under the provisions of a "take or pay" gas purchase contract.

Under the provisions of the contract, corporation Y purchases a specified amount of gas from the taxpayer each month. However, corporation Y is not obligated to take such monthly production.

The contract provides that the taxpayer will receive monthly payments from Y based upon a predetermined production schedule, whether or not Y takes the monthly production. To the extent the taxpayer receives payments from Y in excess of the production taken by Y, a deficiency in the "take" exists. Y has the right during any of the subsequent years of the 20 year contract life to make up any deficiency by taking production in excess of the monthly scheduled production.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 451 of the Code provides that the amount of any item of gross income shall be included in the gross income for the taxable year in which received by the taxpayer, unless, under the method of accounting used in computing taxable income, such amount is to be properly accounted for as of a different period.

Section 1.451-5(g) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that a transaction that is treated as creating a mortgage loan pursuant to section 636 of the Code and the regulations thereunder rather than as a sale shall not be considered a "sale or other disposition" within the meaning of section 1.451-5(a)(1).

Consequently, any payment received pursuant to such a transaction, that would otherwise qualify as an "advance payment," will not be treated as an "advance payment."

Section 1.636-3(a)(1) of the regulations states that the term "production payment" for purposes of section 636 of the Code means a right to a specified share of the production from mineral in place, if, as, and when produced, or the proceeds from such production. Such right must be an economic interest in such mineral in place.

An economic interest is defined in section 1.611-1(b) of the regulations as being possessed in every case in which the taxpayer has acquired by investment any interest in mineral in place and secures, by any form of legal relationship, income derived from the extraction of the mineral, to which the taxpayer must look for a return of its capital. An agreement between the owner of an economic interest and another entitling the latter to purchase the product upon production does not convey a depletable economic interest in mineral in place.

The taxpayer, in this case, entered into an agreement with Y under the terms of which Y must purchase each month, for the life of the contract, a specified amount of gas. However, Y need not take the gas. Under the provisions of section 1.611-1(b) of the regulations such an agreement does not convey a depletable economic interest in mineral in place.

HOLDING

The payments received for gas to be taken in the future under a "take or pay" gas purchase contract are not mineral production payments for federal income tax purposes under the provisions of section 636(a) of the Code. Consequently, the payments received are includible in gross income under the provisions of section 451.

Barter club transactions. A barter club uses credit units to credit or debit members' accounts for goods or services provided or received. As soon as units are credited to a member's account, the member may use them to purchase goods or services or may sell or transfer the units to other members. The value of credit units received is includible in the gross incomes of members for the taxable year in which the units are credited to their accounts. The dollar value of units received for services by an employee of the club, who may use the units in the same manner as other members, is includible in gross income for the taxable year in which received and is wages for purposes of the FICA, the FUTA, and income tax withholding.

Rev. Rul. 80-52

ISSUE

What is the amount includible in gross income as a result of the bartering transactions described below, and when is the amount includible in gross income?

FACTS

A and B are both members of a barter club. The barter club operates as a vehicle for the exchange of property and services among the members. The club uses "credit units" as a medium of exchange and makes available to members information concerning property and services other members are offering for exchange. The club debits or credits members' accounts for goods or services received from or rendered to other members. Exchanges are made on the basis that one credit unit equals one dollar of value. The rules of the club require that the value placed on goods or services exchanged be equal to the member seller's normal retail price. The transfer of credit units between members is accomplished by various source documents, such as invoices, and the club charges the member purchaser a 10 percent commission payable in cash on barter purchases. Any barter transaction between members is reflected in the form of bookkeeping entries on the books and records of the club. The club does not guarantee that a member will be able to use all of that member's credit units and does not pay a member cash for any credit units not used. However, a member's credit units can be used immediately to purchase goods or services offered by other members of the club, and the member may transfer or sell the member's credit units to another member of the club.

Situation 1. Both A and B use the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting. Through the club, A bartered to B for 200 credit units services that A would normally perform for $200. During the same taxable year, B bartered to A for 200 credit units services that B would normally perform for $200.

Situation 2. C is an employee of the barter club. During the taxable year, C, who uses the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting, received from the club in exchange for C's services gross wages of $20,000, $10,000 in cash and 10,000 credit units. C is entitled to use the credit units in the same manner as other members of the club. However, the club does not charge C a commission on C's barter purchases.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code and regulations thereunder provide that, except as otherwise provided by law, gross income means all income from whatever source derived.

Section 1.61-1 of the Income Tax Regulations provides, in part, that gross income includes income realized in any form, whether in money, property, or services.

Section 1.61-2(d)(1) of the regulations provides that, if services are paid for other than in money, the fair market value of the property or services taken in payment must be included in income as compensation.

Sections 3121(a), 3306(b), and 3401(a) of the Code provide that the term "wages" means all remuneration for services performed by an employee for the employee's employer, including the cash value of all remuneration paid in any medium other than cash.

Section 451 of the Code provides that the amount of any item of gross income is includible in the gross income for the taxable year in which received by the taxpayer, unless, under the method of accounting used in computing taxable income, such amount is to be properly accounted for as of a different period.

Section 1.451-1(a) of the regulations provides that income is includible in gross income for the taxable year in which it is actually or constructively received by the taxpayer, unless it is includible in a different year in accordance with the taxpayer's method of accounting.

Rev. Rul. 70-331, 1970-1 C.B. 14, concerns "prize points" that are earned by salespersons and are redeemable for merchandise prizes listed in a catalog. That revenue ruling holds that the fair market value of the prize points awarded to a salesperson who uses the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting is includible in the salesperson's gross income when the prize points are paid or otherwise made available to the salesperson, whichever is earlier. The prize points in Rev. Rul. 70-331 and the credit units in this revenue ruling both represent payment for services in a form other than money.

In this case A, B, and C received income in the form of a valuable right represented by credit units that can be used immediately to purchase goods or services offered by other members of the barter club. There are no restrictions on their use of the credit units because A, B, and C are free to use the credit units to purchase goods or services when the credit units are credited to their accounts.

HOLDINGS

Situation 1. A and B must include $200 in their gross incomes for the taxable year in which the credit units are credited to their accounts. If A and B were merchants who used the accrual method of accounting and bartered goods to one another, $200 would be includible in their gross receipts.

Situation 2. C must include $20,000 in C's gross income for the taxable year. For federal employment tax purposes, the $20,000 is wages under sections 3121(a), 3306(b), and 3401(a) of the Code.

If the commission paid to the barter club by a member purchaser was paid to acquire an item for use in connection with the member purchaser's trade or business, the amount of the commission is deductible as a business expense under section 162 of the Code, provided the item received in the barter transaction meets the requirements of that section. If the commission was paid to acquire a capital item, the amount of the commission must be capitalized pursuant to section 263. If the commission was paid to acquire an item for personal purposes, the amount of the commission is not deductible, pursuant to section 262.

Where members of a barter club exchange goods and services directly with one another and no credit units are received, see Rev. Rul. 79-24, 1979-1 C.B. 60.

Oil and gas leases; first year payments. Examples illustrate certain first year payments made by a lessee upon obtaining an oil and gas lease that are delay rentals that may be capitalized or expensed at the election of the lessee or are lease bonuses that must be capitalized; Rev. Ruls. 56-252 and 67-25 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-49

ISSUE

Whether, under the various factual situations described below, first year payments made by a lessee upon obtaining an oil and gas lease on tracts of land are delay rentals that may be capitalized or expensed in the year paid at the election of the lessee, rental payments that are ordinary and necessary business expenses in the year paid or incurred, or lease bonuses that must be capitalized.

FACTS

The taxpayer bid competitively for federal oil and gas leases, filed entries under the simultaneous filing procedure for noncompetitive leasing of federal oil and gas lands, and leased oil and gas properties from private individuals.

The various situations in which the taxpayer makes first year payments when leasing oil and gas properties are as follows:

Situation 1. Under the competitive bidding procedure, the leases are awarded to the bidder offering the largest bonus for a specified lease. The taxpayer when awarded the lease is required to pay the Bureau of Land Management any unpaid balance of the bonus, and also a payment designated as first year rental. Each year thereafter a similar rental payment is due on the anniversary date of the lease unless a discovery has been made or the lease terminated.

Situation 2. Under the simultaneous filing procedure for noncompetitive leasing of federal lands, a nonrefundable filing fee must accompany each lease application. The successful applicant is determined by lottery. The taxpayer, when awarded the lease, is required to make a first year rental payment. Similar payments will be due on the anniversary date of the lease unless a discovery has been made or the lease terminated.

Situation 3. The taxpayer negotiates for an oil and gas lease with a private individual for a term of three years. The terms of the lease require a bonus payment. A yearly payment designated as rent is required to be made at the end of the first year and, if drilling has not then commenced, at the end of each succeeding year of the primary term of the lease.

Situation 4. The taxpayer negotiates for an oil and gas lease with a private individual for a term of three years. The terms of the lease require a bonus payment. An additional payment, designated as rent, is required to be made at the time the lease is signed. The additional payment extends for two years the primary term of the lease.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1.162-1 of the Income Tax enue Code provides that there shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business.

Section 1.162-1 of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the business expenses deductible under section 162 of the Code include the ordinary and necessary expenditures directly connected with or pertaining to the taxpayer's trade or business.

Section 1.612-3(a)(3) of the regulations provides that lessee's payment of a bonus is a capital investment made to acquire an economic interest in a mineral deposit and is recoverable through the allowance for depletion.

Section 1.612-3(c)(1) of the regulations defines "delay rental" as payments made for the privilege of deferring development of the property that can be avoided by abandoning the lease, commencing development operations, or by obtaining production.

Section 1.612-3(c)(2) of the regulations provides that a delay rental is in the nature of rent and that the payor may, by election, deduct such amount as an expense or charge it to a depletable capital account.

In distinguishing a delay rental from a bonus in Fitzsimmons v. Commissioner, 37 T.C. 179 (1961), the court held that when payments designated as rentals could not be avoided by drilling, the leasing instrument did not indicate such payments were for delay in drilling, and the payments were greater than the sums provided for delay in drilling, such payments were in the nature of a bonus paid in installments.

The first year payments designated as rentals in the federal leasing transactions are in substance the same as the succeeding delay rental payments. United States v. Dougan, 214 F.2d 511 (10th Cir. 1954); Commissioner v. Miller, 227 F.2d 326 (9th Cir. 1956); and Featherstone v. Commissioner, 22 T.C. 763 (1954).

The first year payments in situations 1 and 2 are in substance delay rentals and not payable for subsequent years if the lessee abandons the lease for which such rentals were paid or obtains production on the lease.

In addition, those payments in situations 1, 3, and 4 that are designated as bonuses are for the right to enter upon and explore for oil and gas and therefore are bonuses within the meaning of section 1.612-3(a)(3). Bonuses are capital investments that must be recovered through the deduction for depletion.

The payment in situation 3 that extends the time period within which the lessee must commence drilling of a well is a delay rental.

The additional payment in situation 4, designated as rent by lessee, extends the primary term of the lease and therefore is a bonus. Bonuses are capital investments for federal income tax purposes.

HOLDINGS

In situation 1 above, the lessee must capitalize the bonus paid. The first year rental payment may, at the lessee's option, be capitalized or expensed in the year paid or incurred.

In situation 2, the lessee must capitalize the filing fee. The first year rental may, at the lessee's option, be capitalized or expensed in the year paid or incurred.

In situation 3, the lessee must capitalize the bonus paid and may elect to capitalize or expense the delay rental payment.

In situation 4, the lessee must capitalize the initial bonus and the additional payment.

Section 851.—Definition of Regulated Investment Company

26 CFR 1.851-2: Limitations.
(Also Section 856; 1.856-2.)

Regulated investment company or real estate investment trust; short taxable year; quarters. In the case of short taxable year, the phrase "at the close of each quarter of the taxable year" in sections 851(b)(4) and 856(c)(5) of the Code refers to quarterly periods that end, to the extent possible, on the same dates as the quarters of a 12-month year, even though the use of 3-month quarters may result in one quarter of less than three months.

Rev. Rul. 80-50

ISSUE

In the case of an 8 month taxable year, does the phrase "at the close of each quarter of the taxable year" in section 851(b)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code refer to 3 or 4 quarters and when do the quarters end?

FACTS

Corporation A, which currently has a taxable year ending April 30, received permission to change its accounting period to the calendar year. This change will require a return for the short taxable year beginning May 1, 1979 and ending December 31, 1979. It is A's intent to qualify and elect to be treated as a regulated investment company under subchapter M (sections 851-855) of the Code for the short taxable year and for future taxable years. A did not qualify as a regulated investment company for any prior taxable period.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 851(b)(4)(A) of the Code states the general rule that at the close of each quarter of the taxable year at least 50 percent of the value of a regulated investment company's total assets must be represented by cash and cash items, Government securities, securities of other regulated investment companies and other securities limited in respect of any one issuer to an amount not greater in value than 5 percent of the value of the investment company's total assets and to not more than 10 percent of such issuer's outstanding voting securities.

Section 851(b)(4)(B) of the Code imposes additional quarterly limitations on concentrating investments. Section 851(d) provides that a regulated investment company has 30 days after the end of a quarter to eliminate any discrepancy between the requirements of section 851(b)(4) and the value of its various investments that existed at the end of the quarter.

A mere change of accounting period should not result in A's being subjected to more stringent diversification testing. A stricter testing would occur if the 8-month year were divided into 4 quarters that are each 2 months long. The diversification testing would be done at shorter intervals than usual and some financial statement preparation dates would be dates as of which financial statements are not usually prepared.

In the case of a 12-month year, diversification testing of regulated investment companies is done at the end of each quarter of the year, usually a 3-month period. The 3-month testing scheme can best be adapted to a taxpayer's short year by having such quarters end, to the extent possible, on the same dates as a 12-month year. Although the use of 3-month quarters may result in 1 quarter of less than 3 months in the short year, it would be less disruptive of the diversification testing than simply dividing a short year into 4 equal parts and it would still satisfy the objective of the testing requirement.

HOLDING

The short taxable year beginning May 1, 1979 and ending on December 31, 1979, will have three quarterly periods ending on June 30 (2 months long), September 30 (3 months long), and December 31 (3 months long). The holding in this revenue ruling is also applicable to real estate investment trusts in applying section 856(c)(5) of the Code.

Terminal handling charges paid by the U.S. Postal Service to scheduled certificated air carriers for services in connection with handling mail at the airport are not subject to the tax imposed by section 4271(a) of the Code; Rev. Rul. 74-512 revoked.

Rev. Rul. 80-53

Rev. Rul. 74-512, 1974-2 C.B. 371, holds that certain charges paid by the United States Postal Service to scheduled certificated air carriers for services in connection with handling mail at the airport are subject to the tax imposed by section 4271(a) of the Internal Revenue Code on amounts paid for the transportation of property by air.

Treasury and the Postal Service consulted with the Department of Justice as to the taxability of amounts paid by the Postal Service for these terminal handling charges. The Department of Justice concluded that the charges paid by the Postal Service were accessorial non-taxable charges because under the facts involved in the particular case it was held that (1) the charges were not for services that could only be provided by the air carrier and (2) the charges were separately stated.

Accordingly, Rev. Rul. 74-512 is hereby revoked.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 61, SUBCHAPTER B, PART 404.—TEMPORARY REGULATIONS ON PROCEDURE AND ADMINISTRATION UNDER THE TAX REFORM ACT OF 1976

Disclosure of returns and return information in connection with procurement of property and services for tax administration purposes

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary Regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains amendments to the temporary regulations relating to the disclosure under section 6103(n) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 of returns and return information in connection with the processing, storage, transmission, and reproduction of the returns and return information, and the programming, maintenance, repair, testing, and procurement of equipment, for purposes of tax administration. These amendments extend to other bureaus and offices of the Treasury Department and to State tax agencies, bodies, and commissions described in section 6103(d) of the Code the authority to make these disclosures under section 6103(n) for Federal and State tax administration purposes, respectively. They affect all disclosures by the Treasury Department and State tax agencies, bodies, or commissions to persons described in section 6103(n). The regulations apply to disclosures of returns and return information after December 31, 1976.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains amendments to the temporary regulations relating to disclosure of returns and return information under section 6103 (n) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 as added by section 1202 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (Pub. L. 94-455, 90 Stat. 1681) [1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1].

Section 6103(n) of the Code authorizes the disclosure, pursuant to Treasury regulations, of returns and return information to the extent necessary in connection with the processing, storage, transmission, and reproduction of the returns and return information, and the programming, maintenance, repair, testing, and procurement of equipment, for purposes of tax administration. Section 6103(b)(4) defines "tax administration" to include the administration of the internal revenue laws and statutes of a State.

Existing § 404.6103(n)-1 of the temporary regulations authorizes disclosures under section 6103(n) only by the Internal Revenue Service and its Chief Counsel's office for Federal tax administration purposes. Because section 6103(n) authorizes disclosures of returns and return information by other bureaus and offices of the Treasury Department and by State tax agencies, bodies, and commissions for Federal and State tax administration purposes as well, these amendments to § 404.6103(n)-1 would so extend this disclosure authority.

WAIVER OF PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENT OF TREASURY DIRECTIVE

There is need for expeditious adoption of the regulations contained in this document in order to prevent impairment of the present ability of the Treasury Department and State tax agencies, bodies, and commissions to satisfactorily administer Federal and State tax laws. For this reason, Jerome Kurtz, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, has determined that the provisions of paragraphs 8 through 14 of the Treasury Directive implementing Executive Order 12044 must be waived.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation was David E. Dickinson of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

In order to amend the Temporary Regulations on Procedure and Administration (26 CFR Part 404) to allow for certain disclosures by bureaus and offices of the Treasury Department and by an agency, body, or commission described in section 6103(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 for purposes described in section 6103(n) of the Code, paragraphs (a), (b), and (d) of § 404.6103(n)-1 of such regulations are amended, and a new paragraph (e) is added immediately after paragraph (d). These amended paragraphs and the added paragraph read as follows:

§ 404.6103(n)-1 Disclosure of returns and return information in connection with procurement of property and services for tax administration purposes.

(a) General rule. Pursuant to the provisions of section 6103(n) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and subject to the requirements of paragraphs (b), (c), and (d) of this section, officers or employees of the Treasury Department or a State tax agency are authorized to disclose returns and return information (as defined in section 6103(b)) to any person (including, in the case of the Treasury Department, any person described in section 7513(a)), or to an officer or employee of such person, to the extent necessary in connection with contractual procurement of—

(1) Equipment or other property, or

(2) Services relating to the processing, storage, transmission, or reproduction of such returns or return information, or to the programming, maintenance, repair, or testing of equipment or other property, for purposes of tax administration (as defined in section 6103(b)(4)). No person, or officer or employee of such person, to whom a return or return information is disclosed by an officer or employee of the Treasury Department or the State tax agency under the authority of this paragraph shall in turn disclose such return or return information for any purpose other than as described in this paragraph, and no such further disclosure for any such described purpose shall be made by such person, officer, or employee to anyone, other than another officer or employee of such person whose duties or reponsibilities require such disclosure for a purpose described in this paragraph, without written approval by the Internal Revenue Service.

(b) Limitations. For purposes of paragraph (a) of this section, disclosure of returns or return information in connection with contractual procurement of property or services described in such paragraph will be treated as necessary only if such procurement or the performance of such services cannot otherwise be reasonably, properly, or economically carried out or performed without such disclosure. Thus, for example, disclosures of returns or return information to employees of a contractor for purposes of programming, maintaining, repairing, or testing computer equipment used by the Internal Revenue Service or a State tax agency should be made only if such services cannot be reasonably, properly or economically performed by use of information or other data in a form which does not identify a particular taxpayer. If, however, disclosure of returns or return information is in fact necessary in order for such employee to reasonably, properly, or economically perform the computer related services, such disclosures should be restricted to returns or return information selected or appearing at random. Further, for purposes of paragraph (a) disclosure of returns or return information in connection with the contractual procurement of property or services described in such paragraph should be made only to the extent necessary to reasonably, properly, or economically conduct such procurement activity.

Thus, for example, if an activity described in paragraph (a) can be reasonably, properly, and economically conducted by disclosure of only parts or portions of a return or if deletion of taxpayer identity information (as defined in section 6103(b)(6)) reflected on a return would not seriously impair the ability of the contractor or his officers or employees to conduct the activity, then only such parts or portions of the return, or only the return with taxpayer identity information deleted, should be disclosed.

(d) Safeguards. Any person to whom a return or return information is disclosed as authorized by paragraph (a) of this section shall comply with all applicable conditions and requirements which may be prescribed by the Internal Revenue Service for the purposes of protecting the confidentiality of returns and return information and preventing disclosures of returns or return information in a manner unauthorized by paragraph (a). The terms of any contract between the Treasury Department or a State tax agency and a person pursuant to which a return or return information is or may be disclosed for a purpose described in paragraph (a) shall provide, or shall be amended to provide, that such person, and officers and employees of the person, shall comply with all such applicable conditions and restrictions as may be prescribed by the Internal Revenue Service by regulation, published rules or procedures, or written communication to such person. If the Service determines that any person, or an officer or employee of any such person, to whom returns or return information has been disclosed as provided in paragraph (a) has failed to, or does not, satisfy such prescribed conditions or requirements, the Service may take such actions as are deemed necessary to ensure that such conditions or requirements are or will be satisfied, including—

(1) Suspension or termination of any duty or obligation arising under a contract with the Treasury Department referred to in this paragraph or suspension of disclosures by the Treasury Department otherwise authorized by paragraph (a) of this section, or

(2) Suspension of further disclosures of returns or return information by the Service to the State tax agency, until the Service determines that such conditions and requirements have been or will be satisfied.

(e) Definitions. For purposes of this section—

(1) The term "Treasury Department" includes the Internal Revenue Service and the Office of the Chief Counsel for the Internal Revenue Service, and

(2) The term "State tax agency" means an agency, body, or commission described in section 6103(d).

Because there is need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision, it is found impracticable to issue it with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitations of subsection (b) of that section.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in sections 6103(n) and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (90 Stat. 1681, 68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 6103(n), 7805).

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I

Removal of Statutory Sections from Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document removes from Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations those regulation sections which recite verbatim provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The purpose of this document is to complete the process, initiated about 2 years ago, of removing Internal Revenue Code provisions from Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations. The reproduction of Code provisions in Title 26 is considered to be unnecessary and their removal will significantly reduce the volume of Internal Revenue Service regulations. No substantive changes in the rules is intended by this document. Certain conforming changes to other sections of the regulations, made necessary by this removal of Code provisions, are also made.

DATE: These amendments to the regulations are effective January 25, 1980.

Part II. Treaties and Tax Legislation

Subpart A.—Tax Conventions

United States-France Income Tax Convention

1968-2 C.B. 691

France; research fellow. A French resident appointed as a research fellow to the faculty of an accredited university's medical school in the U.S. conducts basic research in the public interest under the school's direction and control in a laboratory located in a hospital associated with the school. The individual's compensation, although paid through the hospital under grants awarded by the National Institutes of Health, is exempt from federal income tax under Article 17 of the U.S.-France Income Tax Convention for a period not exceeding two years from the date of the individual's arrival in the U.S.

Rev. Rul. 80-51

ISSUE

Does Article 17 of the United States-France Income Tax Convention exempt the compensation received by a French resident from federal income tax under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

The taxpayer, a resident of France, is in the United States at the invitation of an accredited university's medical school to engage in scientific research. The taxpayer received an appointment to the faculty of the university's medical school as a Research Fellow in Medicine. The compensation to the taxpayer, who has a Ph.D. degree in a scientific field rather than an M.D., is paid through the university's hospital under grants awarded to the principal researchers by the National Institutes of Health.

The laboratory in which the taxpayer works is located in the hospital associated with the university's medical school. The work of the laboratory is entirely basic research in the public interest with no clinical activities or responsibilities. The university's medical school and not the university's hospital directs and controls the taxpayer's research activities.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Article 17 of the United States-France Income Tax Convention provides that an individual who is a resident of France and who visits the United States at the invitation of the United States Government or of a university or other accredited educational institution for the primary purpose of teaching or engaging in research or both, at a university or other accredited institution, shall be exempt from United States taxation on income from personal services for teaching or research at such educational institution for a period not exceeding 2 years from the date of arrival in the United States. Article 17 shall not apply to income from research not undertaken in the public interest.

In determining whether an individual is engaged in research at a university or other accredited educational institution for purposes of Article 17 of the Convention, it is necessary to determine by whom such individual is employed, the university or the hospital, because the hospital may not be an accredited educational institution. See Rev. Rul. 77-175, 1977-1 C.B. 415. Whether the research fellow in the subject case is determined to be an employee of the university or an employee of the hospital depends upon an examination of all the facts and circumstances pertaining to the relationship among the parties. An important factor is the right to control and direct an individual in the performance of the individual's work.

In the present situation, the hospital does not exercise control over the laboratory research performed by the taxpayer even though the laboratory is located in the university's hospital and the taxpayer's compensation is paid through the hospital from a grant from the National Institutes of Health. The taxpayer is performing research for, and is subject to the direction and control of the university medical school, an accredited educational institution.

HOLDING

Under Article 17 of the United States-France Income Tax Convention, the compensation received by the taxpayer for research services performed at the laboratory is exempt from United States income taxation for a period not exceeding 2 years from the date of the taxpayer's arrival in the United States.

Rev. Proc. 80-7

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide increased standard mileage rates under the simplified, optional method described below for employees or self-employed individuals to use in computing deductible costs of operating passenger automobiles (including vans, pickup, or panel trucks) for business purposes, or for taxpayers to use in computing deductions for transportation expenses relating to charitable contributions, medical expenses, or moving expenses.

A further purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide that, for this optional method, an automobile that has been used more than five years for business is considered to be fully depreciated unless the taxpayer has elected to depreciate the automobile over a shorter useful life.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

Rev. Proc. 74-23, 1974-2 C.B. 476, as updated by Rev. Proc. 77-40, 1977-2 C.B. 574, provides standard mileage rates for employeees and self-employed individuals who claim deductions for the costs of operating automobiles for business purposes. Rev. Proc. 74-24, 1974-2 C.B. 477, provides the standard mileage rate for computing the cost of rendering gratuitous services to a charitable organization or for transportation for medical care. Rev. Proc. 74-25, 1974-2 C.B. 477, provides the standard mileage rate for computing deductible costs of operating an automobile in connection with moving expenses. Rev. Proc. 75-3, 1975-1 C.B. 643, provides the standard mileage rate for automobiles that have been fully depreciated under the straight-line method of depreciation. Rev. Proc. 77-36, 1977-2 C.B. 568, clarified Rev. Proc. 74-23 to point out that interest and state and local taxes are deductible in addition to the amounts computed using the standard mileage rate.

Section 162(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that there shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business. Under that provision, an employee or self-employed individual may deduct the cost of operating a passenger automobile to the extent that it is used in a trade or business. However, under section 262, no portion of the operating cost that is attributable to personal use, rather than use for a business purpose, is deductible.

Section 1.162-17 of the Income Tax Regulations provides rules for the reporting of information on income tax returns relating to business expenses in connection with the performance of services as an employee and furnishes guidance as to the type of records that will be useful in compiling such information and in its substantiation, if required.

In order to relieve taxpayers from the necessity of maintaining detailed transportation expense records, employees or self-employed individuals may choose to compute the deductible costs of operating passenger automobiles for business purposes by a simplified, optional method that the Service will accept in examining income tax returns filed by such employees or self-employed individuals.

SEC. 3. OPTIONAL METHOD OF COMPUTING TRANSPORTATION EXPENSES BY AUTOMOBILE

.01 Business Expenses.

1 Standard mileage rate.

Subject to the conditions and limitations set forth below, with respect to transportation expenses paid or incurred after December 31, 1978, deductions will be accepted if computed at a standard mileage rate of (a) 18.5 cents per mile for the first 15,000 miles of use each year for business purposes, and (b) 10 cents per mile for use for business purposes in excess of 15,000 miles per year. Computation under this method is optional on a yearly basis.

A deduction computed under this method shall be in lieu of all operating and fixed costs of the automobile allocable to business purposes. Such items as depreciation, maintenance and repairs, tires, gasoline (including all taxes thereon), oil, insurance, and registration fees are included in operating and fixed costs. However, parking fees and tolls attributable to use for business purposes may be deducted as separate items.

The rates prescribed do not affect a deduction for interest relating to the purchase of the automobile that is allowable under section 163 of the Code, nor a deduction for state and local taxes (other than those included in the cost of gasoline) otherwise allowable under section 164. If the automobile is operated less than 100 percent for business purposes, an allocation is required to determine the business and nonbusiness portion of the taxes and interest deduction allowable. That portion of the allowable deduction for interest and state and local taxes attributable directly to the operation of the automobile for business purposes may be deducted from gross income in arriving at adjusted gross income by an employee under section 62(2)(C), and by a self-employed individual under section 62(1). The remaining portion of the interest and state and local taxes attributable to the nonbusiness use of the automobile may be deducted from adjusted gross income in arriving at taxable income provided the taxpayer itemizes deductions.

2 Limitations.

When an employee or a self-employed individual alternates in using different automobiles on different occasions for business purposes, the standard mileage rates apply to the total business mileage of such automobiles, as if they were one, to arrive at a deduction. Similarly, if an individual replaces an automobile during the year, the total business mileage for the year of both automobiles must be used, as if they were one, in applying the standard mileage rate.

The optional method is not acceptable for computing the deductible costs of (A) vehicles used for hire, such as taxicabs, or (B) two or more automobiles used simultaneously, such as in fleet operations.

In any year in which this optional method has been used, straight-line depreciation will be considered to have been allowed. The allowable depreciation will act to reduce the basis of the automobile in determining adjusted basis as required by section 1016(a) of the Code. This optional method may not be used if the automobile has previously been depreciated on a depreciation method other than straight-line, or if additional first-year depreciation has been claimed.

For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1979, an automobile used by a taxpayer who uses this optional method of computing costs of an automobile for business purposes is deemed to have a useful life of five years and the automobile will be considered to have become fully depreciated at the end of five years.

If, at any time during the period that the taxpayer uses the automobile for business purposes, the taxpayer computes and deducts the actual costs of all operating and fixed costs of the automobile for business purposes using a useful life of less than five years, the useful life of the automobile to that taxpayer is the estimated period on which the taxpayer bases the computation of the allowable straight-line depreciation deduction for that year. Thereafter, regardless of whether the taxpayer uses the "actual cost" method or this optional method for subsequent taxable years, the automobile will be considered fully depreciated at the end of the period estimated to be its useful life to that taxpayer.

With respect to automobiles that have been, or are considered to be, fully depreciated under the straight-line method, based upon their use for business purposes, deductions will be accepted if computed at a standard mileage rate of 10 cents per mile for all miles of use of such automobiles attributable to business purposes.

The optional method of computing transportation expenses provided by this section will be accepted in examining the return of an employee irrespective of whether the employee received a reimbursement or allowance for such business automobile expense from the employer, provided that such reimbursement or allowance is reflected in the return.

For this optional method of computing transportation expenses to be acceptable, an employee or self-employed individual is required to establish business mileage (A) for local transportation, in accordance with section 1.162-17(d) of the regulations, and (B) for other travel, in accordance with section 1.274-5. This revenue procedure operates in lieu of the provisions of such regulations relating to substantiation of the amount of an expenditure.

.02 Charitable, medical, or moving expenses.

A taxpayer who incurs costs of operating an automobile for transportation in connection with rendering gratuitous services to a charitable organization under section 170 of the Code, in connection with medical care under section 213, or for moving expenses under section 217 will be permitted to claim as a deduction the standard mileage rate of eight cents per mile, subject to the conditions and limitations set forth in these sections.

Because certain items, such as the proportionate share of general maintenance or general repairs, liability insurance, or depreciation, in connection with the use of an automobile, may not be taken into account in computing the amount paid for transportation with respect to the rendering of gratuitous services to charitable organizations or with respect to medical care or moving expenses, an individual may not use the same standard mileage rate as is permitted in section 3.01 of this revenue procedure.

The use of this optional method of computing transportation expenses is in lieu of any actual transportation expenses otherwise allowable under sections 170, 213 and 217 of the Code by reason of the use of a taxpayer's automobile for transportation. However, parking fees and tolls attributable to such transportation may be deducted as separate items. The use of this optional method does not affect a deduction for any expenses relating to the automobile that are allowable under section 163 (interest) or section 164 (taxes). Since depreciation may not be taken into account in determining the deduction for charitable contributions, medical expenses, or moving expenses, no adjustment to the basis of the automobile is required because of the use of this method.

The optional method of computing transportation expenses described in this section will be accepted by the Internal Revenue Service as being representative of the cost of operating an automobile for purposes of sections 170, 213, and 217 of the Code regardless of the method used to compute depreciation for business use of the automobile, and regardless of the number of automobiles that the taxpayer may have in operation.

.03 Actual expenses.

Use of the optional method of computing transportation expenses set out in this section is not mandatory and a taxpayer may use actual allowable expenses if records are maintained for proper substantiation.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Real estate investment trust; foreclosure; property value exceeding bid. A real estate investment trust that engaged primarily in short term financing activities, such as making construction and development loans, made a construction loan on which it later foreclosed. At the foreclosure sale the trust bid in the property for less than its fair market value. The trust's basis in the mortgage note exceeded the property's value, and the balance due on the note was wholly uncollectable. The gain realized by the trust, the difference between the fair market value of the property and the bid price, is ordinary income.

The trust accepted a deed in lieu of foreclosure when the fair market value of the property exceeded the trust's basis in the mortgage note. The gain realized by the trust, the difference between its basis in the note and the value of the property, is ordinary income, and such income qualifies under section 856(c)(2)(D) and (3)(C) of the Code.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on Subpart A, Tax Conventions and related Treasury Decisions and Revenue Rulings; Subpart B, Legislation and related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical Indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Price: $1.00 (single copy). Subscription price: $50.00 a year; $12.50 additional for foreign mailing.

Announcement Relating to Decisions of the Tax Court

It is the policy of the Internal Revenue Service to announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin at the earliest practicable date the determination of the Commissioner to acquiesce or not acquiesce in a decision of the Tax Court which disallows a deficiency in tax determined by the Commissioner to be due.

Notice that the Commissioner has acquiesced or nonacquiesced in a decision of the Tax Court relates only to the issues or issues decided adversely to the Government.

Actions of acquiescences in adverse decisions shall be relied on by Revenue officers and others concerned as conclusions of the Service only to the application of the law to the facts in the particular case. Caution should be exercised in extending the application of the decision to a similar case unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same, and consideration should be given to the effect of new legislation, regulations, and rulings as well as subsequent court decisions and actions thereon.

Acquiescence in a decision means acceptance by the Service of the conclusion reached, and does not necessarily mean acceptance and approval of any or all of the reasons assigned by the Court for its conclusions.

No announcements are made in the Bulletin with respect to memorandum opinions of the Tax Court.

The announcements published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletins are consolidated semiannually and annually. The semiannual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for July and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the first half of the year and the annual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for the following January and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the last half of the year.

Section 163.—Interest

Investment interest; net lease property; contract with HUD. The owner and operator of an apartment complex received direct payments under a contract with the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), under section 8 of the National Housing Act, for providing low income housing. The net lease provisions of section 163(d)(4)(A)(ii) of the Code do not apply and the income and expenses from such units are not subjected to the interest limitations imposed by section 163(d)(1).

Rev. Rul. 80-54

ISSUE

Under the circumstances described below, are certain apartment units owned and operated by the taxpayer property subject to the net lease provisions of section 163(d) (4) (A) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS AND LAW

The taxpayer, an individual, is the owner and operator of an apartment complex. Pursuant to section 8 of the National Housing Act, as amended, 12 U.S.C.A. section 1701 (Supp. 1978), the taxpayer entered into a five year contract with the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) with regard to a certain number of apartments in the complex.

Section 8 of the Act provides for direct payments to apartment owners providing housing for low income families. The assistance payments are equal to the maximum monthly rent, based on schedules established by HUD of the fair market rental for similar dwelling units in the market area, less an amount varying between 15 and 25 percent of the family's monthly income.

Section 8 of the Act further provides that the maximum monthly rent shall be revised annually to reflect changes in the fair market rentals. Special additional adjustments may be granted, when approved by the Government, to reflect increases in the actual and necessary expenses of owning and maintaining the rental units if the increases have resulted from substantial general increases in real property taxes, utility rates, or similar costs. The owner must demonstrate that the general increases have caused increases in the owner's operating costs that are not adequately compensated for by automatic annual adjustments.

The contract between the taxpayer and HUD provides that the Government has not assumed any obligation for the amount of rent payable by any family or the satisfaction of any claim by the owner against any family other than for security and utility deposits. The contract further provides that if a family vacates its unit (other than as a result of action by the owner that is in violation of the contract or any applicable law), the owner shall receive housing assistance payments in the amount of 80 percent of the contract rent for a vacancy period not exceeding 60 days. In addition, the contract provides a maximum Government payment each year subject to provisions allowing for amendment of this amount.

For each taxable year in question the sum of the taxpayer's deductions with respect to the apartment units covered by the contract with HUD that are allowable solely by reason of section 162 of the Code will not be less than 15 percent of the rental produced by these apartment units.

Section 163(d) of the Code provides a limitation on the amount of investment interest that may be deducted by a taxpayer other than a corporation. Interest on funds borrowed in connection with property subject to a net lease is considered investment interest and, therefore, is subject to the limitation. A lease is considered a net lease under section 163 (d) if the taxpayer's trade or business expenses with respect to the property, which are deductible solely by reason of section 162, are less than 15 percent of the rental income from the property, or if the taxpayer is guaranteed, in whole or in part, against loss of income.

HOLDING

Because for each taxable year in question the sum of the taxpayer's deductions with respect to the apartment units covered by the contract with HUD that are allowable solely by reason of section 162 of the Code will not be less than 15 percent of the rental income and because the taxpayer is neither guaranteed a specified return nor guaranteed in whole or in part against loss, the net lease provisions of section 163(d)(4)(A) of the Code do not apply.

Therefore, the income and expenses from the apartment units covered by the contract with HUD are not subject to the interest limitations imposed by section 163(d)(1) of the Code.

Section 166.—Bad Debts

26 CFR 1.166-6: Sale of mortgaged or pledged property.

Whether gain realized by a real estate investment trust upon the acquisition of mortgaged property at foreclosure is recognized as capital gain to the trust. See Rev. Rul. 80-56, page 14.

Section 280A.—Disallowance of Certain Expenses in Connection with Business Use of Home, Rental of Vacation Homes, Etc.

(Also Section 162; 26 CFR 1.162-1.)

Rental expenses; house swapping. Two homeowners agreed to rent their houses to each other for fair rental value for use as personal residences. In addition to those items deductible without regard to rental of the dwellings, such as interest and taxes, the homeowners are entitled to deduct operating expenses and depreciation, in that order, but only to the extent gross rental income exceeds those deductions allowable without regard to the rental.

Rev. Rul. 80-55

ISSUE

Are the expenses attributable to the rental of houses deductible under the following circumstances?

FACTS

Taxpayers A and B each own a house. Under a rental agreement, A's house is rented to B for a fair rental value of 6*x* dollars per year, and B's house is rented to A for a fair rental value of 6*x* dollars per year. A and B use the rented houses as their personal residences. At no time during the taxable year of A and B do they reside in their own houses.

For the taxable year, A and B each received rental income of 6*x* dollars and paid real estate taxes of 2*x* dollars and interest on the mortgage of 2*x* dollars. A and B each reported the 6*x* dollars as rental income and took deductions of 2*x* dollars for taxes, 2*x* dollars for interest, 6*x* dollars for depreciation, and 1*x* dollars for expenses attributable to the rental of the house.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 280A(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 provides that no deductions are allowed with respect to a dwelling unit that is used by the taxpayer as a residence, unless specifically provided and otherwise allowable. Section 280A(b) provides that subsection (a) does not apply to deductions such as taxes and interest that are otherwise allowable without regard to a connection with a taxpayer's trade or business.

Section 280A(d) of the Code provides that a taxpayer uses a dwelling unit during the taxable year as a residence if the taxpayer uses the unit for personal purposes for a number of days which exceeds the greater of 14 days or ten percent of the number of days during the year for which the unit is rented at fair rental. The unit is used for personal purposes for any day it is used by an individual who uses the unit under an arrangement that enables the taxpayer to use some other dwelling unit, whether or not a rental is charged for the use of the other unit.

If the dwelling unit is used as a residence, section 280A(c)(5) of the Code limits the deductions attributable to the rental activity to the amount by which the gross income derived from the rental activity exceeds the deductions otherwise allowable with respect to the rental activity such as interest and taxes.

Section 280A(e) of the Code provides that if there is personal use of a dwelling unit during the taxable year the amount deductible with respect to the expenses allocable to the rental of the dwelling unit is limited to an amount that bears the same ratio to the expenses as the number of days the unit is actually rented out for the year at a fair rental bears to the number of days the unit is actually used for all purposes during the year. This limitation, however, does not apply to the excess amounts of interest or taxes that are allowable even if not attributable to rental activity.

Because A and B are renting each other's house under an arrangement within the meaning of section 280A(d) of the Code, A is using the house owned by A for personal purposes and B is using the house owned by B for personal purposes. Therefore, any deductible expenses allocable to the rental are subject to the limitations of section 280A(e). In determining the relationship of rental days to total days of use for purposes of making this allocation, the number of rental days includes each day the house was rented for a fair rental value during the taxable year even though the taxpayer is considered to have personally used the house for that day under section 280A(d).

HOLDING

A and B are entitled to deduct the properly allocated expenses attributable to the rental of the houses, limited to the amount by which the gross income from the rental exceeds the deductions otherwise allowable such as interest and taxes. A and B must deduct these expenses in the following sequence: items that are deductible without regard to a connection to a business activity, such as interest and taxes; operating expenses; items that affect basis, such as depreciation. Because the rental income is 6*x* dollars, A and B are entitled to the following deductions: 2*x* dollars for taxes, 2*x* dollars for interest, 1*x* dollars for expenses, and 1*x* dollars for depreciation. The other 5*x* dollars of depreciation expenses are not deductible since they exceed the 6*x* dollars of rental income.

T.D. 7667

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 5.—TEMPORARY INCOME TAX REGULATIONS UNDER THE REVENUE ACT OF 1978

Treatment of certain capital gains of regulated investment companies and real estate investment trusts.

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides temporary regulations relating to the treatment of certain capital gains by regulated investment companies, real estate investment trusts, and their shareholders. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1]. These regulations affect regulated investment companies, real estate investment trusts, and their shareholders and provide them with guidance needed to comply with the law.

EFFECTIVE DATES: The temporary regulations are effective for taxable years of a regulated investment company or a real estate investment trust beginning before November 1, 1978, and ending after October 31, 1978, or beginning before January 1, 1979, and ending after December 31, 1978. They are also effective for a regulated investment company or real estate investment trust with any taxable year paying dividends after October 31, 1978, under sections 855, 858, 859 (as in effect prior to enactment of the Revenue Act of 1978) and 860 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains temporary regulations relating to the treatment of certain capital gains by regulated investment companies, real estate investment trusts, and their shareholders. The temporary regulations are necessary because of the amendments made to sections 1202 and 1201 by sections 402 and 403 of the Revenue Act of 1978 (Pub. L. 95-600, 82 Stat. 2867, 2868). These temporary regulations replace the temporary regulations relating to the treatment of capital gains by regulated investment companies, real estate investment trusts and their shareholders adopted by T.D. 7586 [1979-1 C.B. 228] published in the Federal Register for January 4, 1979 (44 FR 1106).

STATUTORY PROVISIONS

Section 402 of the Revenue Act of 1978 amends section 1202 of the Code (relating to deduction for capital gains) by increasing the deduction for capital gains from 50 percent to 60 percent of the amount of net capital gain. Section 1202(c) provides a transitional rule for determining the applicable deduction for capital gains for a taxpayer other than a corporation. Under the transitional rule, a deduction is allowed equal to 60 percent of the lesser of the net capital gain for the taxable year or the net capital gain taking into account only sales and exchanges after October 31, 1978. The transitional rule also provides for a deduction equal to 50 percent of the excess of the net capital gain for the taxable year over the amount taken into account in computing the 60 percent deduction.

Section 403 of the Revenue Act of 1978 reduces the alternative rate of tax on the net capital gain of a corporation from 30 percent to 28 percent. Section 1201(c), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978, provides a transitional rule for determining the applicable rate of tax on the net capital gain of a corporation. Under the transitional rule, a tax is provided equal to 28 percent of the lesser of the net capital gain for the taxable year or the net capital gain taking into account only sales and exchanges after December 31, 1978. In addition, the transitional rule provides for a tax of 30 percent on the excess of the net capital gain for the taxable year over the amount subject to the 28 percent tax.

REPLACEMENT OF T.D. 7586

Temporary regulations (T.D. 7586) were published in the Federal Register for January 4, 1979, 44 FR 1106, to provide taxpayers with guidance needed to comply with the changes made by section 402 of the Revenue Act of 1978. That temporary regulation provided rules that were limited to the treatment of certain capital gains of regulated investment companies and real estate investment trusts with respect to their shareholders that are not corporations and with respect to taxable years ending before January 1, 1979. It also announced that additional temporary regulations would be adopted for taxable years ending after December 31, 1978, and for dividends paid after that date.

This new temporary regulation replaces T.D. 7586 without changing the rules provided by that Treasury decision. However, this temporary regulation incorporates the transitional rules provided by both sections 402 and 403 of the Revenue Act of 1978. Thus, rules are provided for all capital gains realized by the regulated investment company or real estate investment trust during the transitional periods, regardless of the time that the gains are actually distributed, and regardless of whether or not the shareholder is a corporation.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Under sections 852(b)(3)(B) and 857(b)(3)(B), capital gain dividends received by shareholders of a regulated investment company and real estate investment trust are treated as gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than 1 year and are included in income in the taxable year of the shareholder in which the dividend is received. The temporary regulations require that the regulated investment company or real estate investment trust designate the portion of a shareholder's capital gain dividend that is to be taken into account in computing the 60 percent capital gain deduction and the amount subject to the 28 percent capital gains tax. In making the designation, the regulated investment company or real estate investment trust must allocate their capital gain dividends to specified periods during which the capital gains were realized. The temporary regulations contain rules for determining the shareholder's proportionate share of the capital gain dividend.

Under section 852(b)(3)(D) a regulated investment company may designate an amount of undistributed capital gains that shareholders must include in gross income as gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than 1 year. The temporary regulations prescribe similar rules for designated undistributed capital gains as those prescribed for capital gain dividends.

The Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under subchapter M, chapter 1 of the Code continue to apply while the temporary regulations provided by this document are effective. However, where the temporary regulations contained in this document are inconsistent with such Income Tax Regulations, the temporary regulations are to apply.

TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS BILL OF 1979

The Technical Corrections Bill of 1979 (S. 614, 96th Cong., 1st Sess. (1979); H.R. 2797, 96th Cong., 1st Sess. (1979)) was passed by the House of Representatives on July 16, 1979. If enacted into law in the form passed by the House of Representatives, then these temporary regulations would not apply to (a) dividends includible in gross income of shareholders, other than corporations, with taxable years beginning after October 31, 1979, or (b) dividends includible in gross income of shareholders that are corporations with taxable years beginning after December 31, 1979.

WAIVER OF CERTAIN PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS

There is need for expeditious adoption of the provisions contained in this document because regulated investment companies, real estate investment trusts and their shareholders must be provided with immediate guidance in applying the transitional rules provided by sections 402 and 403 of the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 101, 102]. For this reason, Jerome Kurtz, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, has determined that the provisions of paragraphs 8 through 14 of the Treasury Department directive implementing Executive Order 12044 must be waived.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Kent J. Schreiner of the Legislation and Regulations Divisions of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 5 is amended by deleting § 5.852-1, § 5.852-2, § 5.857-1 and §5.857-2 and inserting in lieu thereof the following new sections:

§ 5.852-1 Treatment of certain capital gains of regulated investment companies.

(a) Taxation of certain capital gains of regulated investment companies. Section 403 of the Revenue Act of 1978 reduces the alternative rate of tax imposed by section 1201(a) on the net capital gain of a corporation from 30 percent to 28 percent for taxable years ending after December 31, 1978. Section 1201(c), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978, provides a transitional rule for determining the applicable rate of tax under section 1201(a) on net capital gain for a corporation with a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1979, and ending after December 31, 1978. A regulated investment company that is taxable under part I, subchapter M, chapter 1 of the Code (hereinafter regulated investment company) must pay a tax on its capital gains under section 852(b)(3)(A). The tax is determined at a rate provided in section 1201(a) on the excess of the company's net capital gain over its deduction for dividends paid (as defined in section 561) determined with reference to capital gain dividends only. For a regulated investment company with a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1979 and ending after December 31, 1978, in computing the deduction for dividends paid, any capital gain dividends (including any capital gain dividends declared after the close of the taxable year but considered as having been paid during the taxable year under section 855) shall be considered made first from the company's post-1978 capital gain, to the extent thereof, and then from its pre-1979 capital gain. For definitions of "pre-1979 capital gain" and "post-1978 capital gain", see paragraph (e) of this section.

(b) Capital gain dividends—(1) Designation of capital gain dividends. In general, under section 852(b)(3)(C) a capital gain dividend is any dividend, or part thereof, that is designated by a regulated investment company as a capital gain dividend in a written notice mailed to its shareholders not later than 45 days after the close of its taxable year. A regulated investment company with a taxable year beginning before November 1, 1978, and ending after October 31, 1978, or beginning before January 1, 1979, and ending after December 31, 1978, designating capital gain dividends with respect to such years, or a regulated investment company with any taxable year distributing capital gain dividends after October 31, 1978, under sections 855 or 860, also must include in its written notice to its shareholders a statement showing the shareholder's proportionate share of the dividend that is post-October 1978 capital gain (for use by the shareholder if the shareholder is not a corporation) and post-1978 capital gain (for use by the shareholder if the shareholder is a corporation). For the definition of "post-October 1978 capital gain", see paragraph (e) of this section.

(2) Special procedural requirements. In determining the portion of the capital gain dividend that is post-October 1978 capital gain in the hands of shareholders other than corporations, the regulated investment company shall consider that capital gain dividends for the taxable year are made first from its post-October 1978 capital gain, to the extent thereof, and then from its pre-November 1978 capital gain. For the definition of "pre-November 1978 capital gain", see paragraph (e) of this section. In determining the portion of the capital gain dividend that is post-1978 capital gain in the hands of shareholders that are corporations, the regulated investment company shall consider that capital gain dividends for the taxable year are made first from its post-1978 capital gain, to the extent thereof, and then from its pre-1979 capital gain. For purpose of this paragraph (b)(2), the company's post-October 1978 capital gain and post-1978 capital gain shall each be allocated first to capital gain dividends (taking into account dividends under section 855 first), to the extent thereof, second to designated undistributed capital gains, to the extent thereof, and third to other capital gains retained by the company. The proportionate share of post-October 1978 capital gain designated for a shareholder other than a corporation is the amount that bears the same ratio to the amount paid to the shareholder as a capital gain dividend for the year as (i) the aggregate amount of the company's post-October 1978 capital gain paid to all shareholders (including shareholders that are corporations) bears to (ii) the aggregate amount of the capital gain dividend paid for the year. The proportionate share of post-1978 capital gain designated for a shareholder that is a corporation is the amount that bears the same ratio to the amount paid to it as a capital gain dividend for the year as (i) the aggregate amount of the company's post-1978 capital gain paid to all shareholders (including shareholders that are not corporations) bears to (ii) the aggregate amount of the capital gain dividend paid for the year. Every regulated investment company shall keep a record of the proportion of each capital gain dividend (to which this paragraph (b) applies) that is post-October 1978 capital gain and post-1978 capital gain.

(c) Undistributed capital gains—(1) In general. A regulated investment company that designates undistributed capital gains shall notify its shareholders of the designation according to the provisions of § 1.852-9(a)(1). In addition, a regulated investment company with a taxable year beginning before November 1, 1978, and ending after October 31, 1978, or beginning before January 1, 1979, and ending after December 31, 1978, that designates undistributed capital gains for such year shall also show on Form 2439 the shareholder's proportionate share of the designated undistributed capital gains that is considered post-October 1978 capital gain (for use by the shareholder if the shareholder is not a corporation) and post-1978 capital gain (for use by the shareholder if the shareholder is a corporation), the tax paid with respect to the company's designated undistributed capital gains deemed to have been paid by the shareholder, and the amount (determined pursuant to paragraph (c)(3) of this section) by which the shareholder's adjusted basis in its shares shall be increased.

(2) Special procedural requirements. In determining the portion of the designated undistributed capital gains that is post-October 1978 capital gain for shareholders other than corporations, the regulated investment company shall consider the designated amount as being first from its post-October 1978 capital gain, to the extent thereof, and then from its pre-November 1978 capital gain. In determining the portion of the designated undistributed capital gains that is post-1978 capital gain for shareholders that are corporations, the regulated investment company shall consider the designated amount as being first from its post-1978 capital gain, to the extent thereof, and then from its pre-1979 capital gain. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(2), the company's post-October 1978 capital gain and post-1978 capital gain shall each be allocated first to capital gain dividends, to the extent thereof, second to designated undistributed capital gains, to the extent thereof, and third to other capital gains retained by the company. For a shareholder other than a corporation, the proportionate share of undistributed capital gains for a taxable year that is from post-October 1978 capital gain is the amount that bears the same ratio to the amount included in the shareholder's income as designated undistributed capital gains for the year as (i) the aggregate amount of the company's post-October 1978 capital gain for the year designated as undistributed capital gains (including amounts designated for shareholders that are corporations) bears to (ii) the aggregate amount of the company's gains for the year that are designated as undistributed capital gains. For a shareholder that is a corporation, the proportionate share of undistributed capital gains for a taxable year that is from post-1978 capital gain is the amount that bears the same ratio to the amount included in its income as designated undistributed capital gains for the year as (i) the aggregate amount of the company's post-1978 capital gain for the year designated as undistributed capital gains (including amounts designated for shareholders other than corporations) bears to (ii) the aggregate amount of the company's gains for the year that are designated as undistributed capital gains. Every regulated investment company shall keep a record of the proportion of undistributed capital gains (to which this paragraph applies) that is from post-October 1978 capital gain and post-1978 capital gain.

(3) Increase in adjusted basis. Each shareholder's adjusted basis in its shares shall be increased by the amount includible in its gross income under section 852(b)(3)(D)(i), minus the tax that the shareholder is deemed to have paid under section 852(b)(3)(D)(ii). The tax that each shareholder is deemed to have paid is the amount that bears the same ratio to the amount of the tax imposed by section 852(b)(3)(A) on the aggregate amount of the undistributed capital gains designated for the year as the amount of such gains includible in the shareholder's gross income bears to the aggregate amount of undistributed capital gains designated for all shareholders.

(4) Effect of certain undistributed capital gains on earnings and profits. If a regulated investiment company designates an amount as undistributed capital gains for a taxable year under section 852(b)(3)(D), its earnings and profits for the year are reduced by the total amount of the designated undistributed capital gains. The company's capital account shall be increased by the total amount designated minus the amount of tax imposed by section 852(b)(3)(A) with respect to the designated amount. For purposes of determining the tax imposed by section 852(b)(3)(A) for amounts designated under section 852(b)(3)(D), for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1979, and ending after December 31, 1978, after taking into account capital gain dividends according to the rules of paragraph (b) of this section, the designated amount shall be treated as being first from post 1978 capital gain, to the extent thereof, and then from pre-1979 capital gain.

(d) Taxation of certain capital gains of shareholders of regulated investment companies—(1) In general. Section 402 of the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B.

(Vol. 1) 1, 101] increases the deduction for capital gains from 50 percent to 60 percent of the amount of net capital gain for taxable years ending after October 31, 1978. Section 1202 (c), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978, provides a transitional rule for determining the applicable deduction for capital gains for a taxpayer, other than a corporation, with a taxable year beginning before November 1, 1978, and ending after October 31, 1978. Section 403 of the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 102] reduces the rate of tax imposed by section 1201(a) on the net capital gain of a corporation from 30 percent to 28 percent for taxable years ending after December 31, 1978. Section 1201(c), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978, provides a transitional rule for determining the applicable rate of tax under section 1201(a) on the net capital gain of a corporation with a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1979, and ending after December 31, 1978.

(2) Capital gain dividends. Under section 852(b)(3)(B), capital gain dividends received by shareholders of a regulated investment company are treated as gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than 1 year and are included in income in the taxable year of the shareholder in which the dividend is received.

(i) Shareholders other than corporations. In the case of a regulated investment company with a taxable year beginning before November 1, 1978, and ending after October 31, 1978, paying capital gain dividends with respect to such year, or in the case of a regulated investment company with any taxable year distributing capital gain dividends after October 31, 1978, under sections 855 or 860, the portion of the capital gain dividend of a shareholder other than a corporation that is post-October 1978 capital gain is only the portion of the total dividend designated by the regulated investment company pursuant to paragraph (b) of this section. Any capital gain dividend, or portion thereof, not designated post-October 1978 capital gain is to be considered pre-November 1978 capital gain. For dividends paid before November 1, 1978, for taxable years ending before November 1, 1978, see § 1.852-4.

(ii) Shareholders that are corporations. In the case of a regulated investment company with a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1979, and ending after December 31, 1978, paying capital gain dividends with respect to such year, or in the case of a regulated investment company with any taxable year distributing capital gain dividends after December 31, 1978, under sections 855 or 860, the portion of the capital gain dividend of a shareholder that is a corporation that is post-1978 capital gain is only the portion of the total dividend designated by the regulated investment company pursuant to paragraph (b) of this section. Any capital gain dividend, or portion thereof, not designated post-1978 capital gain is to be considered pre-1979 capital gain. For dividends paid before January 1, 1979, for taxable years ending before January 1, 1979, see § 1.852-4.

(3) Undistributed capital gains. (i) A shareholder of a regulated investment company at the close of the company's taxable year shall include in its gross income as gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than 1 year any amount of undistributed capital gains designated by the company under section 852(b)(3)(D). The amount shall be included in the shareholder's gross income for the taxable year that includes the last day of the taxable year of the regulated investment company for which the undistributed capital gains were designated. However, for undistributed capital gains designated for any taxable year of a regulated investment company beginning before November 1, 1978, and ending after October 31, 1978, or beginning before January 1, 1979, and ending after December 31, 1978, the portion of each shareholder's designated undistributed capital gains that is post-October 1978 capital gain or post-1978 capital gain is only the portion designated by the regulated investment company pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section. Any designated undistributed capital gains, or portion thereof, not designated post-October 1978 capital gain is to be considered pre-November 1978 capital gain. Any designated undistributed capital gains, or portion thereof, not designated post-1978 capital gain is to be considered pre-1979 capital gain. For undistributed capital gains designated for taxable years ending before November 1, 1978, for shareholders other than corporations, and for undistributed capital gains designated for taxable years ending before January 1, 1979, for shareholders that are corporations, see § 1.852-9.

(ii) Any shareholder required to include an amount of undistributed capital gains in gross income under section 852(b)(3)(D)(i) and paragraph (d)(3)(i) of this section shall be deemed to have paid, for its taxable year for which the amount is includible, a tax equal to the tax designated under paragraph (c)(1) of this section as the shareholder's proportionate share of the capital gains tax paid with respect to such amount by the regulated investment company.

(iii) Any shareholders required to include an amount of undistributed capital gains in gross income under section 852(b)(3)(D)(i) and paragraph (d)(3)(i) of this section shall increase the adjusted basis of the shares of stock in respect of which such amount is includible by the amount designated under paragraph (c)(3) of this section by the regulated investment company.

(e) Definitions—(1) Pre-November 1978 capital gain. For purposes of this section, the term "pre-November 1978 capital gain" means net capital gain described in section 1202 (c)(2), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1].

(2) Post-October 1978 capital gain. For purposes of this section, the term "post-October 1978 capital gain" means net capital gain described in section 1202(c)(1), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978.

(3) Pre-1979 capital gain. For purposes of this section, the term "pre-1979 capital gain" means net capital gain that is subject to tax at a rate of 30 percent as provided by section 1201

(c), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978.

(4) Post-1978 capital gain. For purposes of this section, the term "post-1978 capital gain" means net capital gain that is subject to tax at a rate of 28 percent as provided by section 1201(c), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978.

(f) Example. The rules of this section are illustrated by the following example:

Example. (1) Facts. XYZ Company, a regulated investment company, makes its return using a fiscal year. Its taxable year begins on June 1 and ends on May 31. During its taxable year ending on May 31, 1979, XYZ Company realized the following capital gains and losses:

	August	December	February
Long-term capital gain	$1600	$2400	$5200
Long-term capital loss	200	400	600
Short-term capital gain	800	200	0
Short-term capital loss	0	600	200

Net capital gain for the year = $8000

Under section 855, XYZ Company elects to treat $3400 as a capital gain dividend that will be distributed in the following taxable year. XYZ Company distributes $800 as a dividend during its taxable year ending on May 31, 1979, to its shareholders and designates the amount as capital gain. The company also designates $2600 as undistributed capital gains and retains the remaining $1200 of capital gains.

(2) Application of definitions—(i) Post-October 1978 capital gain. Under paragraph (e)(2) of this section, post-October 1978 capital gain is defined as the net capital gain described in section 1201(c)(1) or $6000 (the lesser of $8000 net capital gain for the taxable year or $6000 net capital gain taking into account only sales and exchanges after October 31, 1978).

(ii) Pre-November 1978 capital gain. Under paragraph (e)(1) of this section, pre-November 1978 capital gain is defined as the net capital gain described in section 1201(c)(2) or $2000 (the excess of $8000 net capital gain for the taxable year over $6000 taken into account in computing post-October 1978 capital gain).

(iii) Post-1978 capital gain. Under paragraph (e)(4) of this section, post-1978 capital gain is defined as the net capital gain that is subject to tax at a rate of 28 percent as provided by section 1201(c) or $4400 (the lesser of $8000 net capital gain for the taxable year or $4400 net capital gain taking into account only sales and exchanges after December 31, 1978).

(iv) Pre-1979 capital gain. Under paragraph (e)(3) of this section, pre-1979 capital gain is defined as net capital gain that is subject to tax at a rate of 30 percent as provided by section 1201(c) or $3600 (the excess of $8000 net capital gain for the taxable year over $4400 taken into account in computing post-1978 capital gain).

(3) Allocation of capital gains—(i) Capital gain dividends. Under paragraph (b)(2) of this section, of the $4200 capital gain dividend ($3400 treated under section 855 plus $800 distributed), $4200 is post-October 1978 capital gain. Similarly, under paragraph (b)(2) of this section, $4200 is post-1978 capital gain.

(ii) Undistributed capital gains. Under paragraph (c)(2) of this section, of the $2600 designated as undistributed capital gains, $1800 (the excess of $600 total post-October 1978 capital gain over $4200 taken into account in computing capital gain dividends) is post-October 1978 capital gain and the remaining $800 is pre-November 1978 capital gain. Similarly, under paragraph (c)(2) of this section, of the $2600 designated as undistributed capital gain, $200 (the excess of $4400 total post-1978 capital gain over $4200 taken into account in computing capital gain dividends) is post-1978 capital gain and the remaining $2400 is pre-1979 capital gain.

(iii) Other capital gains. The $1200 of capital gains retained by the company is pre-1979 capital gain.

(4) Determination of proportionate share—(i) Capital gain dividends. Under paragraph (b)(2) of this section, each shareholder's proportionate share of post-October 1978 capital gain is 100 percent of the total capital gain dividend received ($6000 total post-October 1978 capital gain dividend divided by $6000 total capital gain dividends for the taxable year). Similarly, each shareholder's proportionate share of post-1978 capital gain is 100 percent of the total capital gain dividends.

(ii) Undistributed capital gains. Under paragraph (c)(2) of this section, each shareholder's proportionate share of post-October 1978 designated undistributed capital gains is 69.23 percent of the undistributed capital gains designated for him ($1800 total post-October 1978 designated undistributed capital gains divided by $2600 total designated undistributed capital gains). Similarly, under paragraph (c)(2), each shareholder's proportionate share of post-1978 designated undistributed capital gains is 7.69 percent of the undistributed capital gains designated for him ($200 total post-1978 designated undistributed capital gains divided by $2600 total designated undistributed capital gains).

(g) Other applicable regulations. In general, the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under part I, subchapter M, chapter 1 of the Code are to apply to the treatment of capital gains by regulated investment companies. However, where this section is inconsistent with such Income Tax Regulations, this section is to apply.

§ 5.857-1 Treatment of certain capital gains of real estate investment trusts.

(a) Taxation of certain capital gains of real estate investment trusts. Section 403 of the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 102] reduces the alternative rate of tax imposed by section 1201(a) on the net capital gain of a corporation from 30 percent to 28 percent for taxable years ending after December 31, 1978. Section 1201(c), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978, provides a transitional rule for determining the applicable rate of tax under section 1201(a) on the net capital gain of a corporation with a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1979, and ending after December 31, 1978. A real estate investment trust that is taxable under part II, subchapter M, chapter 1 of the Code (hereinafter real estate investment trust) is provided with an alternative tax on its capital gains under section 857(b)(3)(A). The alternative tax is determined, in part, at a rate provided in section 1201(a) on the excess of the trust's net capital gain over its deduction for dividends paid (as defined in section 561) determined with reference to capital gain dividends only. For a real estate investment trust with a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1979, and ending after December 31, 1978, in computing the deduction for dividends paid, any capital gain dividends (including any dividends declared after the close of such taxable year but considered as having been paid during such taxable year under section 858) shall be considered made first from the trust's post-1978 capital gain, to the extent thereof, and then from its pre-1979 capital gain. For definitions of "pre-1979 capital gain" and "post-1978 capital gain", see paragraph (d) of this section.

(b) Capital gain dividends—(1) Designation of capital gain dividends. In general, under section 857(b)(3)(C) a capital gain dividend is any dividend, or part thereof, that is designated by a real estate investment trust as a capital gain dividend in a written notice mailed to its shareholders (or holders of beneficial interests) not later than 30 days after the close of its taxable year. A real estate investment trust with a taxable year beginning before November 1, 1978, and ending after October 31, 1978, or beginning before January 1, 1979, and ending after December 31, 1978, designating capital gain dividends with respect to such years, or a real estate investment trust with any taxable year distributing capital gain dividends under sections 858, 859 (as in effect prior to enactment of the Revenue Act of 1978) or 860 after October 31, 1978, also must include in its written notice to its shareholders a statement showing the shareholder's proportionate share of the dividend that is post-October 1978 capital gain (for use by the shareholder if the shareholder is not a corporation) and post-1978 capital gain (for use by the shareholder if the shareholder is a corporation). For the definition of "post-October 1978 capital gain", see paragraph (d) of this section.

(2) Special procedural requirements. In determining the portion of the capital gain dividend that is post-October 1978 capital gain in the hands of shareholders other than corporations, the real estate investment trust shall consider the capital gain dividends for the taxable year are made first from its post-October 1978 capital gain, to the extent thereof, and then from its pre-November 1978 capital gain. For the definition of "pre-November 1978 capital gain", see paragraph (d) of this section. In determining the portion of the capital gain dividend that is post-1978 capital gain in the hands of shareholders that are corporations, the real estate investment trust shall consider that capital gain dividends for the taxable year are made first from its post-1978 capital gain, to the extent thereof, and then from its pre-1979 capital gain. For purposes of this paragraph (b)(2), the trust's post-October 1978 capital gain and post-1978 capital gain shall be allocated first to capital gain dividends (taking into account dividends under section 858 first), to the extent thereof, and second to other capital gains retained by the trust. The proportionate share of post-October 1978 capital gain designated for a shareholder other than a corporation is the amount that bears the same ratio to the amount paid to him as capital gain dividend for the year as (i) the aggregate amount of the trust's post-October 1978 capital gain paid to all shareholders (including shareholders that are corporations) bears to (ii) the aggregate amount of the capital gain dividend paid for the year. The proportionate share of post-1978 capital gain designated for a shareholder that is a corporation is the amount that bears the same ratio to the amount paid to it as a capital gain dividend for the year as (i) the aggregate amount of the trust's post-1978 capital gain paid to all shareholders (including shareholders that are not corporations) bears to (ii) the aggregate amount of the capital gain dividend paid for the year. Every real estate investment trust shall keep a record of the proportion of each capital gain dividend (to which this paragraph applies) that is post-October 1978 capital gain and post-1978 capital gain.

(c) Taxation of certain capital gains of shareholders of real estate investment trust—(1) In general. Section 402 of the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 101] increases the deduction for capital gains from 50 percent to 60 percent of the amount of net capital gain for taxable years ending after October 31, 1978. Section 1202(c), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978, provides a transitional rule for determining the applicable deduction for capital gains for a taxpayer, other than a corporation, with a taxable year beginning before November 1, 1978, and ending after October 31, 1978. Section 403 of the Revenue Act of 1978 reduces the alternative rate of tax imposed by section 1201 (a) on the net capital gain of a corporation from 30 percent to 28 percent for taxable years ending after December 31, 1978. Section 1201(c), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978, provides a transitional rule for determining the applicable rate of tax under section 1201(a) on the net capital gain of a corporation with a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1979, and ending after December 31, 1978.

(2) Capital gain dividends. Under section 857(b)(3)(B), capital gain dividends received by shareholders of a real estate investment trust are treated as gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than 1 year and are included in income in the taxable year of the shareholder in which the dividend is received.

(i) Shareholders other than corporations. In the case of a real estate investment trust with a taxable year beginning before November 1, 1978, and ending after October 31, 1978, paying capital gain dividends with respect to such year, or in the case of a real estate investment trust with any taxable year distributing capital gain dividends after October 31, 1978, under sections 858, 859 (as in effect prior to enactment of the Revenue Act of 1978) or 860, the portion of the capital gain dividend of a shareholder other than a corporation that is post-October 1978 capital gain is only the portion of the total dividend designated by the real estate investment trust pursuant to paragraph (b) of this section. Any capital gain dividend, or portion thereof, not designated post-October 1978 capital gain is to be considered pre-November 1978 capital gain. For dividends paid before November 1, 1978, for taxable years ending before November 1, 1978, see § 1.857-4.

(ii) Shareholders that are corporations. In the case of a real estate investment trust with a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1979, and ending after December 31, 1978, paying capital gain dividends with respect to such year, or in the case of a real estate investment trust with any taxable year distributing capital gain dividends after December 31, 1978, under sections 858, 859 (as in effect prior to enactment of the Revenue Act of 1978) or 860, the portion of the capital gain dividend of a shareholder that is a corporation that is post-1978 capital gain is only the portion of the total dividend designated by the real estate investment trust pursuant to paragraph (b) of this section. Any capital gain dividend, or portion thereof, not designated post-1978 capital gain is to be considered pre-1979 capital gain. For dividends paid before January 1, 1979, for taxable years ending before January 1, 1979, see § 1.857-4.

(d) Definitions—(1) Pre-November 1978 capital gain. For purposes of this section, the term "pre-November 1978 capital gain" means net capital gain described in section 1202 (c)(2), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978.

(2) Post-October 1978 capital gain. For purposes of this section, the term "post-October 1978 capital gain" means net capital gain described in section 1202(c)(1), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978.

(3) Pre-1979 capital gain. For purposes of this section, the term "pre-1979 capital gain" means net capital gain that is subject to tax at a rate of 30 percent as provided by section 1201(c), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978.

(4) Post-1978 capital gain. For purposes of this section, the term "post-1978 capital gain" means net capital gain that is subject to tax at a rate of 28 percent as provided by section 1201(c), as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978.

(e) Example. The rules of this section are illustrated by the following example:

Example. (1) Facts. XYZ, a real estate investment trust, makes its return using a fiscal year. Its taxable year begins on June 1 and ends on May 31. During its taxable year ending on May 31, 1979, XYZ realized the following capital gains and losses:

	August	December	February
Long-term capital gain	$1000	$4400	$2000
Long-term capital loss	800	200	400
Short-term capital gain	0	100	300
Short-term capital loss	500	100	200

Net capital gain for the year = $5600

Under section 858, XYZ elects to treat $3000 as a capital gain dividend that will be distributed in the following taxable year. XYZ distributes $500 as a dividend during its taxable year ending on May 31, 1979, and designates the amount as capital gain. The trust retains the remaining $2100 of capital gains.

(2) Application of definitions—(i) Post-October 1978 capital gain. Under paragraph (d)(2) of this section, post-October 1978 capital gain is defined as the net capital gain described in section 1202(c)(1) or $5600 (the lesser of $5600 net capital gain for the taxable year or $5800 net capital gain taking into account only sales and exchanges after October 31, 1978).

(ii) Pre-November 1978 capital gain. Under paragraph (d)(1) of this section, pre-November 1978 capital gain is defined as the net capital gain described in section 1202(c)(2) or $0 (the excess of $5600 net capital gain for the taxable year over $5600 taken into account in computing post-October 1978 capital gain).

(iii) Post-1978 capital gain. Under paragraph (d)(4) of this section, post-1978 capital gain is defined as the net capital gain that is subject to tax at a rate of 28 percent as provided by section 1201(c) or $1600 (the lesser of $5600 net capital gain for the taxable year or $1600 net capital gain taking into account only sales and exchanges after December 31, 1978).

(iv) Pre-1979 capital gain. Under paragraph (d)(3) of this section, pre-1979 capital gain is defined as net capital gain that is subject to tax at a rate of 30 percent as provided by section 1201(c) or $4000 (the excess of $5600 net capital gain for the taxable year over $1600 taken into account in computing post-1978 capital gain).

(3) Allocation of capital gains—(i) Capital gain dividends. Under paragraph (b)(2) of this section, of the $3500 capital gain dividend ($3000 treated under section 858 plus $500 distributed) $3500 is post-October 1978 capital gain and $0 is pre-November 1978 capital gain. Similarly, under paragraph (b)(2) of this section, of the $3500 capital gain dividend, $1600 is post-1978 capital gain and the remaining $1900 is pre-1979 capital gain.

(ii) Other capital gains. The $2100 retained by the trust is pre-1979 capital gain.

(4) Determination of proportionate share. Under paragraph (b)(2) of this section, each shareholder's proportionate share of post-October 1978 capital gain is 100 percent of the total capital gain dividend ($3500 total post-October 1978 capital gain divided by $3500 total capital gain dividends for the taxable year). Similarly, each shareholder's proportionate share of post-1979 capital gain is 45.71 percent of the total capital gain dividends ($1600 total post-1978 capital gain divided by $3500 total capital gain dividends for the taxable year).

(f) Other applicable regulations. In general, the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under part II, subchapter M, chapter 1 of the Code are to apply to the treatment of capital gains by real estate investment trusts. However, where this section is inconsistent with such Income Tax Regulations, this section is to apply.

There is need for the immediate guidance provided by the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it is found impracticable to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Section 856.—Definition of Real Estate Investment Trust

26 CFR 1.856-1: Definition of real estate investment trust.
(Also Sections 166, 1221; 1.166-6, 1.1221-1.)

Real estate investment trust; foreclosure; property value exceeding bid. A real estate investment trust that engaged primarily in short term financing activities, such as making construction and development loans, made a construction loan on which it later foreclosed. At the foreclosure sale the trust bid in the property for less than its fair market value. The trust's basis in the mortgage note exceeded the property's value, and the balance due on the note was wholly uncollectable. The gain realized by the trust, the difference between the fair market value of the property and the bid price, is ordinary income.

Rev. Rul. 80-56

ISSUE

Is gain realized by a real estate investment trust upon the acquisition or mortgaged property at a foreclosure sale ordinary income or capital gain under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

X, which qualifies as a real estate investment trust under section 856 of the Internal Revenue Code, engages primarily in short-term financing activities, such as originating, making, and servicing construction and development loans that are secured by mortgages on real property.

In 1977, X made a construction loan of 1000*x* dollars to Y, a corporation. The loan was secured by a first mortgage on land and the building to be constructed thereon. In 1978, Y defaulted on the loan and X acquired the property by bidding it in at the foreclosure sale. No deficiency judgment was obtained in the foreclosure proceedings, and at the time of the acquisition of the property by X the mortgage note was wholly uncollectible. On the date of the foreclosure sale the fair market value of the property was clearly established to be 500*x* dollars and the bid price was 400*x* dollars. X's basis in the note was 900*x* dollars.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 166(a)(1) of the Code provides the general rule that there shall be allowed as a deduction any debt that becomes worthless within the taxable year.

Section 1.166-6 of the Income Tax Regulations provides for the treatment of the sale of mortgaged or pledged property. Section 1.166-6(a)(1) provides that if mortgaged or pledged property is lawfully sold for less than the amount of the debt, and the portion of the indebtedness remaining unsatisfied after the sale is wholly or partially uncollectible, the mortgagee or pledgee may deduct such amount under section 166(a) of the Code (to the extent that it constitutes capital or represents an item the income from which has been returned by the mortgagee or pledgee) as a bad debt for the taxable year in which it becomes wholly worthless or is charged off as partially worthless.

Section 1.166-6(b)(1) of the regulations provides that in the case of a sale described in section 1.166-6(a) if the mortgagee or pledgee buys in the mortgaged or pledged property, loss or gain is also realized measured by the difference between the amount of those obligations of the debtor that are applied to the purchase or bid price of the property (to the extent such obligations constitute capital or represent an item the income from which has been returned by the mortgagee or pledgee) and the fair market value of the property.

As a result of the foreclosure sale, under section 1.166-6(a)(1) of the regulations, X is entitled to a bad debt deduction of 500*x* dollars (the difference between the bid price, 400*x* dollars, and the basis of the note, 900*x* dollars). In addition, under section 1.166-6(b)(1), X realized a gain in 1978 of 100*x* dollars (the difference between the fair market value of the property, 500*x* dollars, and the bid price, 400*x* dollars).

X's loss is an ordinary loss under section 166(a) and 166(c) of the Code.

Section 1221(4) of the Code provides that the term "capital asset" means property held by the taxpayer but does not include accounts or notes receivable acquired in the ordinary course of trade or business for services rendered.

Rev. Rul. 80-57, page 16, this Bulletin, describes a real estate investment trust that, like X, is primarily engaged in short-term financing activities. Based upon Burbank Liquidating Corporation v. Commissioner, 39 T.C. 999 (1963), acq., sub. nom. United Associates, Inc., 1965-1 C.B. 5, modified on other grounds, 335 F.2d 125 (9th Cir 1964) and Rev. Rul. 72-238, 1972-1 C.B. 65, the ruling concludes that the short-term financing activities of the real estate investment trust are a trade or business and that, under section 1221(4), a note taken in the course of this business is not a capital asset.

Rev. Rul. 72-238 also concludes that because a mortgage note held by a bank was not a capital asset, the gain realized by the bank when it purchased the mortgaged property at a foreclosure sale for a bid price less than the fair market value of the property was ordinary income rather than capital gain. Although the taxpayer in Rev. Rul. 72-238 was a bank, the ruling is equally applicable in the case of a real estate investment trust when the mortgage note is not a capital asset.

Even if the mortgage note held by X were a capital asset, the gain realized when X purchased the mortgaged property at a foreclosure sale for less than its fair market value would not be capital gain. Under tax benefit principles, if a taxpayer receives an ordinary income deduction, any offsetting gain is taxable as ordinary income. See National Bank of Commerce of Seattle v. Commissioner, 115 F.2d 875 (9th Cir. 1940).

In Merchants National Bank of Mobile v. Commissioner, 199 F.2d 657 (5th Cir. 1952), the taxpayer bank charged off and deducted certain notes as worthless and then sold them for $18,000 in the following year. The court held that regardless of the fact that the notes were capital assets and that there was a sale or exchange, the recovery was taxable as ordinary income. The court reasoned at page 659:

> When these notes were charged off as a bad debt in the first instance, the bank deducted the amount thereof from its ordinary income, thus escaping taxation on that portion of its income in those years. The amount subsequently recovered on the notes restores pro tanto the amount originally deducted from ordinary income, and is accordingly taxable as ordinary income, not as a capital gain. When the notes were charged off, and the bank recouped itself for the capital loss by deducting the amount thereof from its current income, the notes were no longer capital assets for income tax purposes. To permit the bank to reduce its ordinary income by the amount of the loss in the first instance, thus gaining a maximum tax advantage on that basis, and then permit it to treat the amount later recovered on the notes as a capital gain, taxable on a much lower basis than ordinary income, would afford the bank a tax advantage on the transaction not contemplated by the income tax laws.

HOLDING

Any gain under section 1.166-6(b)(1) of the regulations that offsets a bad debt deduction under section 1.166-6(a)(1) is taxable as ordinary income even if the mortgage note is a capital asset.

Because the mortgage note is not a capital asset in the hands of X, and because the gain realized under section 1.166-6(b)(1) of the regulations upon the acquisition of mortgaged property at foreclosure offsets the bad debt deduction allowed the taxpayer under section 1.166-6(a)(1) of the regulations, the gain of 100*x* dollars is ordinary income.

Section 857.—Taxation of Real Estate Investment Trusts and Their Beneficiaries

26 CFR 1.857-2: Method of taxation of real estate investment trusts.
(Also Sections 61, 1221, 1232; 1.61-6, 1.1221-1, 1.1232-2.)

Real estate investment trust; deed in lieu of foreclosure; property value exceeding basis. A real estate investment trust that engaged primarily in short term financing activities, such as making construction and development loans, made a construction loan to a borrower who later defaulted. The trust accepted a deed in lieu of foreclosure when the fair market value of the property exceeded the trust's basis in the mortgage note. The gain realized by the trust, the difference between its basis in the note and the value of the property, is ordinary income, and such income qualifies under section 856(c)(2)(D) and (3)(C) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-57

ISSUE

What are the income tax consequences to a real estate investment trust of its acceptance of a deed to mortgaged property in lieu of foreclosing on the mortgage?

FACTS

X, which qualifies as a real estate investment trust under section 856 of the Internal Revenue Code, engages primarily in short-term financing activities such as construction and development loans that are secured by mortgages on real property. In addition to making construction and development loans, X frequently originates and services these loans. In 1976, X made a construction loan to Y, a corporation. The loan was secured by a first mortgage on the land and the building to be constructed on it. In 1979, Y defaulted on the loan. In lieu of foreclosing on the mortgage, X accepted a deed to the real property in full satisfaction of the outstanding indebtedness. At the time of the conveyance the fair market value of the real property exceeded the amount of X's basis in the mortgage note.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61(a) of the Code and the Income Tax Regulations thereunder provide that, except as otherwise provided by law, gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including gains derived from dealings in property.

Section 1222 of the Code provides that capital gain means gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset.

Section 1232(a)(1) of the Code provides that any amount received by a holder of an evidence of indebtedness issued by a corporation, upon retirement of such evidence of indebtedness, is considered an amount received in an exchange if the underlying evidence of indebtedness is a capital asset. In McClain v. Commissioner, 311 U.S. 527 (1941), 1941-1 C.B. 378, the Supreme Court of the United States stated that the term "retirement" is construed broadly and in accordance with its ordinary meaning and includes a conveyance in lieu of foreclosure.

Section 1221(4) of the Code excludes from the definition of a capital asset accounts or notes receivable acquired in the ordinary course of a trade or business for services rendered. In Burbank Liquidating Corp. v. Commissioner, 39 T.C. 999 (1963), acq. sub. nom. United Associates Inc., 1965-1 C.B. 5, modified on other grounds, 335 F.2d 125 (9th Cir. 1964), the Tax Court of the United States held that one of the business activities of a savings and loan association could properly be described as "rendering the service" of making loans and that, by reason of section 1221(4), the taxpayer's notes receivable, which were secured by real estate mortgages, were ordinary assets rather than capital assets. Thus, the court concluded that the loss from the sale of such notes receivable was deductible as an ordinary loss.

Rev. Rul. 72-238, 1972-1 C.B. 65, holds that when a bank purchases real property at a mortgage foreclosure sale and the bid price is less than the fair market value of the property, the gain realized is characterized as ordinary income because such gain results from the ordinary operation of the bank's business, which includes the rendering of the services of originating and making loans that are secured by mortgages.

In this case, X is engaged primarily in originating, making, and servicing short-term construction and development loans. Under the authorities cited above, such activities are normally considered an active trade or business. See also section 542(d) of the Code. The fact that the taxpayer in this case is a real estate investment trust and subject to certain restrictions with respect to types and sources of income does not change the inherent nature of these activities. The income from the activities is of the type permitted a real estate investment trust under section 856(c)(2) and (3) and is not income from prohibited transactions under section 857(b)(6).

Because the loan to Y was made in the ordinary course of X's trade or business, the note held by X was not a capital asset. Thus, section 1232 of the Code does not apply.

HOLDING

The gain realized by X when it accepted the deed to the mortgaged property in lieu of foreclosure is ordinary income. The amount of the gain is the difference between X's basis in the mortgage note and the fair market value of the mortgaged premises on the date of the conveyance to X.

For purposes of the income requirements of section 856(c) of the Code, the income qualifies under section 856(c)(2)(D) and (3)(C) as gain from the sale or other disposition of real property (including interests in real property and interests in mortgages on real property) that is not property described in section 1221(1).

Section 1001.—Determination of Amount of and Recognition of Gain or Loss

26 CFR 1.1001-1: Computation of gain or loss.
(Also Sections 61, 1038; 1.61-6, 1.1038-1.)

Reconveyance of real property to seller. No gain is recognized under section 1001 of the Code on the sale of land by a taxpayer who accepts reconveyance of the land and returns the buyer's funds in the taxable year of the sale. If the reconveyance occurs after the taxable year of sale, the seller reports the sale in the taxable year of sale and acquires a new basis in the property when it is reconveyed equal to the amount paid for the reconveyance.

Rev. Rul. 80-58

ISSUE

In the situations described below, what are the federal income tax consequences of a reconveyance to a taxpayer of property previously sold by the taxpayer?

FACTS

Situation 1: In February 1978, A, a calendar year taxpayer, sold a tract of land to B and received cash for the entire purchase price. The contract of sale obligated A, at the request of B, to accept reconveyance of the land from B if at any time within nine months of the date of sale, B was unable to have the land rezoned for B's business purposes. If there were a reconveyance under the contract, A and B would be placed in the same positions they were prior to the sale.

In October 1978, B determined that it was not possible to have the land rezoned and notified A of its intention to reconvey the land pursuant to the terms of the contract of sale. The reconveyance was consummated during October 1978, and the tract of land was returned to A, and B received back all amounts expended in connection with the transaction.

Situation 2: Same as above, except that the period within which B could reconvey the property to A was one year. In January 1979, B determined that it was not possible to have the land rezoned and notified A of its intention to reconvey the land pursuant to the terms of the contract of sale. The reconveyance was consummated during February 1979, and the tract of land was returned to A. B received back all amounts expended in connection with the transaction.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61(a)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that, except as otherwise provided, gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including gains derived from dealings in property.

Section 1001(c) of the Code provides that, except as otherwise provided, the entire amount of gain or loss, determined under section 1001, on the sale or exchange of property shall be recognized.

The legal concept of rescission refers to the abrogation, canceling, or voiding of a contract that has the effect of releasing the contracting parties from further obligations to each other and restoring the parties to the relative positions that they would have occupied had no contract been made. A rescission may be effected by mutual agreement of the parties, by one of the parties declaring a rescission of the contract without the consent of the other if sufficient grounds exist, or by applying to the court for a decree of rescission.

The annual accounting concept requires that one must look at the transaction on an annual basis using the facts as they exist at the end of the year. That is, each taxable year is a separate unit for tax accounting purposes. See Security Flour Mills Co. v. Commissioner, 321 U.S. 281 (1944), Ct. D. 1603, 1944 C.B. 526.

In Penn v. Robertson, 115 F.2d 167 (4th Cir. 1940), the taxpayer was a participant in an employees' stock benefit fund created by the directors of the company without the approval of the shareholders. Under the plan the taxpayer was credited with earnings from the fund for the years 1930 and 1931. In 1931, as a result of suits filed by a shareholder, the directors of the company passed a resolution whereby the plan would be rescinded as to all participants in the plan who agreed to relinquish their previous credits and rights. The United States Court of Appeals held that although the plan was rescinded for 1930, the annual accounting period principle required the determination of income at the close of the taxable year without regard to subsequent events. That is, the rescission in 1931 was disregarded for purposes of determining 1930 taxable income.

With regard to whether the 1931 income should be taxed, the Court of Appeals said in the Penn case that the rescission in 1931 extinguished what otherwise would have been taxable income for that year.

The facts of the Penn case are similar to those in Situation 1 and Situation 2. In Penn, earnings were credited in 1930 and 1931 and there was a rescission in 1931 (that was intended to affect both years). Situation 1 relates to the earnings credited in 1931, the year of the rescission; and Situation 2 relates to the earnings credited in 1930, that is, a year different from the year of the rescission.

In Situation 1 the rescission of the sale during 1978 placed A and B at the end of the taxable year in the same positions as they were prior to the sale. Thus, in light of the Penn case, the original sale is to be disregarded for federal income tax purposes because the rescission extinguished any taxable income for that year with regard to that transaction. See Rev. Rul. 74-501, 1974-2 C.B. 98, which holds that there is no adjustment to the basis of the old stock where a shareholder exercised stock rights and paid the subscription price for the new stock, which subscription price was later returned to the shareholder in the same taxable year in which the rights were issued because the market price of the stock had depreciated to a price below the subscription offer.

In Situation 2, as in Situation 1, there was a completed sale in 1978. However, unlike Situation 1, because only the sale and not the rescission occurred in 1978, at the end of 1978 A and B were not in the same positions as they were prior to the sale. Again, in light of the Penn case, the rescission in 1979 is disregarded with respect to the taxable events occurring in 1978.

In both situations, the annual accounting period principle requires the determination of income at the close of the taxable year without regard to subsequent events.

HOLDINGS

In Situation 1, no gain on the sale will be recognized by A under section 1001 of the Code.

In Situation 2, A must report the sale for 1978. In 1979, when the property was reconveyed to A, A acquired a new basis in the property, which was the price paid to B for such reconveyance.

See section 1038 of the Code for treatment of reacquisition of real property where a secured indebtedness to the original seller is involved.

Section 1402.—Definitions [Tax on Self-Employment Income]

26 CFR 1.1402(e)-2A: Ministers, members of religious orders and Christian Science practitioners; application for exemption from self-employment tax.

Social security coverage; exemption for religious reasons. The church referred to in Form 4361, Application for Exemption from Self-Employment Tax for Use by Ministers, Members of Religious Orders and Christian Science Practitioners, must be the church that ordained, commissioned, or licensed the minister who is applying for the exemption and must be a church described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(i) of the Code; Rev. Rul. 76-415 clarified.

Rev. Rul. 80-59

FACTS

Rev. Rul. 76-415, 1976-2 C.B. 255, holds that for the purpose of filing Form 4361, Application for Exemption from Self-Employment Tax for Use by Ministers, Members of Religious Orders and Christian Science Practitioners, an ordained, commissioned or licensed minister of a church is eligible to exercise the election contained in section 1402(e) of the Internal Revenue Code only if the minister is able to establish that the church qualifies as an organization exempt from income tax under section 501(a) as a religious organization described in section 501(c)(3).

HOLDING

The church referred to in the Form 4361 must be the church that ordained, commissioned, or licensed the minister. In addition to establishing that the church qualifies as being exempt from income tax under section 501(a) of the Code as a religious organization described in section 501(c)(3), the minister must also establish that the church (or convention or association of churches) is one described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(i).

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 76-415 is clarified.

Section 6041.—Information at Source

26 CFR 1.6041-1: Return of information as to payments of $600 or more.

Information returns; financial institution. A financial institution gives merchandise to an individual for inducing another person to make a time deposit. If the fair market value of the merchandise given to an individual during the calendar year is $600 or more, the institution is required to file information returns, Forms 1096 and 1099.

Rev. Rul. 80-61

ISSUE

Must a financial institution that gives merchandise to an individual for inducing another person to make a time deposit in the financial institution file information returns, Forms 1096 and 1099, reporting the fair market value of the merchandise given to the individual?

FACTS

A financial institution initiated a promotional campaign to obtain time deposit accounts. The financial institution gives merchandise with a value of $100 to $800 to any individual, not an employee, who induces another person to deposit a sum of money in a time deposit account. The value of the merchandise received depends on the amount of money deposited in the account. The fair market value of the merchandise received is includible in the individual's gross income under section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 6041(a) of the Code requires that all persons engaged in a trade or business and making payment in the course of such trade or business to another person of rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable gains, profits and income, of $600 or more in any taxable year, shall render a true and accurate return in such form and manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by the regulations.

Section 1.6041-1(a)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the return required by section 6041(a) of the Code shall be made on Forms 1096 and 1099.

Section 1.6041-1(c) of the regulations defines "fixed or determinable income." Income is fixed when it is paid in amounts definitely predetermined. Income is determinable whenever there is a basis of calculation by which the amount to be paid may be ascertained.

The fair market value of the merchandise received by the taxpayer is determinable income within the meaning of section 1.6041-1(c) of the regulations.

HOLDING

The financial institution is required to file Forms 1096 and 1099 if, during the calendar year, the fair market value of the merchandise given to an individual is $600 or more.

Notice.—Proposal to Designate a Depository for Annual Reports of Private Foundations

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Action on proposal.

SUMMARY: As a result of a Notice published August 27, 1979, in the Federal Register at page 50128 (44 F.R. 50128), 186 persons or organizations commented on the proposal to designate The Foundation Center as a depository for certain private foundation annual reports. The comments, both pro and con, have been given careful consideration by the Internal Revenue Service. For the reasons discussed below it has been decided not to implement this proposal.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Edmund J. Butler of the Exempt Organizations Technical Branch, Office of the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations): 202-566-4050 (not a toll-free number).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

RATIONALE FOR DECISION

Implementation of the proposal would result in conferring a private benefit on a non-governmental entity at the expense of other private organizations. While the expense to an individual organization that would result from designating The Foundation Center as a depository might be minor, no assurance can be given that other depositories or libraries would not request a similar designation. The Service would be obligated to give equal consideration to all such requests. If several organizations were to be designated as depositories, the additional paperwork burden on affected private foundations will be increased to an unwarranted degree.

The principal public benefit accruing from implementation of the proposal is alleged to be quicker access to grant-maker information if the annual reports were sent directly to a depository. However, each Internal Revenue regional service center microfilms three copies of the annual reports, keeps one and sends the others to the Philadelphia Service Center and to the National Office Freedom of Information Reading Room. The microfiche cards must be shipped within thirty days of receipt of the report. The Service will provide photocopies from or film copies of these microfiche cards for a fee to any citizen who requests them. Allowing for delays in mailing and processing, annual reports of any foundation can be in the hands of interested parties within 60 days of the time they are filed. Direct filing of these reports with a depository would not speed up this process sufficiently to provide an appreciable public benefit.

Section 6652(d)(3) of the Code requires a penalty to be assessed against any organization that does not meet the filing requirements of section 6056. This penalty would apply to failure to file with a designated depository. Enforcement of this provision would be impractical in the light of the funds available to the Service for handling exempt organization matters.

This document does not meet the criteria for significant regulations set forth in paragraph 8 of the Treasury Directive appearing in the Federal Register for Wednesday, November 8, 1978.

JEROME KURTZ,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

(Filed by the Office of the Federal Register on February 14, 1980, 8:45 a.m., and published in the issue of the Federal Register for February 15, 1980, 45 F.R. 10501)

Extension of Election to Deduct the Costs of Removing Architectural and Transportation Barriers to the Handicapped and Elderly

Announcement 80-29

Public Law 96-167 [1980-5 I.R.B. 12], extends the period for electing to deduct, rather than capitalize, the costs of removing architectural and transportation barriers to the handicapped and elderly (as described under section 190 of the Internal Revenue Code). Before the extension, the election to deduct these costs could be made for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976 and before January 1, 1980. Now, the election may be made for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976 and before January 1, 1983.

The election is made by identifying the deduction as a separate item on the taxpayer's income tax return for the taxable year. For the election to be valid, the return must be filed no later than the time (including any extensions) prescribed by law for filing the return.

Forms 3921, 3922, and 4629 Will Be Obsolete

Announcement 80-30

Public Law 96-167 [1980-5 I.R.B. 12], enacted December 29, 1979, repealed the statutory requirement for filing Form 3921, Exercise of a Qualified or Restricted Stock Option, and Form 3922, Transfer of Stock Acquired by Certain Options, effective for calendar years beginning after 1979. It also repealed the statutory requirement for filing Form 4629, Transfer of Property to an Exempt Organization, for transfers taking place after December 29, 1979. Therefore, Forms 3921, 3922, and 4629 will be obsolete for transactions occurring after the above effective dates.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on Subpart A, Tax Conventions and related Treasury Decisions and Revenue Rulings; Subpart B, Legislation and related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical Indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

State law exempts property passing to such charities from inheritance taxes and taxes the estate of the creator of a power of appointment upon the exercise of the power. A charitable deduction for the residue of the estate passing to the same charity is not reduced by the hypothetical state inheritance taxes that would be imposed upon the exercise of the power, if the donee of the power dies before exercising the power and before the due date for filing the estate tax return.

Rev. Rul. 80-60 [1]

ISSUE

Whether a taxpayer using a method of inventory valuation for "excess" inventory that is not in accordance with the Income Tax Regulations must change its method of accounting to a method permitted by the regulations, pursuant to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Thor Power Tool Co. v. Commissioner, 439 U.S. 522 (1979), 1979-1 C.B. 167.

FACTS

In the Thor Power case, the taxpayer used the "lower of cost or market" method of valuing inventories for both financial accounting and for income tax purposes. See section 1.471-4 of the regulations. The taxpayer wrote down what it regarded as "excess" inventory to its net realizable value which, in most cases, was determined to be scrap value. The taxpayer determined that these articles were "excess" inventory because they were held in excess of any reasonably foreseeable future demand although such inventory was not scrapped or sold at reduced prices. The taxpayer retained the excess items in inventory and continued to sell them at original prices. The taxpayer contended that by writing down "excess" inventory to scrap value, it thereby reduced its inventory to "market" (net realizable value) in accord with its "lower of cost or market" method of accounting. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue disallowed this write-down. (The taxpayer also wrote down the cost of inventory that was either promptly scrapped or actually sold at reduced prices below cost. The Commissioner allowed these write-downs.)

The Supreme Court in Thor Power stated that sections 446 and 471 of the Internal Revenue Code vests the Commissioner with wide discretion in determining whether a particular method of inventory accounting should be disallowed as not clearly reflecting income. The Court affirmed the lower court's decision, sustaining the Commissioner, that although the taxpayer's write-down of excess inventory did conform to the best accounting practice in the trade or business and thus satisfied the first test of section 1.471-2(a) of the regulations, it failed to satisfy the second test of section 1.471-2(a), that it clearly reflect the taxpayer's income. The Court stated that where a taxpayer, under the "lower of cost or market" method of accounting, values its inventory for tax purposes at "market" (replacement cost), the taxpayer is permitted to depart from replacement cost only in specified situations described in sections 1.471-2(c) and 1.471-4(b) of the regulations. When such a departure to a lower inventory valuation is made, the regulations require that it be substantiated by objective evidence of actual offerings, sales, or contract cancellations and further require that records of actual dispositions be kept. The Court concluded that because the taxpayer provided no objective evidence of the reduced market value of its excess inventory, its write-down was plainly inconsistent with the regulations and was properly disallowed by the Commissioner. The taxpayer could not have properly taken advantage of any permitted write-downs since it did not scrap its "excess" inventory nor sell or offer it for sale at prices below replacement cost.

The Thor Power case affirmed the method of accounting for inventory valuation established under the income tax regulations where the lower of cost or market method is applicable. In using the lower of cost or market method the regulations require a taxpayer having "excess" inventory to value such "excess" inventory at replacement cost (if lower than actual cost as defined in section 1.471-4 of the regulations) unless the goods have been scrapped, or they have been sold or offered for sale (at a lower price) within the meaning of the regulations under section 471 of the Code. (The "prescribed method.")

In Rev. Proc. 80-5, page 15, this Bulletin, the Commissioner has granted consent for taxpayers to change from a method of accounting for inventory valuation of "excess" inventory, that is not in accordance with the "prescribed method," to such "prescribed method." The Commissioner's consent is applicable for the taxpayer's first taxable year ending on or after December 25, 1979. In order to implement the decision of the Supreme Court and under the authority contained in section 1.446-1(e)(3)(ii) of the regulations, the Commissioner has prescribed certain procedures with respect to the change in method of accounting including a provision that will allow taxpayers to treat the change in method either as a change initiated by the taxpayer or as a change not initiated by the taxpayer.

LAW

Section 446(e) of the Code and section 1.446-1(e)(2)(i) of the regulations state that, except as otherwise provided, a taxpayer must secure the consent of the Commissioner before changing a method of accounting for federal income tax purposes. Section 1.446-1(e)(3)(i) provides, in relevant part, that except as otherwise provided in subdivision (ii), in order to secure the Commissioner's consent, the taxpayer must file an application on Form 3115 with the National Office within 180 days after the beginning of the taxable year in which the taxpayer desires to make the change. Subdivision (ii) provides that notwithstanding subdivision (i), the Commissioner may prescribe administrative procedures, subject to such limitations, terms, and conditions as he deems necessary to obtain his consent, to permit taxpayers to change their accounting methods to an acceptable method consistent with applicable regulations.

[1] Also released in News Release IR-80-19, dated February 8, 1980.

Section 481(a) of the Code provides, in part, that if a taxpayer's taxable income for any taxable year is computed under a method of accounting different from the method used for the preceding taxable year, then there shall be taken into account those adjustments which are determined to be necessary solely by reason of the change in order to prevent amounts from being duplicated or omitted. Section 481(c) provides that in the case of any change described in subsection (a), the taxpayer may, in such manner and subject to such conditions as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe, take the adjustments required by subsection (a)(2) into account in computing the tax for the taxable year or years permitted under such regulations.

Section 6011 of the Code provides that any person made liable for any tax imposed by this title, or for the collection thereof, shall make a return or statement according to the forms or regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

ANALYSIS

The requirement to secure the Commissioner's consent before changing a method of accounting was first required in 1919 by Section 212, Article 23, Regualtion 45 (T.D. 2873, 1 C.B. 58). Similar regulations were contained under the 1939 Code in regulation 118, section 39.41. These regulations were then codified in section 446(e) of the 1954 Code. The Senate Finance Committee expressly stated that section 446(e) was added to "codify existing regulations" (S. Rep. No. 1622, 83rd Cong., 2d Sess. 300 (1954)). The purpose of the regulations and the subsequent enactment of section 446(e) was to provide the Commissioner with the authority to monitor changes in method of accounting; to insure that no duplication or omission of items of income or expense resulted; and to allow the Commissioner to obtain agreement from the taxpayer as to the terms and conditions under which the change would be effected. At the same time section 446(e) was enacted, section 481 was also enacted to take into account those adjustments which are determined to be necessary solely by reason of the change in method of accounting.

In the Thor Power case, the Supreme Court determined that the method of inventory valuation did not clearly reflect income and, accordingly, was impermissible. Taxpayers and the Commissioner are bound by the decisions of the Supreme Court. Therefore, any taxpayer that is using a method of accounting of inventory valuation for writing down "excess" inventory that is not in accordance with the "prescribed method" must change such method of accounting to the "prescribed method." Consent under section 446(e) is required prior to a change in method of accounting. In Rev. Proc. 80-5 the Commissioner has granted advance consent for taxpayers who are using a method of inventory valuation of "excess" inventory that is not in accordance with the "prescribed method," to change to the "prescribed method" for the taxpayer's first taxable year ending on or after December 25, 1979. Therefore, section 446(e) does not prevent a taxpayer who is not using the "prescribed method" to change on the taxpayer's federal income tax return for the first taxable year ending on or after December 25, 1979, to the "prescribed method."

Taxpayers have an obligation to file returns prepared in accordance with appropriate laws and regulations; income tax return preparers are subject to a similar obligation in preparing returns. Therefore, if a taxpayer files a Federal income tax return not using the "prescribed method" of inventory valuation the taxpayer will have filed a return not in accordance with the law.

HOLDING

A taxpayer using a method of inventory valuation for "excess" inventory that is not in accordance with the "prescribed method" must change its method of accounting to such method for its first taxable year ending on or after December 25, 1979.

Homeowners' associations. Answers are provided to specific questions as to whether the conduct of certain activities will affect the exempt status under section 501(c)(4) of the Code of otherwise qualifying homeowners' associations; Rev. Rul. 74-99 clarified.

Rev. Rul. 80-63

The Internal Revenue Service has received several inquiries asking whether the conduct of certain activities will affect the exempt status under section 501(c)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of otherwise qualified homeowners' associations.

Section 501(c)(4) of the Code provides for exemption from federal income tax of civic leagues or organizations not organized for profit but operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare.

Section 1.501(c)(4)-1(a)(2)(i) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that an organization is operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare if it is primarily engaged in promoting in some way the common good and general welfare of the people of the community. An organization embraced within this section is one which is operated for the purpose of bringing about civic betterments and social improvements.

Rev. Rul. 72-102, 1972-1 C.B. 149, holds that certain nonprofit organizations of a type usually called homeowners' associations, which are formed to administer and enforce covenants for preserving the architecture and appearance of a housing development and to maintain streets, sidewalks, and other non-residential, non-commercial properties in the development of the type normally owned and maintained by a municipal government, may qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(4) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 74-99, 1974-1 C.B. 131, modified Rev. Rul. 72-102, to make clear that a homeowners' association of the kind described in Rev. Rul. 72-102 must, in addition to otherwise qualifying for exemption under section 501(c)(4) of the Code, satisfy the following requirements: (1) It must engage in activities that confer benefit on a community comprising a geographical unit which bears a reasonably recognizable relationship to an area ordinarily identified as a governmental subdivision or a unit or district thereof; (2) It must not conduct activities directed to the exterior maintenance of private residences; and (3) It owns and maintains only common areas or facilities such as roadways and parklands, sidewalks and street lights, access to, or the use and enjoyment of which is extended to members of the general public and is not restricted to members of the homeowners' association.

Specific questions that have been raised and their answers are as follows:

Question 1.

Does Rev. Rul. 74-99 contemplate that the term "community" for purposes of section 501(c)(4) of the Code embraces a minimum area or a certain number of howeowners?

Answer:

No. Rev. Rul. 74-99 states that it was not possible to formulate a precise definition of the term "community". The ruling merely indicates what the term is generally understood to mean. Whether a particular homeowners' association meets the requirements of conferring benefit on a community must be determined according to the facts and circumstances of the individual case. Thus, although the area represented by an association may not be a community within the meaning of that term as contemplated by Rev. Rul. 74-99, if the association's activities benefit a community, it may still qualify for exemption. For instance, if the association owns and maintains common areas and facilities for the use and enjoyment of the general public as distinguished from areas and facilities whose use and enjoyment is controlled and restricted to members of the association then it may satisfy the requirement of serving a community.

Question 2.

May a homeowners' association, which represents an area that is not a community, qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(4) of the Code if it restricts the use of its recreational facilities, such as swimming pools, tennis courts, and picnic areas, to members of the association?

Answer:

No. Rev. Rul. 74-99 points out that the use and enjoyment of the common areas owned and maintained by a homeowners' association must be extended to members of the general public, as distinguished from controlled use or access restricted to the members of the association. For purposes of Rev. Rul. 74-99, recreational facilities are included in the definition of "common areas".

Question 3.

Can a homeowners' association establish a separate organization to own and maintain recreational facilities and restrict their use to members of the association?

Answer:

Yes. An affiliated recreational organization that is operated totally separate from the howeowners' association may be exempt. See Rev. Rul. 69-281, 1969-1 C.B. 155, which holds that a social club providing exclusive and automatic membership to homeowners in a housing development, with no part of its earnings inuring to the benefit of any member, may qualify for exemption under section 501(c)(7) of the Code.

Question 4.

Can an exempt homeowners' association own and maintain parking facilities only for its members if it represents an area that is not a community?

Answer:

No. By providing these facilities only for the use of its members the association is operating for the private benefit of its members, and not for the promotion of social welfare within the meaning of section 501(c)(4) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 74-99 is clarified.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 10.—TEMPORARY INCOME TAX REGULATIONS UNDER PUBLIC LAW 93-625

Extension of 2-year grace period with respect to foreclosure property held by a real estate investment trust

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Amendment of Temporary Regulations.

SUMMARY: This document amends temporary income tax regulations that apply to an extension of the grace period for foreclosure property held by a real estate investment trust (REIT). Changes in the applicable law were made by the Revenue Act of 1978, Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, (the 1978 Act).

DATES: The amendment applies to certain foreclosure property the grace period (including extensions) for which expires after December 31, 1977. The amendment extends the deadline for filing certain requests for an extension of the grace period until March 28, 1980.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

Section 856(e)(3) of the Code provides rules for extensions of the 2-year grace period for foreclosure property held by a REIT. Before amendment by the 1978 Act, section 856(e)(3) provided that the Secretary or his delegate could grant a REIT no more than two extensions, neither of which could exceed 1 year. The 1978 Act amended section 856(e)(3) to allow any number of extensions, subject to the limitation that the grace period cannot be extended beyond the date that is 6 years after the REIT acquired the property. The amendment to the regulations made by this document makes clear that the 1978 Act amendment is effective for extensions granted after November 6, 1978, with respect to extension periods beginning after December 31, 1977.

Section 10.3 of the Income Tax Regulations (temporary regulations containing rules for extensions of the grace period) provides that, in general, a request for an extension must be filed more than 60 days before the date the grace period would otherwise expire. The 1978 Act amendment to section 856(e)(3), however, in effect allows a retroactive additional extension of grace periods that could not be extended beyond November 6, 1978, under prior law. Accordingly, this document provides an exception to the general filing deadline for REITs that would have been barred from being granted an extension by the limitation on the number and length of extensions in section 856(e)(3), as in effect before the 1978 Act. The extended filing period under this exception expires on March 28, 1980.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Charles M. Whedbee of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

WAIVER OF CERTAIN PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS OF FINAL TREASURY DIRECTIVE

A determination has been made by Jerome Kurtz, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, that there is need for immediate guidance in order to make clear that the amendment to section 856(e)(3) of the Code made by section 363(c) of the Revenue Act of 1978 allows real estate investment trusts to be granted extensions of certain foreclosure property grace periods that could not have been extended under prior law and would otherwise expire after December 31, 1977. Because of the immediate need for this regulation, compliance with the procedural requirements of paragraphs 8 through 14 of the final Treasury directive (43 FR 52121), relating to improving regulations, would be impractical and, therefore, these requirements have not been followed.

Adoption of amendment to the regulations

Accordingly, section 10.3 of 26 CFR Part 10 is amended as follows:

1. The second sentence of paragraph (c)(1) is deleted and two new sentences are inserted in lieu thereof, to read as set forth below.

2. Paragraph (d)(2) is revised to read as set forth below.

§ 10.3 Extension of 2-year grace period with respect to foreclosure property held by a real estate investment trust.

* * * * *

(c) Extension of grace period—(1) * * * In the case of extensions granted after November 6, 1978, with respect to extension periods beginning after December 31, 1977, the district director may grant one or more extensions of the grace period for the property, subject to the limitation that no extension shall extend the grace period beyond the date which is 6 years after the date the REIT acquired the property. In any other case, an extension shall be for a period of not more than 1 year, and not more than two such extensions shall be granted with respect to the property. * * *

* * * * *

(d) Time for requesting an extension of the grace period. * * *

(2) Exceptions. (i) In the case of a grace period which would otherwise expire before August 6, 1976, a request for an extension will be considered to be timely filed if filed on or before June 7, 1976.

(ii) In the case of an extension period beginning after December 31, 1977, a request for an extension filed on or before March 28, 1980 will be considered to be timely if the limitation on the number and length of extensions in section 856(e)(3), as in effect before the amendment made by section 363(c) of the Revenue Act of 1978, would have barred the extension.

* * * * *

There is a need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it is found impracticable to issue it with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Section 861.—Income from Sources within the United States

26 CFR 1.861-1: Income from sources within the United States.
(Also Sections 638, 883; 1.638-1, 1.883-1.)

Income source; U.S. outer continental shelf; exploratory drilling. Income derived by a foreign corporation from exploratory drilling in the outer continental shelf of the U.S. is income from sources within the U.S. for purposes of section 861 of the Code and is not excludable from gross income under section 883(a).

Rev. Rul. 80-64

ISSUES

(1) Is income derived from exploratory drilling in the outer continental shelf of the United States income from sources within the United States for purposes of section 861 of the Internal Revenue Code?

(2) Is this income excludable from gross income under section 883(a) of the Code?

FACTS

X, a corporation organized under the laws of foreign country M, was hired to perform a Continental Offshore Stratigraphic Test (COST) project in the outer continental shelf of the United States.

A COST project drills to get information about the soil conditions before an offshore lease transaction is entered into. The drilling is done to obtain core samples of the subsoil and not to develop or remove oil or gas.

X used a dynamic positioning drill ship to perform the COST project. The ship, which is documented under the laws of foreign country M, was chartered by X from Z corporation, and was operated by X's employees. This type of ship does not anchor while on location. It floats above the seabed or subsoil except for the drill pipe and bit that penetrates the seabed and subsoil in drilling.

Foreign country M grants an exemption to United States citizens and corporations that is equivalent to the exemption provided by section 883(a) of the Code.

LAW AND ANALYSIS—ISSUE I

Section 861(a)(3) of the Code provides that compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States is treated as gross income from sources within the United States.

Under sections 638 of the Code and 1.638-1(a)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations, for purposes of provisions dealing with the performance of personal services, including section 861(a)(3), with respect to mines, oil and gas wells, and other natural deposits the term "United States," when used in a geographical sense, includes the seabed and subsoil of the submarine areas adjacent to the territorial waters of the United States over which the United States has exclusive rights, in accordance with international law, with respect to the exploration for and exploitation of natural resources.

Section 1.638-1(c)(1) of the regulations provides that persons, property, or activities that are engaged in or related to the exploration for or exploitation of mines, oil and gas wells, or other natural deposits need not be physically upon, connected, or attached to the seabed or subsoil to be deemed to be within the United States.

In Example (5) of section 1.638-1(f) of the regulations, a ship chartered from a domestic corporation and operated by the domestic corporation's personnel, explored for oil in the continental shelf of foreign country Y. Foreign country Y exercises taxing jurisdiction with respect to the exploration for or exploitation of natural resources as provided in section 1.638-1(b). The ship is treated as being within foreign country Y under section 638 of the Code for the period it was exploring for oil in the foreign continental shelf.

Example (5) of section 1.638-1(f) of the regulations illustrates by analogy that section 638 of the Code extends United States taxing jurisdiction to a drill ship operating in the United States continental shelf even though the ship does not rest on, or is not anchored to, the seabed and does not penetrate the subsoil except to remove core samples.

LAW AND ANALYSIS—ISSUE 2

Section 883(a)(1) of the Code provides that earnings derived from the operation of a ship documented under the laws of a foreign country that grants an equivalent exemption to United States citizens and corporations is not included in the gross income of a foreign corporation. Section 883(a)(2) and (a)(3) grant this same exemption to earnings derived from the operation of aircraft and railroad rolling stock.

Although section 883(a) of the Code excludes from gross income earnings derived from several types of transportation activities, it does not extend to nontransportation activities such as those undertaken by X. In the present situation, X's earnings were not derived from the "operation of a ship," as that phrase is used in section 883(a)(1), but rather from X's exploratory drilling activities. See Rev. Rul. 74-170, 1974-1 C.B. 175, which concerns whether a taxpayer has earnings derived from the operation of a ship in four specific situations.

HOLDINGS

(1) Income derived from exploratory drilling in the outer continental shelf of the United States is income from sources within the United States for purposes of section 861 of the Code.

(2) This income is not excludable from gross income under section 883(a) of the Code.

Reimbursement attributable to the first $100 of a casualty loss that is not an allowable deduction and that did not give rise to a tax benefit is not includible in gross income. Rev. Rul. 74-206 amplified and clarified.

Rev. Rul. 80-65

ISSUE AND FACTS

The Internal Revenue Service has received inquiries as to whether the principles set forth in Rev. Rul. 74-206, 1974-1 C.B. 198, with respect to residential property are applicable to property held in a trade or business within the meaning of section 1231(b) of the Internal Revenue Code.

Rev. Rul. 74-206 explains the application and interaction of section 1033 of the Code, which relates to the nonrecognition of gain resulting from the involuntary conversion of property, and section 165, which relates to the allowance of casualty loss deductions, in a factual situation involving the destruction of a taxpayer's residence by a flood and its subsequent replacement.

HOLDING

The principles set forth in Rev. Rul. 74-206 with respect to residential property are equally applicable to property held in a trade or business within the meaning of section 1231(b) of the Code.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 74-206 is amplified.

Rev. Rul. 74-206 is also clarified t take into account the $100 limitatio provided in section 165(c)(3) of th Code on the amount of loss allowabl as a deduction with respect to losses o property not connected with a trade o business. Section 1.165-7(b)(4) of th Income Tax Regulations provides tha the deduction allowable for a loss tha is sustained in respect of property no used in a trade or business or for income producing purposes from a singl casualty shall be limited to that portio of the loss that is in excess of $100 that is, the first $100 is not allowabl as a deduction. Therefore, the reimbursement attributable to this amoun will not be taken into gross income because it did not give rise to a ta benefit.

Section 2055.—Transfers for Public, Charitable, and Religious Uses

26 CFR 20.2055-2: Transfers not exclusively for charitable purposes.

Charitable deduction; residuar estate; state inheritance taxes. A decedent's will created a trust giving an individual a lifetime incom interest and a testamentary genera power of appointment over th corpus. Failure to exercise th power of appointment would caus the trust corpus to pass to a charit described in section 2055(a) of th Code. State law exempts propert passing to such charities from inheritance taxes and taxes the estat of the creator of a power of appointment upon the exercise of th power. A charitable deduction fo the residue of the estate passing to the same charity is not reduced by the hypothetical state inheritance taxes that would be imposed upon the exercise of the power, if the donee of the power dies before exercising the power and before the due date for filing the state tax return.

Rev. Rul. 80-66

ISSUE

Is the amount of the charitable deduction allowable under section 2055 of the Internal Revenue Code reduced by the amount of state inheritance taxes that could have been imposed upon the exercise of a power of appointment over the assets in a trust and that would have been payable from the residue of the estate passing to charity, if the donee of the power dies before the due date for filing the federal estate tax return, without having exercised the power?

D, a resident of State X, died in 1978. D's will provides for the creation of a trust, in which A has the right to all the income during life and a testamentary general power of appointment over the trust corpus. If A does not exercise the power of appointment, the trust corpus passes to Y Charity. The will also provides that the residue of the estate, after the payment of all debts, expenses and taxes arising by reason of D's death, passes to Y Charity, an organization that meets the requirements of section 2055(a) of the Code and that is a qualified charitable organization under the law of State X.

Under the inheritance tax law of State X, property subject to a power of appointment is taxed only as a part of the estate of the person creating the power. The rate of tax is based on the classes of the persons who receive the property upon the donee's exercise or nonexercise of the power of appointment. Property passing to qualified charitable organizations is exempt from inheritance tax.

A died three months after D, and before the due date for filing D's estate tax return. A did not exercise the testamentary power of appointment over the trust created by D's will.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2055(a) of the Code provides that, for purposes of the estate tax, the value of the taxable estate shall be determined by deducting from the value of the gross estate the amount of all bequests, legacies, devises, or transfers to or for the use of charity. Section 2055(a) also provides that if a power to consume, invade or appropriate property for the benefit of an individual is completely terminated by the death of the individual before the date prescribed for filing the decedent's estate tax return (including extensions granted under section 6081) and before such power has been exercised, the termination of the power shall be deemed to be a qualified disclaimer with the same force and effect as though the individual had filed such a disclaimer. See section 20.2055-2(c)(2) of the Estate Tax Regulations.

Section 2055(c) of the Code provides that the amount of the charitable deduction shall be reduced by the inheritance taxes which are required to be paid out of the bequests, legacies, or devises passing to charity.

In the present situation, A died without having exercised the power of appointment over the trust created by D's will. A's death operates to terminate A's power to appoint the trust corpus. Such a termination prior to the due date for filing D's estate tax return is deemed to be a qualified disclaimer under section 2055(a). Because the power is deemed disclaimed for purposes of section 2055(a) and, under the laws of State X, no inheritance tax will be imposed on the trust corpus, the amount of the charitable deduction is not reduced by the maximum hypothetical state inheritance tax that would have been imposed, if A had exercised the power of appointment. See Farmers Trust Company v. United States, 458 F. Supp. 94 (M.D. Pa. 1978).

The present situation is distinguishable from the situations presented in Brook's Estate v. Commissioner, 250 F.2d 937 (3rd Cir. 1958), and Connecticut Bank and Trust Company v. United States, 439 F.2d 931 (2nd Cir. 1971), in which the holders of the powers of appointment were living on the date the estate tax returns were due. In each case, the amount of the charitable deduction was reduced by the maximum amount of state inheritance taxes that could be imposed upon the exercise of the power of appointment and that would be payable from the property otherwise passing to charity.

HOLDING

The charitable deduction allowable for the residue of the estate is not reduced by the hypothetical state inheritance taxes that would be imposed upon the exercise of a power of appointment over trust property, if the donee of the power dies before the due date for filing the decedent's estate tax return, without having exercised the power.

Withholding; false Form W-4 information. An employer must request another Form W-4, Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate, from an employee who indicates, other than on Form W-4, on or before the date on which the employee furnishes a Form W-4 to the employer, that the name, address, social security number, or number of exemptions shown on the employee's Form W-4 is false. If the employee fails to provide a valid Form W-4, the employer must withhold income tax from the employee as from a single person claiming no exemptions.

Rev. Rul. 80-68

ISSUE

What is an employer's obligation if an employee indicates that the name, address, social security number, or the number of exemptions shown on his or her Form W-4, Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate, is false where such indication is not on the Form W-4 itself?

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 3402(f)(2)(A) of the Code provides that on or before the date of commencement of employment with an employer, the employee shall furnish the employer with a signed withholding exemption certificate relating to the number of withholding exemptions which the employee claims, which shall in no event exceed the number to which the employee is entitled.

Section 31.3402(f)(2)-1(e) of the Employment Tax Regulations provides that a withholding exemption certificate is invalid if the employee clearly indicates it to be false by an oral statement or a written statement (other than one made on the certificate itself) made to the employer on or before the date on which the employee furnishes the certificate. It also provides that, if the employer receives an invalid certificate and the employee does not subsequently submit a valid certificate, the employer must withhold from the employee as from a single person claiming no exemptions for withholding purposes.

HOLDING

If on or before the date on which an employee furnishes a Form W-4 to his or her employer, the employee indicates to the employer, other than on the Form W-4 itself, that the name, address, social security number, or the number of exemptions shown on the Form W-4 is false, the Form W-4 is invalid. Therefore, the employer must request another Form W-4 from the employee, and if the employee fails to provide a valid Form W-4, the employer must withhold from the employee as from a single person claiming no exemptions.

26 CFR 601.204: Changes in accounting periods and in methods of accounting.
(Also Part I, Sections 446, 471, 481; 1.446-1, 1.471-2, 1.481-1.)

Rev. Proc. 80-5 [1]

SECTION 1. PURPOSE AND SCOPE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide a procedure for taxpayers to change their method of accounting for "excess" inventory pursuant to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Thor Power Tool v. Commissioner, 439 U.S. 522 (1979), Ct. D. 1996, 1979-1 C.B. 167. This procedure is mandatory for the first taxable year (calendar or fiscal) ending on or after December 25, 1979. See Rev. Rul. 80-60, page 5, this Bulletin.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 In the Thor Power case, the taxpayer used the "lower of cost or market" method of valuing inventories for both financial accounting and for income tax purposes. See section 1.471-4 of the Income Tax Regulations. The taxpayer wrote down what it regarded as "excess" inventory to its net realizable value which, in most cases, was determined to be scrap value. The taxpayer determined that these articles were excess inventory because they were held in excess of any reasonably foreseeable future demand although such inventory was not scrapped or sold at reduced prices. The taxpayer retained the excess items in inventory and continued to sell them at original prices. The taxpayer contended that by writing down excess inventory to scrap value, it thereby reduced its inventory to "market" (net realizable value) in accord with its "lower of cost or market" method of accounting. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue disallowed this write-down. (The taxpayer also wrote down the cost of inventory that was either promptly scrapped or actually sold at reduced prices below cost. The Commissioner allowed these write-downs.)

The Supreme Court in Thor Power stated that sections 446 and 471 of the Internal Revenue Code vests the Commissioner with wide discretion in determining whether a particular method of inventory accounting should be disallowed as not clearly reflecting income. The Court affirmed the lower court's decision, sustaining the Commissioner, that although the taxpayer's write-down of excess inventory did conform to the best accounting practice in the trade or business and thus satisfied the first test of section 1.471-2(a) of the regulations, it failed to satisfy the second test of section 1.471-2(a), that it clearly reflect the taxpayer's income. The Court stated that where a taxpayer, under the "lower of cost or market" method of accounting, values its inventory for tax purposes at "market" (replacement cost), the taxpayer is permitted to depart from replacement cost only in specified situations described in sections 1.471-2(c) and 1.471-4(b) of the regulations. When such a departure to a lower inventory valuation is made, the regulations require that it be substantiated by objective evidence of actual offerings, sales, or contract cancellations and further require that records of actual dispositions be kept. The Court concluded that because the taxpayer provided no objective evidence of the reduced market value of its excess inventory, its write-down was plainly inconsistent with the regulations and was properly disallowed by the Commissioner. The taxpayer could not have properly taken advantage of any permitted write-downs since it did not scrap its "excess" inventory nor sell or offer it for sale at prices below replacement cost.

.02 The Thor Power case affirmed the method of accounting for inventory valuation established under the income tax regulations where the lower of cost or market method is applicable. In using the lower of cost or market method the regulations require a taxpayer having "excess" inventory to value such "excess" inventory at replacement cost (if lower than actual cost as defined in section 1.471-4 of the regulations) unless the goods have been scrapped, or they have been sold or offered for sale (at a lower price) within the meaning of the regulations under section 471 of the Code. (The "prescribed method.")

.03 Although the Thor Power case involved a method of inventory write-down that the taxpayer had initiated in the year in question, the Supreme Court's decision clearly applies to a taxpayer that has been consistently taking prohibited inventory write-downs described in the Thor Power decision. See Will-Burt Co. v. Commissioner, 38 T.C.M. 861 (1979).

.04 Section 446(e) of the Code and section 1.446-1(e)(2)(i) of the regulations state that, except as otherwise provided, a taxpayer must secure the consent of the Commissioner before changing a method of accounting for Federal income tax purposes. Section 1.446-1(e)(3)(i) provides, in relevant part, that except as otherwise provided in subdivision (ii), in order to secure the Commissioner's consent, the taxpayer must file an application on Form 3115 with the National Office within 180 days after the beginning of the taxable year in which the taxpayer desires to make the change. Subdivision (ii) provides that notwithstanding subdivision (i), the Commissioner may prescribe administrative procedures, subject to such limitations, terms, and conditions as he deems necessary to obtain his consent, to permit taxpayers to change their accounting methods to an acceptable method consistent with applicable regulations.

Section 481(a) of the Code provides, in part, that if a taxpayer's taxable income for any taxable year is computed under a method of accounting different from the method used for the preceding taxable year, then there shall be taken into account those adjustments which are determined to be necessary solely by reason of the change in order to prevent amounts from being duplicated or omitted. Section 481(c) provides that in the case of any change described in subsection (a), the taxpayer may, in such manner and subject to such conditions as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe, take the adjustments required by subsection (a)(2) into account in computing the tax for the taxable year or years permitted under such regulations.

SEC. 3. APPLICATION

.01 In accordance with section 1.446-1(e)(3)(ii) of the regulations the 180 day rule is waived and consent is hereby granted taxpayers to change from a method of accounting for inventory valuation of "excess" inventory, that is not in accordance with the "prescribed method," to such "prescribed method." See section 2.02 above. Such consent is granted for the first taxable year ending on or after December 25, 1979, and shall be made in accordance with the provisions of this revenue procedure, including the adjustment under section 481(a) described in section 3.03 below.

.02 Pursuant to the consent granted in section 3.01, a taxpayer that is using a method of accounting for inventory valuation by writing down "excess" inventory in a manner that is not in accordance with the "prescribed method" must change such method of accounting to the "prescribed method" on its federal income tax return for the first taxable year ending on or after December 25, 1979. See Rev. Rul. 80-60.

.03 An adjustment is required to prevent amounts of income from being duplicated or omitted within the meaning of section 481 of the Code and the regulations thereunder when the change in method of accounting is made pursuant to the provisions set forth in this revenue procedure. Such adjustment, whether positive or negative, referred to as the "net section 481(a) adjustment," shall be taken into account as provided in either section 3.04 or section 3.05 below.

.04(1) The taxpayer may treat the change in method of accounting as a change initiated by the taxpayer. In such case, unless otherwise provided in this revenue procedure, the net section 481(a) adjustment shall be taken into account ratably over a period of taxable years equal to the number of taxable years the taxpayer used a method of accounting where inventory was written down using an impermissible method. This period may not exceed 10 taxable years. In addition, the rules described in sections 3.07, 3.08, and 3.09 apply.

(2) When the entire net amount of an adjustment is attributable to the taxable year immediately preceding the year of change (first preceding year), the total net adjustment will be taken into account in computing taxable income for the year of change. The amount attributable to the taxable year immediately preceding the year of change is the difference in the amount required under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change and the amount that would have been required under section 481(a) if the same change in accounting method had been made in such preceding year.

(3) When 67 percent or more of the net amount of an adjustment is attributable to the 1 taxable year period, 2 taxable year period, or 3 taxable year period immediately preceding the year of change, the highest percent attributable to such 1, 2, or 3 taxable year period will be taken into account ratably over a 3 taxable year period beginning with the year of change. An amount attributable to such 1, 2, or 3 taxable year period is the difference in the amount required under section 481(a) of the Code for the year of change and the amount that would have been required under section 481(a) if the same change in accounting method had been made at the beginning of such preceding 1, 2, or 3 taxable year period. Any remaining balance will be taken into account ratably over an additional period equal to the remainder of the number of taxable years the taxpayer has used the accounting method that is being changed. However, the total adjustment period will not exceed 10 taxable years. This paragraph 3.04(3) only applies if the taxpayer has used the method being changed for at least 3 taxable years and the entire amount of the adjustment is not attributable to the taxable year immediately preceding the year of change.

(4) In all other situations the total net adjustment will be taken into account ratably over the number of taxable years (not to exceed 10) the taxpayer has used the accounting method that is being changed.

(5) See section 4 of this revenue procedure for an example of the computation of a net section 481(a) adjustment pursuant to this revenue procedure where the taxpayer elected to treat the change in accounting method as a change initiated by the taxpayer.

.05 The taxpayer may treat the change in method of accounting as a change not initiated by the taxpayer within the meaning of section 481(a)(2) of the Code. In such case, the net section 481(a) adjustment, as modified by the "pre-1954 Code years" adjustment described in section 1.481-3 of the regulations, shall be taken into account in the year of change in full; in addition, see section 481(b) for the limitation on tax. See section 4 of this revenue procedure for an example of the computation of a net section 481(a) adjustment where the taxpayer elected to treat the change in accounting method as a change not initiated by the taxpayer.

.06 This Revenue Procedure does not apply to a taxpayer that has used a method of accounting for inventory valuation of "excess goods" that is not in accordance with the "prescribed method" and the use of such impermissible method has been raised and is pending as an issue as of February 8, 1980, in connection with the examination of the taxpayer's federal income tax return. In such case, Rev. Proc. 70-27, 1970-2 C.B. 509, clarified by Rev. Proc. 75-18, 1975-1 C.B. 687, and as subsequently modified or superseded, is available.

.07 If a taxpayer elects the last-in, first-out (LIFO) method of inventory valuation during the "spread period" referred to in section 3.04, the balance of the unamortized section 481(a) adjustment, referred to in section 3.03, must be taken into account in full as an item of ordinary income in the year for which such election is made.

.08 If at the end of any taxable year during the "spread period" referred to in section 3.04, if the value of the taxpayer's inventory as of the last day of any taxable year is reduced by more than 33⅓ percent of the inventory valued at the beginning of the first taxable year ending on or after December 25, 1979 (see section 3.03), the balance of the unamortized net section 481(a) adjustment at such time, must be taken into account in full as an item of ordinary income in the year of such inventory reduction. This section shall not apply in the event such reduction is attributable to a strike or involuntary conversion.

.09 (a) With respect to a corporation:

If the taxpayer ceases to engage in the trade or business, to which this adjustment (section 3.03) relates, at any time prior to the expiration of the "spread period" referred to in section 3.04, the taxpayer will take into account in such year the balance of the adjustment not previously taken into account in computing taxable income. For purposes of this condition, the taxpayer is not considered to have ceased the trade or business if such cessation is the result of a transaction to which section 381 of the Code applies, but in such case the acquiring corporation shall continue to be subject to this revenue procedure as though it were the acquired corporation.

(b) With respect to a partnership:

In the event the partnership terminates or ceases to engage in the trade or business, to which this adjustment (section 3.03) relates, at any time prior to the expiration of the "spread period" referred to in section 3.04, the balance of the adjustment not previously taken into account in computing ordinary income shall be taken into account in such year. A partnership ceasing to engage in the trade or business includes the incorporation of such trade or business in a transaction to which section 351 of the Code applies; see Rev. Rul. 77-264, 1977-2 C.B. 187.

(c) With respect to a sole proprietor:

If the taxpayer ceases to engage in the trade or business, to which this adjustment (section 3.03) relates, at any time prior to the expiration of the "spread period" referred to in section 3.04, the balance of the adjustment not previously taken into account in computing taxable income shall be taken into account in such year. A sole proprietor ceasing to engage in the trade or business includes the incorporation of such trade or business in a transaction to which section 351 of the Code applies; see Rev. Rul. 77-264, 1977-2 C.B. 187.

Sec. 4. Example (1)

X is a domestic corporation incorporated in 1950 and engaged in the business of manufacturing that reports its income on a calendar year basis. In the normal course of its business, X maintains an inventory of replacement parts for its products for sale to the public. X has consistently written down the value of excess inventory of replacement parts as a result of anticipated losses with respect to such inventory. As of December 31, 1978, X had on hand inventory items which it had written down to its estimate of scrap value by taking an inventory write-down for excess goods in the amount of $100,000. The write-down by X did not conform with the regulations under section 471 of the Code.

X filed a Form 3115 (Application for Change in Method of Accounting) with its tax return for taxable year 1979 in accordance with the provisions set forth in section 5 of this revenue procedure. Accordingly, X restored the write-down of $100,000 to its opening inventory for the taxable year 1979. As a result of such restoration, X will, in effect, receive a double deduction through the cost of goods sold in the amount of $100,000. Thus, under section 481(a) of the Code, an adjustment is necessary solely by reason of the change in method of accounting in order to prevent the $100,000 from being duplicated. Less than 67 percent of the adjustment is attributable to taxable years 1976, 1977, and 1978. If X had changed its method of accounting in 1954, the adjustment would have been $10,000.

If X elects to treat its change in method of accounting as a change initiated by the taxpayer pursuant to section 3.04 above, an adjustment in the amount of $100,000 shall be taken into account as an item of gross income ratably over 10 taxable years (1/10 each year).

If X elects to treat its change in method of accounting as a change not initiated by the taxpayer pursuant to section 3.05 above, an adjustment in the amount of $90,000 ($100,000 — $10,000) shall be taken into account as an item of gross income in taxable year 1979, the year of change. The tax for 1979 on the adjustment shall be limited as provided in section 481(b) of the Code.

Example (2)

The facts are the same as presented in Example (1) with the exception that X has used the improper write-down method for 6 taxable years and the net section 481(a) adjustment if the year of change had been one of the 3 preceding taxable years, would have been $60,000 in 1976, $28,000 in 1977, and $50,000 in 1978. In this example, the difference between the net section 481(a) adjustment if the year of change had been 1977, and such adjustment in 1979, the year of change, is more than 67% ($100,000—$28,000 =$72,000/$100,000=72%) and represents the highest percent of the adjustment attributable to any one of the 1, 2, or 3 taxable year period preceding the year of change. Under the provisions of section 3.04 of this revenue procedure the adjustment for 1979 of $100,000, therefore, shall be taken into account in the amount of $24,000 in 1979, 1980, and 1981 ($72,000 spread ratably over 3 years) and $9,333 in 1982, 1983, and 1984 (the remainder of $28,000 from the $100,000 adjustment spread over 3 years, the remaining number of years that X used the accounting method that is being changed).

Sec. 5. Manner of Effecting the Change

.01 Taxpayers to which this revenue procedure applies must effect the change in their methods of accounting for their first taxable year ending on or after December 25, 1979, pursuant to the provisions set forth in this revenue procedure by filing a Form 3115 in duplicate. The original shall be attached to the taxpayer's timely filed federal income tax return for such year or to an amended return for such year filed no later than the extended time period prescribed in section 6081 of the Code and regulations thereunder. For example, a domestic corporation whose taxable year ends December 31, 1979, must effect the change described in this revenue procedure on an original timely filed return, or on an amended return filed no later than September 15, 1980. At the same time a copy of the Form 3115 shall be filed with the National Office addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: T:C:C:1, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. In addition to the information on Form 3115, the taxpayer must state whether section 3.04 or section 3.05 has been applied and must provide (1) a computation of the net section 481(a) adjustment, (2) the pre-1954 Code year adjustment, if applicable, and (3) the period over which the net section 481(a) adjustment will be taken into account and the basis for such conclusion. The National Office will sample the Form 3115's to determine whether the requirements of this revenue procedure have been followed. The National Office or the District Director may advise the taxpayer of required adjustments to the change in method of inventory valuation. Any adjustment made by the National Office will be limited to those necessary to properly comply with this revenue procedure.

.02 In order to assist in the processing of these changes in methods of accounting and to insure proper handling, reference to this revenue procedure shall be made a part of the Form 3115 by either typing or legibly printing the following statement: "FILED UNDER REV. PROC. 80-5."

SEC. 6. INQUIRIES

Inquiries regarding this revenue procedure may be addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: T:C:C:1, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

Rev. Proc. 80-8

PART "A" GENERAL

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

.01 The purpose of this Revenue Procedure is to provide the requirements and conditions for submitting certain Forms W-4, Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificates, on magnetic tape instead of filing paper returns. All employers are required to send to the Internal Revenue Service copies of all Forms W-4 submitted by their employees who claim the following:

(a) 10 or more withholding allowances, or

(b) exempt status and usually earn more than $200 a week at the time the Form W-4 was filed.

Forms W-4 information may be filed on magnetic tape and sent quarterly to the Service beginning with the quarter ending June 30, 1980. The due date for the first submission of Forms W-4 on magnetic tape to the Internal Revenue Service is July 31, 1980.

SEC. 2. APPLICATION FOR TAPE REPORTING

.01 Tape reporting is not restricted to employers with the ability to submit all their information on magnetic tape; a combination of tape records and paper documents is acceptable as long as there is no duplication or omission of documents.

.02 Employers or transmitters who desire to file statements in the form of magnetic tape must first file a letter of application. This letter should be addressed to the attention of the magnetic media coordinator of one of the following service centers:

The letter of request must contain the following:

(a) Name, address, and employer identification number of the person, organization, or entity making the request.

(b) Name, title, and telephone number of the person to contact regarding the request.

(c) Estimate of the number of Forms W-4 to be reported in tape format, and the number, if any, expected to be reported on copies of paper Forms W-4.

(d) Type and nature of equipment to be used to prepare the tape; i.e., manufacturer and model of the mainframe and tape drives, tape width (½", ¾", etc.), density (characters per inch), recording code (BCD, Excess 3, Octal, etc.).

(e) Signature of the official responsible for the preparation and submission of Forms W-4 to the Service.

.03 The Service will act on applications and notify applicants of authorization to file or of disapproval within 30 days of receipt of an application. No magnetic tape returns may be filed with the Service until authorization to file is received.

.04 Only employers or transmitters using equipment compatible with the Service's equipment will have their applications approved. Compatible tape characteristics are shown in PART "B" Section 1.01.

.05 In general, once authorization to file on magnetic tape has been granted, such approval will continue in effect in succeeding years, providing that the requirements of this Revenue Procedure are met and there are no equipment changes by the employer or transmitter. However, new applications are required whenever any of the following situations arise:

(a) If the users change from equipment producing compatible tapes.

(b) If the users submit tapes that are not listed as compatible.

(c) If the users discontinue tape reporting for one or more years, then decide to resume this method of reporting.

SEC. 3. FILING DATES

.01 Magnetic tape reporting to the Service must be quarterly, following the quarter ending due dates below:

Period Covered	Due Date
Jan. 1 thru March 31	April 30
Apr. 1 thru June 30	July 31
July 1 thru Sept. 30	October 31
Oct. 1 thru Dec. 31	January 31

The first due date of either paper or tape Forms W-4 is July 31, 1980.

SEC. 4. FILING OF TAPE REPORTS

.01 Packaging, shipping, and mailing instructions will be provided by the Service to all approved filers within 45 days of the granting of approval. A magnetic tape reporting package, which includes all necessary transmittals and labels, will be mailed to all approved filers.

.02 Employers or transmitters may submit a portion of their Forms W-4 information on magnetic tape and the remainder on paper forms, provided there is NO DUPLICATE FILING. The magnetic tape records and paper forms must be filed at the same location, i.e., the appropriate service center, but in separate shipments. A Service-provided transmittal form must accompany all magnetic tape shipments to the service center. (For all paper Forms W-4 sent to IRS, employers or transmitters must supply a cover letter which includes the employer's name, address, employer identification number, and number of Forms W-4 being submitted.)

.03 The affidavit which appears on the Service-provided transmittal for tape submission must be signed by the employer, the transmitter, service bureau, or disbursing agent who must:

a. have the authority to sign the affidavit under an agency agreement (either oral, written, or implied) that is valid under State law; and

b. have the responsibility (either oral, written, or implied) conferred on it by the employer to request taxpayer identifying numbers of employees reported on magnetic tape or paper returns; and

c. sign the affidavit and add the caption "For: (name of employer)."

.04 Although a duly authorized agent signs the affidavit, the employer is held responsible for the accuracy of Forms W-4 contained on magnetic tape.

.05 The magnetic tape specifications contained in PART "B" of this Revenue Procedure must be strictly adhered to. Deviations will not be permitted under any circumstances. All magnetic tape filings will be reviewed for completeness of required fields and for proper format. Tapes failing to meet the specifications contained herein will not be processed but will be returned to the filer for either correction and resubmission of tapes or for submission of copies of paper Forms W-4.

SEC. 5. PROCESSING OF TAPE STATEMENTS

.01 The Service will copy the information from the original tapes and will return the original tapes to the employer. Normally tapes will be returned either within three months after the quarterly due date for submission to the Service, or within three months after actual receipt of acceptable tapes, whichever is later.

SEC. 6. EFFECT ON PAPER DOCUMENTS

.01 Magnetic tape reporting to the Internal Revenue Service eliminates the need for submission of copies of paper Forms W-4. However, employers must maintain the original Form W-4 for their records.

.02 If only a portion of the statements is reported on magnetic tape and the remainder is reported on paper forms, those paper statements must be filed on the prescribed forms.

SEC. 7. ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Requests for adidtional copies of this Revenue Procedure or for additional information on tape reporting of Forms W-2, W-2P, 1099, 1087, or 1042S should be addressed to the attention of the magnetic media coordinator of the appropriate Internal Revenue Center listed in Section 2.02 above.

PART "B" MAGNETIC TAPE SPECIFICATIONS

SECTION 1. GENERAL

.01 These specifications prescribe the required format and content of the records to be included in the file, but not the methods or equipment to be used in their preparation. Usually, the Service will be able to process, without translation, any compatible tape file. To be compatible, a tape file must meet all of the following specifications:

(a) Type of Tape—½ inch Mylar base, oxide coated

(b) Recording Density—556 or 800 bits per inch (BPI)

(c) Parity—Even or Odd

(d) Interrecord gap—¾ inch

(e) Recording Code—7 channel binary coded decimal (BCD)

.02 Conversion facilities are currently available for the following tapes:

(a) 9 channel EBCDIC (Extended Binary Coded Decimal Interchange Code) with

(1) Odd Parity

(2) 800, 1600, or 6250 Densities

(b) 9 channel ASCII (American Standard Coded Information Interchange) with

(1) Odd Parity

(2) 800, 1600, or 6250 Densities

.03 Although the Service can process, after translation, tapes created at 6250 BPI, it is preferred that filers submit 1600 BPI tapes if possible.

.04 The employer or the transmitter must affix an external label to each tape with the following information:

(a) Name of Transmitter

(b) Number of data records on that reel

(c) Density (556, 800, 1600, or 6250 BPI)

(d) Channel (7 or 9)

(e) Parity (odd or even)

(f) Manufacturer and model of main frame and tape drives

(g) Sequence number of reel, and total number of reels in the file (i.e., 1 of 3, 2 of 4)

.05 All records, including Header and Trailer Labels (if used), must be transmitted at the same density.

.06 Do not submit an employee W-4 record without the required employer identification information. Every record must contain both employee and employer data.

SEC. 2. LABEL CONVENTIONS

.01 Header Labels, Trailer Labels, Record Marks, and Tape Marks are all optional. They may be used as required by the transmitter's equipment or programming. If used they must conform to the following standards:

(a) Header Labels

(1) Transmitters may use standard headers, provided they begin with 1HDR, HDR1, VOL1, or VOL2.

(2) Header labels may not exceed 80 characters in length.

(b) Trailer Labels

(1) Standard trailer labels may be used provided that they begin with 1EOR, 1EOF, EOR1, or EOF1.

(2) Trailer labels may not exceed 80 characters in length.

(c) Record Marks

(1) Special character used to separate blocked records on tape.

(2) Can be written only at the end of a record or block.

(3) For odd parity tapes, use BCD bit configuration of 011010; for even parity use 111010.

(4) All records are of uniform length; therefore, marks are not necessary on this file.

(d) Tape Marks

(1) Used to signify the physical end of the recording on tape.

(2) Tape marks, if used, must be BCD configuration 001111 in even parity.

(3) May follow the header label and precede and/or follow the trailer label.

SEC. 3. RECORD LENGTH AND BLOCKING

.02 Tape records prescribed in the specifications may be blocked or unblocked, subject to the following:

(a) All data records are of a fixed length of 400 positions.

(b) All records may be blocked, except header and trailer labels.

(c) If blocking is used (more than one record per block) the desired blocking factor is ten records per block. At no time may a block contain more than 4,000 characters, but a smaller blocksize may be used if necessary. If sufficient records are not available for a full block, the remainder should be "padded" with 9's to fill all unused positions. Do not pad the block with blanks, or create blank records.

If an organization listed above submits information that warrants the renewal of its classification as a public charity or as a private operating foundation, the Internal Revenue Service will issue a ruling or determination letter with the revised classification as to foundation status. Grantors and contributors may thereafter rely upon such ruling or determination letter as provided in section 1.509(a)-7 of the Income Tax Regulations. It is not the practice of the Service to announce such revised classification of foundation status in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants and Enrolled Agents from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, or enrolled agent in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants and enrolled agents are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants and enrolled agents to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following person has been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
Albert J. Kendall	Wyncote, PA	Attorney	Four months effective January 7, 1980

Under Section 1026, Title 31 of the United States Code (1970 ed.), the Secretary of the Treasury, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, is authorized to suspend or disbar from further practice before the Internal Revenue Service any person who has violated the rules and regulations governing the recognition of attorneys, certified public accountants or enrolled agents to practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

Attorneys, certified public accountants and enrolled agents are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants and enrolled agents to identify such disbarred or suspended practitioners, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been disbarred or suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent, and the date of disbarment or period of suspension. This announcement will appear and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks for each attorney, certified public accountant or enrolled agent so suspended or disbarred and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Announcement 80-33, page 39.
A public hearing will be held on April 16, 1980, concerning proposed regulations relating to the deposit requirements for social security and withheld income taxes.

Rev. Rul. 80-69, page 5.
Charitable contributions; fair market value; gems. A taxpayer purchased an assortment of gems from a promoter who asserted that the price was "wholesale" and who claimed that, if the taxpayer held the gems for over one year and then contributed them to charity, the taxpayer would be entitled to deduct three times the price paid. The deduction allowable is the fair market value of the gems at the time of the contribution, not an artificially calculated estimate of value. The best evidence of the maximum fair market value is the price at which the promoter sold the gems to the taxpayer.

Rev. Rul. 80-70, page 5.
Advanced mineral royalties paid or incurred under minimum royalty provisions. An advanced mineral royalty resulting from a minimum royalty provision and covering a 12-month period extending beyond the taxable year when paid or incurred is not fully deductible in the year when paid or incurred. Only the portion properly attributable to the current taxable year is deductible in the current taxable year. The cost of minerals extracted in subsequent years must be reduced by the advanced royalties deducted to date. Rev. Rul. 77-489 amplified.

Rev. Rul. 80-71, page 7.
Intangible drilling costs; limited partnership; year of deduction. An oil and gas limited partnership made advance payments, at a fixed rate per well, for the costs of drilling oil and gas wells to the parent of its corporate general partner. The parent owned no drilling equipment and subcontracted the actual drilling of the wells to independent drilling contractors, who were paid on a footage and day work basis upon completion of the contracts. These prepayments are not deductible until paid to the independent contractors. Rev. Rul. 71-252 distinguished.

Rev. Rul. 80-72, page 9.
Foreign gold mine; amount at risk. A taxpayer invested a specified amount in a tax shelter arrangement whereby the taxpayer leased a foreign mining company's interest in a gold reserve. The taxpayer authorized the promoter of the arrangement to sell an option on the gold to be extracted and stipulated that the proceeds from the sale of the option and the original investment were to be used for development of the gold reserve. The option can only be exercised after the gold has been extracted, and the holder of the option cannot compel the extraction. The taxpayer is not at risk, within the meaning of section 465 of the Code, with respect to the proceeds from the sale of the option.

Department of the Treasury
Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on Subpart A, Tax Conventions and related Treasury Decisions and Revenue Rulings; Subpart B, Legislation and related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical Indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Price: $1.00 (single copy). Subscription price: $50.00 a year; $12.50 additional for foreign mailing.

Advanced royalties; cash and nonrecourse notes. Under section 1.612-3(b) of the regulations, neither a cash nor an accrual basis taxpayer may deduct as advanced mineral royalties the amount of nonrecourse notes that are payable only to the extent of the proceeds received from the sale of the minerals. Cash paid as advanced royalties is a deferred expense to be taken into account when the minerals are sold.

"Foreign tax haven double trust"; income for benefit of grantor. An example is set forth of a "foreign tax haven double trust" in which an agent in a foreign country, who is named as the "creator", created a trust in that country, naming the taxpayer as trustee. The trust received certain income-producing property from the taxpayer. The "creator" then created a second trust in the same country naming the first trust as trustee. The creation of both trusts will be considered a sham, and the substance of the transaction will control.

Trust treated as association; income beneficiaries' deductions. An example is provided of a business arrangement that is a trust under local law, but is classified as an association taxable as a corporation for federal tax purposes. The income beneficiaries of such an arrangement may not deduct any depreciation or amortization on any property held by the association.

Section 167.—Depreciation

Section 170.—Charitable, Etc., Contributions and Gifts

26 CFR 1.170A-1: Charitable, etc., contributions and gifts; allowance of deduction.

Charitable contributions; fair market value; gems. A taxpayer purchased an assortment of gems from a promoter who asserted that the price was "wholesale" and who claimed that, if the taxpayer held the gems for over one year and then contributed them to charity, the taxpayer would be entitled to deduct three times the price paid. The deduction allowable is the fair market value of the gems at the time of the contribution, not an artificially calculated estimate of value. The best evidence of the maximum fair market value is the price at which the promoter sold the gems to the taxpayer.

Rev. Rul. 80-69

ISSUE

How is the fair market value of property contributed to charity determined for federal income tax purposes under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

During 1978, an individual taxpayer who was not a dealer in gems purchased an assortment of gems for 500*x* dollars from a promoter who asserted that the price was "wholesale", even though the promoter and various other dealers engaged in numerous similar sales at similar prices with individuals who were not dealers in gems. The promoter represented that if the taxpayer held the gems for over one year and then contributed them to charity the taxpayer would be entitled to a deduction of 1500*x* dollars at the time of contribution. The promoter contended that the value at the time of contribution would be at least three times as much as the price paid by the taxpayer. The taxpayer contributed the gems to a public museum 13 months after purchase, claiming a charitable contributions deduction of 1500*x* dollars. The museum is an organization described in section 170(c) of the Internal Revenue Code, contributions to which are deductible under section 170(a)(1). The museum will use the gems in a manner related to its exempt purposes.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 170(a)(1) of the Code allows as a deduction any charitable contribution (as defined in section 170(c)) payment of which is made within the taxable year.

Section 1.170A-1(c)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that if a charitable contribution is made in property other than money, the amount of the contribution is the fair market value of the property at the time of contribution, reduced as provided in section 170(e)(1) of the Code.

Section 1.170A-1(c)(2) of the regulations provides that the fair market value is the price at which the property would change hands between a willing buyer and a willing seller, neither being under any compulsion to buy or sell and both having a reasonable knowledge of relevant facts.

The definition of fair market value depends upon a knowledgeable willing buyer and a knowledgeable willing seller. To determine fair market value, reference is made to the most active marketplace at the time of the donor's contribution. The best evidence of fair market value depends on actual transactions and not on some artificially calculated estimate of value contrary to the prices at which the very gems at issue changed hands in the marketplace. The 500*x* dollars at which the promoter sold the gems to the taxpayer and others, rather than a mere speculative claim of what the gems would be worth, is the best evidence of the maximum fair market value of the gems.

HOLDING

For federal income tax purposes the fair market value of the gems was no greater than 500*x* dollars.

Advanced mineral royalties paid or incurred under minimum royalty provisions. An advanced mineral royalty resulting from a minimum royalty provision and covering a 12-month period extending beyond the taxable year when paid or incurred is not fully deductible in the year when paid or incurred. Only the portion properly attributable to the current taxable year is deductible in the current taxable year. The cost of minerals extracted in subsequent years must be reduced by the advanced royalties deducted to date. Rev. Rul. 77-489 amplified.

Rev. Rul. 80-70

ISSUE

Is an advanced mineral royalty resulting from a minimum royalty provision and covering a 12 month period extending beyond the taxable year when the liability is paid or incurred deductible in full in the year when paid or incurred by a taxpayer using either the cash receipts and disbursements method or the accrual method of accounting?

FACTS

Situation 1

X uses the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting and files its federal income tax returns on a calendar year basis. On December 1, 1977, X and Y entered into a lease agreement under which X obtained the operating mineral interest in a mineral property from Y. The agreement requires X to pay Y a production royalty of 5 percent of the proceeds received from the sale of minerals extracted during each lease year over the 10 year lease term. Regardless of production, X is required to make a nonrefundable payment to Y of 60*x* dollars on the first day (December 1) of each annual leasing period. Production royalties otherwise due each lease year are to be reduced by the 60*x* dollars paid on December 1 of each year. In any year in which the minimum royalty exceeds the production royalties, the excess is to be applied to reduce the production royalties due for any subsequent year.

The mineral reserves committed to the lease are substantially in excess of those sufficient for complete pay-out of the total minimum royalty and it is practical to extract a quantity of the mineral over the term of the agreement in excess of that necessary for complete payout of the total minimum royalty.

On December 1, 1977, X paid 60*x* dollars to Y for the lease period December 1, 1977, through November 30, 1978. X extracted no minerals from the leased property during December 1977. In accordance with section 1.612-3(b)(3) of the Income Tax Regulations, X elected to treat the advanced royalties as deductions from gross income for the year in which the advanced royalties are paid or accrued.

Situation 2

The facts are the same as in Situation 1 except that X uses the accrual method of accounting and executes a negotiable promissory note on December 1 of each lease year payable on demand to Y as payment for the 60*x* dollars.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 461(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that the amount of any deduction shall be taken for the taxable year that is the proper taxable year under the method of accounting used in computing taxable income.

Section 1.461-1(a)(1) of the regulations provides that, under the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting, amounts representing allowable deductions shall, as a general rule, be taken into account for the taxable year in which paid.

Section 1.461-1(a)(2) of the regulations provides that, under the accrual method of accounting, an expense is deductible for the taxable year in which all the events have occurred that determine the fact of the liability and the amount thereof can be determined with reasonable accuracy.

Section 1.612-3(b)(3) of the regulations provides that the payor shall treat the advanced royalties paid or accrued in connection with mineral property as deductions from gross income for the year the mineral product, in respect of which the advanced royalties were paid or accrued, is sold. However, in the case of advanced mineral royalties paid or accrued in connection with mineral property as a result of a minimum royalty provision, the payor, at its option, may instead treat the advanced royalties as deductions from gross income for the year in which the advanced royalties are paid or accrued. This subparagraph further provides that no deduction is allowed under this provision that is disallowed under other provisions of the Code such as section 461.

Rev. Rul. 77-489, 1977-2 C.B. 177, addresses the deductibility of cumulative advanced minimum royalties due over the term of a ten year lease. Rev. Rul. 77-489 provides two situations in which a taxpayer using the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting and a taxpayer using the accrual method of accounting attempt to accelerate the deduction for the payment of the cumulative advanced minimum royalties either by paying the full amount of these royalties due over the ten year lease term in cash or by executing a negotiable promissory note payable on demand for these royalties. In both situations in Rev. Rul. 77-489, payment of the cumulative advanced minimum royalties due over the ten year lease was made on the first day of the taxable year. Rev. Rul. 77-489 concludes that, for both the taxpayers, only that portion of the advanced minimum royalties that is properly attributable to the initial year of the lease is deductible in that year. The present situation differs from Rev. Rul. 77-489 in that it involves only a 12 month portion of the cumulative advanced minimum royalty due over the ten year lease and the period used for fixing liability under the lease is not coextensive with the taxable year of payment or accrual.

In Zaninovich v. Commissioner, 69 T.C. 605 (1978), a taxpayer deducted in the year of payment a full 12 months' rent that was attributable to 2 taxable years. In disallowing the deduction, the court stated the general rule for rental deductions as provided in University Properties, Inc. v. Commissioner, 45 T.C. 416, 421 (1966), aff'd, 378 F.2d 83 (9th Cir. 1967):

> Rentals may be deducted as such only for the year or years to which they are applied. If they are paid for the continued use of the property beyond the years in which paid they are not deductible in full in the year paid but must be deducted ratably over the years during which the property is so used.

In both situations 1 and 2, X has elected pursuant to section 1.612-3(b)(3) of the regulations to treat the advanced royalties as deductions from gross income for the year in which the advanced royalties are paid or accrued. This election is in lieu of deducting the advanced royalties in the year the mineral product in respect of which the advanced royalties were paid or accrued is sold.

In Burnet v. Hutchinson Coal Co., 64 F.2d 275 (4th Cir. 1933), and Commissioner v. Jamison Coal and Coke Co., 67 F.2d 342 (3rd Cir. 1933), the courts indicated that minimum royalty payments are like rent. In accordance with Zaninovich, the portion of the payment made by cash or negotiable promissory note for the advanced royalties applicable to the months in the lease period occurring in 1978 is not deductible in 1977. This result is the same for both the taxpayer using the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting and the taxpayer using the accrual method of accounting. See Smith v. Commissioner, 51 T.C. 429 (1968).

In both Situation 1 and Situation 2, X may deduct only 5*x* dollars of the advanced royalty resulting for the minimum royalty provision for the taxable year 1977. For subsequent taxable years remaining on the lease X may deduct 60*x* dollars of advanced royalties, consisting of 55*x* dollars from the lease year beginning in the prior taxable year and 5*x* dollars from the lease year beginning in the current taxable year. However, if production occurs in subsequent taxable years, the taxpayer must reduce the cost of minerals extracted by the amount of the advanced royalties that have been deducted to date.

HOLDING

An advanced mineral royalty resulting from a minimum royalty provision and covering a 12 month period extending beyond the taxable year when paid or the liability is incurred is not deductible in full in the year when paid or the liability is incurred by either a taxpayer using the cash method of accounting or a taxpayer using the accrual method of accounting. Only that portion of an advanced minimum royalty paid or incurred that is properly attributable to the current taxable year is deductible by either of these taxpayers. Furthermore, if production occurs in subsequent taxable years, the taxpayer must reduce the cost of minerals extracted by the amount of the advanced royalties that have been deducted to date.

Intangible drilling costs; limited partnership; year of deduction. An oil and gas limited partnership made advance payments, at a fixed rate per well, for the costs of drilling oil and gas wells to the parent of its corporate general partner. The parent owned no drilling equipment and subcontracted the actual drilling of the wells to independent drilling contractors, who were paid on a footage and day work basis upon completion of the contracts. These prepayments are not deductible until paid to the independent contractors. Rev. Rul. 71-252 distinguished.

Rev. Rul. 80-71

ISSUE

Whether under the circumstances described below a limited partnership that uses the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting is entitled to deduct in the tax year amounts that are paid within the tax year as "intangible drilling and development costs," and optionally expensed under the provisions of section 1.612-4 of the Income Tax Regulations.

FACTS

A limited partnership (LP) was organized in 1975 for the exploration and development of oil and gas lands. LP was formed by 100*x* limited partners who each contributed $1,000*x* to the limited partnership. The general partner of LP is corporation X whose parent, corporation Y, is the general contractor that will arrange for the drilling, completion, and equipping of the oil and gas wells. The partnership reports its income on a calendar year basis.

The partnership agreement provides that corporation X will transfer to LP, as its contribution to capital, certain oil and gas leases, mineral rights, equipment, and a specified amount of cash. The limited partners are allocated the deduction for intangible drilling and development costs.

As general partner, corporation X has control over the operations of the partnership, including the authority to make any expenditures and incur any obligation that it deems necessary, as well as to make the determination of which wells will be drilled. Corporation Y, as general contractor, will conduct the drilling, testing, and completion, or if nonproductive, the abandonment of each well in which LP participates. Y will charge a fixed fee for such services.

In October 1975, corporation X, acting on behalf of LP, entered into an agreement with corporation Y for the drilling of wells on tracts covered by leasehold interests previously contributed to LP by X. For certain of the proposed drill sites the entire working or operating interests were held by LP. For other proposed drill sites, LP owned only an undivided fraction of the working interest, and drilling was to be a joint undertaking between LP and other co-owners.

The agreement set forth a fixed price ($10,000*x*) for the intangible costs of drilling and completion of each well and a separate fixed price ($8,000*x*) for the drilling and abandonment without attempted completion of any that was abandoned after drilling commenced. For all wells to be drilled for LP, the agreement required that the designated fixed prices for drilling and completion be remitted to Y on or before December 31, 1975. In the event that any well was drilled and abandoned without completion, the difference between the price advanced on or before December 31 and the fixed price for drilling without completion was to be credited toward the cost of drilling another well or wells at locations to be designated in the future. The agreement did not specify any date for commencement of drilling operations by corporation Y.

In accordance with the terms of the agreement, on December 31, 1975, LP advanced to Y sums representing LP's portion of the fixed prices for well drilling to be performed on or after January 1, 1976. Having previously elected to expense intangible drilling and development costs, LP deducted the advance payments in its Form 1065 partnership return for the year 1975, a year in which LP had no income or other expense.

Y owned no drilling equipment, and the actual drilling of the wells was subcontracted to independent drilling contractors. The contracts were of the conventional footage and day work variety and did not require any payments to be made by Y to the drillers prior to completion of performance by the drillers.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 263(c) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that, notwithstanding section 263(a), regulations shall be prescribed by the Secretary granting taxpayers an election to deduct, as expenses, intangible drilling and development costs in the case of oil and gas wells. In accordance with section 263(c), section 1.612-4(a) of the regulations provides that intangible drilling and development costs incurred by an operator in the development of oil and gas properties may at the taxpayer's option be chargeable to capital or to expense.

Section 446(a) of the Code provides that taxable income shall be computed under the method of accounting the taxpayer employs to regularly compute its income in keeping its books. Section 446(c) provides that certain methods are permissible subject to the requirement of section 446(b). Section 446(b) provides that if the method used by the taxpayer does not clearly reflect income, the computation of taxable income shall be made under such method as, in the opinion of the Secretary, does clearly reflect income.

Section 461 of the Code provides that the amount of any deduction allowed by subtitle A shall be taken for the taxable year that is the proper taxable year under the method of accounting used in computing taxable income.

Section 1.446-1(a)(1) of the regulations provides that the term, "method of accounting", includes not only the overall method of accounting of a taxpayer but also the accounting treatment of any item of income or deduction.

Section 1.461-1(a) of the regulations provides that if an expenditure results in the creation of an asset having a useful life that extends substantially beyond the close of the taxable year, such expenditure may not be deductible or may be deductible only in part, for the taxable year in which made.

Therefore, if the method adopted by the taxpayer for a particular item or transaction does not clearly reflect income, section 446(b) specifically empowers the Commissioner to compute taxable income under such method as, in the opinion of the Commissioner, does clearly reflect income.

In Rev. Rul. 71-252, 1971-1 C.B. 146, a taxpayer using the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting deducted in the year paid intangible drilling and development costs. In that revenue ruling the taxpayer began in 1969 investigating the oil and gas producing potential of a certain tract of land. After receiving a favorable report thereon the taxpayer acquired, in October 1969, a lease of the oil and gas operating interest in the tract. On December 31, 1969, the taxpayer executed a written drilling contract with a drilling contractor. On the same day, as required by the terms of the contract, the taxpayer paid 100*x* dollars to the contractor. In March 1970, the well was completed successfully for the production of oil and gas. After discussing Pauley v. United States, (S.D. Cal., 1963), Rev. Rul. 71-252 holds that the 100*x* dollars intangible drilling and development costs were deductible by the taxpayer in 1969, the year they were paid.

The prepayment in Pauley was occasioned by the drillers' concern with Pauley's willingness and ability to pay when the driller needed operating funds. The driller had no earlier business dealings with Pauley, but knew that he was involved in many other business activities. The court found that the driller required prepayment of the drilling expenses for sufficient business reasons. The drilling permit was not issued until December 30, 1947, and other "complicated and diverse" negotiations were being carried out late in 1947 by Pauley. Drilling activities commenced immediately after December 31, 1947, and proceeded without any substantial delay until completion on March 12, 1948.

These findings evidenced a bona fide, arm's length transaction entered into for a valid business purpose, and provided the basis for the court's holding that the prepayment was an allowable expense in the year payment was made and deductible in that year. Further, the prepayment was exhausted within two and one-half months of payment.

Intangible drilling and development costs are capital in nature. However, section 263(c) of the Code, as implemented by section 1.612-4(a) of the regulations, provides taxpayers an election to expense intangible drilling and development expenditures that otherwise would be capitalized under section 263(a). Merely because a taxpayer has elected to charge intangible drilling and developments costs to expense, it does not follow that all amounts paid are deductible in the year of payment when such payment is made in advance of the rendering of services by the drilling contractor. Prepaid intangible drilling and development costs are subject to the same standards applicable to other prepaid expense items. Section 263(c) does not permit a taxpayer unlimited control of the timing of the deduction for drilling and development costs. Instead, the timing of a deduction must meet the specific limitations of section 1.461-1(a) of the regulations in order to meet the clear reflection of income requirement contained in section 446(b).

Here, at the time the prepayments were made neither the date for commencing nor completing drilling of the wells was specified. Furthermore, the prepayments for the intangible drilling costs were made by LP (the investor group partnership) to Y, the general contractor (and the parent of X, the general partner), who in turn was to contract with the actual drilling contractor for the drilling of the well. The prepayments could also be applied to later, not as yet contracted for, wells to the extent of unsuccessful completions. All of this indicates that the prepayments by LP to Y were not made in accordance with customary business practice.

The prepayments themselves were assets having useful lives that extended substantially beyond the close of LP's 1975 tax year. Since LP had no income for the year of the deduction, the facts indicate the expenditures here were prompted by the federal income tax advantages that resulted from the deduction.

Considering the facts and circumstances in the present case in the light of the above analysis, LP's deduction for the prepaid intangible drilling and development costs results in a substantial distortion of LP's income for the year of payments.

HOLDING

LP's prepayments are not deductible in 1975. However, the payments are deductible in the tax year or years Y pays the independent drilling contractors under their conventional footage and day work contracts with Y, if the clear reflection of income requirements of section 446(b) of the Code are satisfied.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 71-252 is distinguished.

Section 465.—Deductions Limited to Amount at Risk in Case of Certain Activities

Foreign gold mine; amount at risk. A taxpayer invested a specified amount in a tax shelter arrangement whereby the taxpayer leased a foreign mining company's interest in a gold reserve. The taxpayer authorized the promoter of the arrangement to sell an option on the gold to be extracted and stipulated that the proceeds from the sale of the option and the original investment were to be used for development of the gold reserve. The option can only be exercised after the gold has been extracted, and the holder of the option cannot compel the extraction. The taxpayer is not at risk, within the meaning of section 465 of the Code, with respect to the proceeds from the sale of the option.

Rev. Rul. 80-72

ISSUE

Do the "at risk" provisions of section 465 of the Internal Revenue Code apply under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

In 1979, M, a consortium of private foreign corporations, marketed a tax shelter arrangement purporting to give investors a tax write-off equal to four times the cash invested. A, an individual, invested 100*x* dollars in the arrangement.

In connection with this investment, A executed the following documents:

1. A "mineral claim lease" whereby A leases from P, a foreign mining company, the mineral rights to a gold reserve located in X, a foreign country. Under the lease, A is entitled to explore, develop and extract all recovered gold on the premises until 1986, the date of expiration of the lease. A must pay P a certain royalty per gram for all the recovered gold after first deducting all the tax due to X, extraction costs and the development costs. A also agreed to expend 400*x* dollars for the development to ready the claim for extraction no later than December 31, 1979. However, A is not obligated to extract the gold. Whether and when the gold is actually extracted is within the control of A.

2. An authorization agreement under which A authorizes M to sell for 300*x* dollars a gold option, described below, on the total minerals to be extracted under the terms of the mineral claim lease. The authorization further specifies that the proceeds from the sale of the gold option shall be used with the 100*x* dollars remitted by A to pay for development of the claim by a contractor that M retains on A's behalf.

3. A gold option by which for a 300*x* dollar premium, A grants to C, a party obtained by M, the option to purchase all the gold contained in the mineral claim lease subject to the tax due to X, lessor royalty, development costs, and extraction cost. After payment of the above costs, the exercise price for the remaining gold shall be approximately one-third the current fair market value of gold. C as option holder agrees that the option can only be exercised after the gold has been extracted. Further, C cannot compel the extraction of gold. If necessary arrangements are not made for extracting the gold prior to the expiration date of the option in 1986, A acknowledges and agrees that the option holder has the first right of refusal for entering into a new lease for the mineral claim with P. In the gold option, M represents that gold in commercially marketable quantities has been shown to exist in the mineral claim.

After receipt of the above, M sent A copies of the executed documents in addition to invoices and cancelled checks for development of the mining claim in the amount of 400*x* dollars. These were dated on or before December 31, 1979. On A's 1979 tax return, A claimed a 400*x* dollars deduction for development expenditures under section 616(a) of the Code.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 616(a) of the Code provides that except where the taxpayer elects otherwise as provided in section 616(b), there shall be allowed as a deduction in computing taxable income all expenditures paid or incurred during the taxable year for the development of a mine or other natural deposit (other than an oil or gas well) if paid or incurred after the existence of ores or minerals in commercially marketable quantities has been disclosed.

Section 465 of the Code provides that in the case of an individual engaged in an activity to which this section applies, any loss from such activity for the taxable year shall be allowed only to the extent of the aggregate amount with respect to which the taxpayer is at risk (within the meaning of subsection (b)) for such activity at the close of the taxable year.

For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1978, section 465(c)(3)(A) of the Code provides that section 465 applies to each activity engaged in by the taxpayer in carrying on a trade or business or for the production of income.

Section 465(b)(1) of the Code provides that a taxpayer shall be considered at risk for an activity with respect to amounts, including the amount of money and the adjusted basis of other property, contributed by the taxpayer to the activity, and amounts borrowed with respect to such activity (as determined under paragraph (2)).

Section 465(b)(2) of the Code provides that a taxpayer shall be considered at risk with respect to amounts borrowed for use in an activity to the extent that the taxpayer is personally liable for the repayment of such amounts or has pledged property, other than property used in such activity, as security for such borrowed amount.

Section 465(b)(4) of the Code provides that notwithstanding any other provision of this section, a taxpayer shall not be considered at risk with respect to amounts protected against loss through nonrecourse financing, guarantees, stop loss agreements, or other similar arrangements.

See the Senate Committee on Finance Report on the Tax Reform Act of 1976, S. Rep. No. 94-938, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 1 (1976), 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 3) 57, at 87.

The legislative history indicates that Congress intended the at risk provisions to cover arrangements the effect of which is to insulate taxpayers from "economic loss."

In this case, A has obtained 300*x* dollars by selling an option that can be exercised only if gold is found and extracted by or on behalf of A. If no gold is found, or if A fails to extract any gold found, A will have no obligation to the option holder, C. Moreover, as part of the same arrangement, A will expend the 300*x* dollars (plus the 100*x* dollars remitted by A) to pay for development of the claim. Thus, A's at risk position in relation to the 300*x* dollars is substantially the same as if the 300*x* dollars had been borrowed from C on a nonrecourse basis repayable only from A's interest in the activity. Under these facts the selling of the option is an "other similar arrangement" to nonrecourse financing as provided in section 465(b)(4), whereby A is effectively protected from any true economic risk.

HOLDING

A is not at risk within the meaning of section 465 of the Code with respect to the 300*x* dollars premium received on the sale of the option. Further the 100*x* deduction attributable to A's actual cash investment is deductible on A's 1979 tax return only to the extent that A can prove that it was expended during the taxable year for the development of a mine and that the existence of ores in commercially marketable quantities had previously been disclosed in that mine.

Section 612.—Basis for Cost Depletion

26 CFR 1.612-3: Depletion; treatment of bonus and advanced royalty.

Advanced royalties; cash and nonrecourse notes. Under section 1.612-3(b) of the regulations, neither a cash nor an accrual basis taxpayer may deduct as advanced mineral royalties the amount of nonrecourse notes that are payable only to the extent of the proceeds received from the sale of the minerals. Cash paid as advanced royalties is a deferred expense to be taken into account when the minerals are sold.

Rev. Rul. 80-73

ISSUE

In what year and to what extent may a taxpayer using the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting deduct cash and notes given as advanced royalties; and similarly, in what year and to what extent may a taxpayer using the accrual method of accounting deduct notes given as advance royalties?

FACTS

On January 1, 1977, A, an individual, and Y entered into a lease agreement under which A obtained an operating mineral interest in mineral property owned by Y. The agreement provides that a minimum advanced royalty is due Y each lease year over the 10-year lease term in the amount of 600*x* dollars, payable at the beginning of each lease year. The lease further provides that, for the first year, payment of the royalty is to be made in cash and a promissory note, and for all subsequent years payments may be made entirely with notes. The amount of the minimum annual royalty reasonably reflects the value of the leasehold interest. A is a cash method, calendar year taxpayer.

On January 1, 1977, B, an individual, also entered into the same type of agreement with Y except that the advanced mineral royalties payable at the beginning of each lease year may be made entirely with promissory notes. B is an accrual method, calendar year taxpayer.

In both cases the notes are unsecured, nonrecourse, non-interest bearing, have no maturity date, and are payable only to the extent of the proceeds received from the sale of the minerals.

On January 1, 1977, A gave Y 150*x* dollars in cash and a note for 450*x* dollars. B gave Y a note for 600*x* dollars.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1.612-3(b)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that advanced royalties exist when the owner of an operating interest in a mineral deposit or standing timber is required to pay royalties on a specified number of units of such mineral or timber annually whether or not extracted or cut within the year, and the owner may apply any amounts paid on account of units not extracted or cut within the year against the royalty on the mineral or timber thereafter extracted or cut.

Section 1.612-3(b)(3) of the regulations provides that the payor shall treat the advanced royalties paid or accrued in connection with mineral property as deductions from gross income for the year the mineral product, in respect of which the advanced royalties were paid or accrued, is sold. However, if advanced mineral royalties are paid or accrued in connection with mineral property as a result of a minimum royalty provision, the payor, at its option, may instead treat the royalties as deductions from gross income for the years in which the advanced royalties are paid or accrued. A minimum royalty provision requires that a substantially uniform amount of royalties be paid at least annually either over the life of the lease or for a period of 20 years.

Under section 1.612-3(b) of the regulations advanced royalties may only be deducted when payment is not contingent upon the extraction of the mineral. Here, payments of the notes are contingent upon extraction and sale of the minerals. Consequently, except for the cash payment, all royalties both as to A and B are not advanced royalties paid or accrued within the meaning of section 1.612-3(b) of the regulations because there is no fixed liability to pay any royalty until the minerals are produced and sold. The cash payment is an advanced royalty, but does not result from a minimum royalty provision because substantially uniform royalties are not required to be paid each year over the life of the lease.

Moreover, the giving of the note by A does not constitute payment. For a payment to be deductible by a cash method taxpayer there must be a depletion of assets and, therefore, the payment must be in cash or its equivalent. If the note is never paid, the cash method maker has not parted with anything other than a promise to pay. A promise to pay is not cash or its equivalent. See Eckert v. Burnet, 283 U.S. 140 (1931), X-1 C.B. 241; Page v. Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co. Executor, 88 F.2d 192 (1st Cir. 1937).

HOLDING

A deduction is not allowable to A or B for the amount of the notes because under section 1.612-3(b) of the regulations an advanced royalty must be payable whether or not the minerals are extracted and sold. Here the notes are payable only out of the proceeds received from the sale of the minerals. While the 150x dollars actually paid in cash by A is an advanced royalty under section 1.612-3(b), it is deductible only for the year the mineral product, in respect of which the advance royalties were paid, is sold because it does not result from a minimum royalty provision.

For years after December 31, 1978, see also section 465 as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978.

Option to Capitalize or Deduct Intangible Drilling and Development Costs in the Case of Wells Drilled for any Geothermal Deposit

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides Temporary Income Tax Regulations relating to the option to capitalize or deduct intangible drilling and development costs in the case of wells drilled for any geothermal deposit. In addition, the rules contained in the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serve as a notice of proposed rulemaking by which the rules contained therein are proposed to be prescribed as final regulations.

DATES: These temporary regulations are effective for taxable years ending on or after October 1, 1978, with respect to getothermal wells commenced on or after that date. Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by March 31, 1980.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-202-78), Washington, D.C. 20224.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains temporary regulations under section 612 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The temporary regulations are required to implement section 402(a) and (e) of the Energy Tax Act of 1978 (92 Stat. 3174).

The regulations promulgated in this document are also proposed to be prescribed as final Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 612 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

WAIVER OF PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS OF TREASURY DIRECTIVE

The expeditious adoption of the provisions contained in this document is necessary because of the need for immediate guidance to taxpayers eligible for the option to deduct as expenses intangible drilling and development costs in the case of wells drilled for any geothermal deposit. For this reason, Jerome Kurtz, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, has determined that the provisions of paragraphs 8 through 14 of the Treasury Department directive implementing Executive Order 12044 must be waived.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adoption of the final regulations proposed in this document, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably six copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing, is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the Federal Register.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is David B. Cubeta of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, a new Part 5a, Temporary Income Tax Regulations under the Energy Tax Act of 1978, is added to Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations and the following temporary regulations are adopted:

§ 5a.612-1 Charges to capital and to expense in case of geothermal wells.

(a) Option with respect to intangible drilling and development costs. In accordance with the provisions of section 263(c), intangible drilling and development costs incurred by an operator (one who holds a working or operating interest in any tract or parcel of land either as a fee owner or under a lease or any other form of contract granting working or operating rights) in the development of a geothermal deposit (as defined in section 613(e)(3) and the regulations thereunder) may at the operator's option be chargeable to capital or to expense. This option applies to all expenditures made by an operator for wages, fuel, repairs, hauling, supplies, etc., incident to and necessary for the drilling of wells and the preparation of wells for the production of geothermal steam or hot water. Such expenditures have for convenience been termed intangible drilling and development costs. They include the cost to operators of any drilling or development work (excluding amounts payable only out of production or gross or net proceeds from production, if such amounts are depletable income to the recipient, and amounts properly allocable to cost of depreciable property) done for them by contractors under any form of contract, including turnkey contracts. Examples of items to which this option applies are all amounts paid for labor, fuel, repairs, hauling, and supplies, or any of them, which are used—

(1) In the drilling, shooting, and cleaning of wells,

(2) In such clearing of ground, draining, road making, surveying, and geological work as are necessary in preparation for the drilling of wells, and

(3) In the construction of such derricks, tanks, pipelines, and other physical structures as are necessary for the drilling of wells and the preparation of wells for the production of geothermal steam or hot water.

In general, this option applies only to expenditures for those drilling and developing items which in themselves do not have a salvage value. For the purpose of this option, labor, fuel, repairs, hauling, supplies, etc. are not considered as having a salvage value, even though used in connection with the installation of physical property which has a salvage value. Included in this option are all costs of drilling and development undertaken (directly or through a contract) by an operator of a geothermal property whether incurred by the operator prior or subsequent to the formal grant or assignment of operating rights (a leasehold interest, or other form of operating rights, or working interest); except that in any case where any drilling or development project is undertaken for the grant or assignment of a fraction of the operating rights, only that part of the costs thereof which is attributable to such fractional interest is within this option. In the excepted cases, costs of the project undertaken, including depreciable equipment furnished, to the extent allocable to fractions of the operating rights held by others, must be capitalized as the depletable capital cost of the fractional interest thus acquired.

(b) Recovery of optional items, if capitalized. (1) Items recoverable through depletion: If the taxpayer charges such expenditures as fall within the option to capital account, the amounts so capitalized and not deducted as a loss are recoverable through depletion insofar as they are not represented by physical property. For the purposes of this section the expenditures for clearing ground, draining, road making, surveying, geological work, excavation, grading, and the drilling, shooting, and cleaning of wells, are considered not to be represented by physical property, and when charged to capital account are recoverable through depletion.

(2) Items recoverable through depreciation: If the taxpayer charges such expenditures as fall within the option to capital account, the amounts so capitalized and not deducted as a loss are recoverable through depreciation insofar as they are represented by physical property. Such expenditures are amounts paid for wages, fuel, repairs, hauling, supplies, etc. used in the installation of casing and equipment and in the construction on the property of derricks and other physical structures.

(3) In the case of capitalized intangible drilling and development costs incurred under a contract, such costs shall be allocated between the foregoing classes of items specified in subparagraphs (1) and (2) for the purpose of determining the depletion and depreciation allowances.

(4) Option with respect to cost of nonproductive wells: If the operator has elected to capitalize intangible drilling and development costs, then an additional option is accorded with respect to intangible drilling and development costs incurred in drilling a nonproductive well. Such costs incurred in drilling a nonproductive well may be deducted by the taxpayer as an ordinary loss provided a proper election is made in the taxpayer's original or amended return for the first taxable year ending on or after October 1, 1978, in which such a nonproductive well is completed. The taxpayer must make a clear statement of election under this option in the return or amended return. The election may be revoked by the filing of an amended return that does not contain such a statement. The absence of a clear indication in such return of an election to deduct as ordinary losses intangible drilling and development costs of nonproductive wells shall be deemed to be an election to recover such costs through depletion to the extent that they are not represented by physical property, and through depreciation to the extent that they are represented by physical property. Upon the expiration of the time for filing a claim for credit or refund of any overpayment of tax imposed by chapter 1 of the Code with respect to the first taxable year ending on or after October 1, 1978 in which a nonproductive well is completed, the taxpayer is bound for all subsequent years by his exercise of the option to deduct intangible drilling and development costs of nonproductive wells as an ordinary loss or his deemed election to recover such costs through depletion or depreciation.

(c) Nonoptional items distinguished. (1) Capital items: The option with respect to intangible drilling and development costs does not apply to expenditures by which the taxpayer acquires tangible property ordinarily considered as having a salvage value. Examples of such items are the costs of the actual materials in those structures which are constructed in the wells and on the property, and the cost of drilling tools, pipe, casing, tubing, tanks, engines, boilers, machines, etc. The option does not apply to any expenditure for wages, fuel, repairs, hauling, supplies, etc., in connection with equipment, facilities, or structures, not incident to or necessary for the drilling of wells, such as structures for treating geothermal steam or hot water. These are capital items and are recoverable through depreciation.

(2) Expense items: Expenditures which must be charged off as expense, regardless of the option provided by this section, are those for labor, fuel, repairs, hauling, supplies, etc., in connection with the operation of the wells and of other facilities on the property for the production of geothermal steam or hot water.

(d) Manner of making election. The option granted in paragraph (a) of this section to charge intangible drilling and development costs to expense may be exercised by claiming intangible drilling and development costs as a deduction on the taxpayer's original or amended return for the first taxable year ending on or after October 1, 1978, in which the taxpayer pays or incurs such costs with respect to a geothermal well commenced on or after that date. No formal statement is necessary. The exercise of the option may be revoked by the filing of an amended return that does not claim such a deduction. If the taxpayer fails to deduct such costs as expenses in any such return, he shall be deemed to have elected to recover such costs through depletion to the extent that they are not represented by physical property, and through depreciation to the extent that they are represented by physical property. Upon the expiration of the time for filing a claim for credit or refund of any overpayment of tax imposed by chapter 1 of the Code with respect to the first taxable year ending on or after October 1, 1978, in which the taxpayer pays or incurs intangible drilling and development costs with respect to a geothermal well commenced on or after that date, the taxpayer is bound by his exercise of the option to charge such costs to expense or his deemed election to recover such costs through depletion or depreciation for that year and for all subsequent years.

(e) Effective date. The option granted by paragraph (a) of this section is available only for taxable years ending on or after October 1, 1978, with respect to geothermal wells commenced on or after that date.

There is need for the immediate guidance provided by the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it is found impracticable to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in sections 263 and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (92 Stat. 3201; 26 U.S.C. 263; 68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Internal Revenue.

Section 671.—Trust Income, Deductions, and Credits Attributable to Grantors and Others as Substantial Owners

26 CFR 1.671-1: Grantors and others treated as substantial owners; scope.

"Foreign tax haven double trust"; income for benefit of grantor. An example is set forth of a "foreign tax haven double trust" in which an agent in a foreign country, who is named as the "creator", created a trust in that country, naming the taxpayer as trustee. The trust received certain income-producing property from the taxpayer. The "creator" then created a second trust in the same country naming the first trust as trustee. The creation of both trusts will be considered a sham, and the substance of the transaction will control.

Rev. Rul. 80-74

ISSUE

What are the federal income tax consequences of the scheme to create trusts in a foreign country in the circumstances described below?

FACTS

The taxpayer is a U.S. citizen. In 1979, the taxpayer attended a meeting arranged by a promoter of the "foreign tax haven double trust." The promoter represented that the "double trust" would radically reduce or eliminate the United States income tax liabilities of the taxpayer. According to the promoter, the "double trust" would also provide various other benefits such as avoidance of probate, elimination of federal estate and gift tax liability, and avoidance of various state and local taxes. Also, according to the promoter, the "double trust" is a contractual arrangement known as a "pure trust" and the taxpayer has a constitutional right to create such trusts without fear of interference by federal or state authority.

Under the promoter's direction, the taxpayer agreed to the creation of a "double trust" arrangement. Pursuant to this agreement, the promoter directed an agent in a foreign country to create a trust in that country, referred to as "Trust 1," for the taxpayer. The foreign agent, referred to as the "creator," named the taxpayer as trustee and the taxpayer transferred to Trust 1 certain income-producing real estate and corporate securities, and the assets of the taxpayer's sole proprietorship. The foreign "creator" of Trust 1 then created a second trust (Trust 2) in the same foreign country, naming Trust 1 as trustee of Trust 2.

Except for the names of the trustees, Trust 1 and Trust 2 are identical. Each trust instrument provides that the original trustee may select a second trustee and that the two trustees may name a third trustee. The trusts each provided for broad powers of the trustees to deal with trust property, in their sole discretion, in any fashion that they choose. The instruments also contain the statement that a resolution by the trustees to take an action shall itself be evidence that such action is within their authority. The trustees are empowered to distribute trust property, as they see fit, to whomever they choose.

The term of each trust is stated to be 25 years, but the trustees are explicitly empowered to extend or shorten the term. Each trust instrument also contains a statement that nothing in its terms shall be construed as intended to evade or contravene any law.

The taxpayer, in accordance with the promoter's advice, distributed income received by Trust 1 to Trust 2, as soon as it was received by Trust 1. Trust 2 retains the income amounts, and, from time to time, makes distributions to the taxpayer and to other members of the taxpayer's family as directed by the taxpayer as trustee of Trust 1.

The business assets and operations transferred to Trust 1 continue to be managed by the taxpayer in essentially the same fashion as before the taxpayer entered into the "double trust" arrangement.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code provides that the term gross income means all income "from whatever source" derived, including, among other things, income from an interest in an estate or trust.

The substance, rather than the form, of a transaction in which a taxpayer is involved govern the tax consequences of the transaction. See, for example, Commission v. Court Holding Company, 324 U.S. 331 (1945), Ct. D. 1636, 1945 C.B. 58; Helvering v. Clifford, 309 U.S. 331 (1940), Ct. D. 1444, 1940-1 C.B. 105; Gregory v. Helvering, 293 U.S. 465, Ct. D. 911, XIV-1 C.B. 193 (1935).

Subpart E of subchapter J of the Code (sections 671-679) deals with grantor trusts. Under section 671, if the grantor is treated as the owner of a trust as a result of application of the rules in subpart E, then those items of income, deductions, and credits that are attributable to the trust are includible, in computing the grantor's taxable income, to the extent that such items would be taken into account in determining the tax liability of an individual.

Section 7701(a)(31) of the Code defines "foreign trust" to mean a trust, the income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.

Under Subpart E of the Code income of a trust over which the grantor has retained substantial dominion or control is taxable to the grantor rather than to the trust which received the income or to the beneficiary to whom the income may be distributed. In the present case, the taxpayer, while purporting to, did not give up ownership and control of the assets. The use of a "creator" in the foreign country is irrelevant as the taxpayer is the grantor of both trusts for federal tax purposes. The taxpayer's transfer of property to Trust 1 is a contribution by the taxpayer as the grantor. The taxpayer is also the grantor of Trust 2, because of the taxpayer's control over Trust 1. See sections 674, 675, 676, and 677 of the Code.

HOLDINGS

The purported creation of Trust 1 and Trust 2 is a sham and the form of the transaction will be given no tax effect. Since the taxpayer effectively continues to own and control the assets, the arrangements between the trusts will be given no effect for tax purposes. See Rev. Rul. 75-257, 1975-2 C.B. 251, dealing with the income tax treatment of transfers of an individual's property and "lifetime services" to a "family estate" trust, and the case of Wesenberg v. Commissioner, 69 T.C. 1005 (1978), where a similar transaction was described by the court as a "flagrant tax avoidance scheme."

Moreover, Subpart E of the Code (sections 671-679) requires the taxpayer, as the grantor of the trusts, to include all items of income, deductions, or credits against tax attributable to either Trust 1 or Trust 2 in computing the taxpayer's taxable income.

See also section 679 (treating the grantor of a foreign trust as owner) and section 1491 (imposing an excise tax on transfers to foreign trusts).

No deduction is allowable under section 212 of the Code for the taxpayer's expenses with respect to the "double trusts." See Rev. Rul. 79-324, 1979-42 I.R.B. 12.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On July 14, 1978, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) and the Regulations on Procedure and Administration (26 CFR Part 301) under sections 871, 879, 981, 6012, 6013, 6072, 6073, 6091, 6109, and 6851 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (43 FR 30308). These amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 1012 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1612) and are to be issued under sections 6013 and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (90 Stat. 1612, 26 U.S.C. § 6013; 68A Stat. 917, 26 U.S.C. § 7805). After consideration of all comments submitted regarding the proposed amendments, the amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision. The Treasury decision also reflects the technical amendments to the Tax Reform Act of 1976 made by section 701 (u)(15) and (16) of the Revenue Act of 1978 (92 Stat. 2919). The Revenue Act has required minor revisions to the proposed amendments. Additional amendments to the Income Tax Regulations, the Temporary Income Tax Regulations under the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (26 CFR Part 7), and the Employment Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 31) under sections 1441, 3401, and 3402 are included.

STATUTORY BASES

Section 1012(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 amended section 6013 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 by adding subsections (g) and (h), which provide that a nonresident alien may, under certain circumstances, elect to be treated as a U.S. resident. The principal effect of this election is to permit the nonresident alien to file a joint return with a spouse who is a resident or citizen of the United States. Section 1012(b) of the Act repeals section 981 of the Code and adds in its place section 879 to provide rules for the treatment of community income where an election under section 6013(g) or (h) is not in effect with respect to a nonresident alien spouse. Section 1012(c) of the Act amends section 6073 of the Code to provide that nonresident aliens are not required to file a declaration of estimated tax until the alien's income tax return for the prior taxable year is due. Section 701(u)(15) and (16) of the Revenue Act of 1978 makes several technical amendments to section 6013(g) and (h). The technical amendments provide that an individual making the section 6013(g) or (h) election will be treated as a resident for purposes of chapters 5 (tax on transfers to avoid the income tax) and 24 (collection of the income tax at the source on wages) in addition to chapter 1 (normal taxes and surtaxes).

ELECTIONS

The regulations provide that an election under section 6013(g) or (h) generally is made by attaching a statement to the income tax return for the first year to which the election is to apply. The statement must contain a declaration that the election is being made and the names, addresses, and taxpayer identifying numbers of the electing spouses. The regulations provide that in most circumstances a voluntary revocation of the election under section 6013(g) is to be made in a similar manner.

The regulations provide that the determination of whether taxpayers meet the requirements of section 6013 (g) or (h) for any taxable year shall be made at the close of that taxable year. The regulations require as a prerequisite to the making of an election under section 6013(g) or (h) that the spouse of the nonresident alien be a U.S. citizen or resident on the last day of the first taxable year to which the election applies.

[1] This publication of the Treasury Decision contains the complete text of the amendments to the regulations. The instructions for modifying the notice of proposed rulemaking have been omitted.

COMMUNITY INCOME

The regulations explain the treatment given various types of community income in those cases where the spouses do not make an election under section 6013(g) or (h).

SUMMARY OF CHANGES AND PUBLIC COMMENT

A number of revisions of the proposed regulations have been made by the final regulations, many in response to public comments. Several commenters inquired whether the spouse who is a citizen or resident must be a citizen or resident for the entire taxable year or only at the close of the taxable year in order to qualify for the section 6013(g) election. Example (2) of § 1.6013-6(c) illustrates the rule of § 1.6013-6(a)(1), that the resident or citizen spouse need be a resident or citizen only at the close of the year, not for the entire year. Similarly, several commenters inquired whether two married individuals who are both nonresident aliens at the beginning of the taxable year and resident aliens at the close of the year qualify for the section 6013(h) election. An amendment to § 1.6013-7(a)(1) (designated § 1.6013-8(a)(1) in the proposed regulations) makes it clear that the two individuals would qualify for the election.

Section 1.6013-7(a)(2)(v) of the proposed regulations concerned the general relationship of the section 6013(g) and (h) elections to U.S. income tax treaties. The provision (now designated § 1.6013-6(a)(2)(v)) has been reserved in the final regulations for further consideration.

Section 1.6013-7(a)(4)(iii) of the proposed regulations provided that the election could be made with an amended return for taxable years ending or or after December 31, 1975, but before December 31, 1976. Several commenters suggested that the years for which the election can be made with an amended return should be extended. Section 1.6013-6(a)(4)(i) (designated § 1.6013-7(a)(4)(i) in the proposed regulations) has been amended to allow an election with an amended return to be made for all taxable years ending on or after December 31, 1975.

Section 1.6013-7(b)(1)(iii) of the proposed regulations provided that the filing of a separate return by either spouse would be considered a revocation of the election. The rule has been deleted in the final regulations. However, the election can only be made by filing a statement with a joint return for the first taxable year to which the election applies (see § 1.6013-6(a)(4)(i)).

Section 1.1441-1 of the regulations is amended to make it clear that withholding at the source of income will continue even though a nonresident alien individual makes an election under section 6013(g) or (h).

One person commented that the definition of community income in § 1.879-1(a)(1) of the proposed regulations was unclear. The definition has been clarified in the final regulations. The final regulations also clarify the treatment of trade or business income as community income.

Some suggestions from the public were not incorporated into the final regulations, two of which are indicated below.

Several commenters suggested that the final regulations permit a second election to be made by an electing individual whose spouse dies or is divorced or legally separated from the individual. These suggestions were not followed because the statute and the legislative history make it clear that second elections are prohibited, even in cases of death, divorce, or legal separation.

Several commenters suggested that the final regulations should state that elections made under Temporary Regulation § 7.0(a)(2) are effective under the final regulations. As proper elections made under temporary regulations are valid and have continuing legal effect, unless stated otherwise in the regulations, it was decided not to follow the suggestion.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

The following amendments to 26 CFR Parts 1, 7, 31, and 301 are hereby adopted.

Paragraph 1. Paragraph (a) of § 1.871-1 is amended by adding three sentences at the end that read as follows:

§ 1.871-1 Classification and manner of taxing alien individuals.

(a) Classes of aliens. * * * However, nonresident alien individuals may elect, under section 6013(g) or (h), to be treated as U.S. residents for purposes of determining their income tax liability under chapters 1, 5, and 24 of the Code. Accordingly, any reference in §§ 1.1-1 through 1.1388-1 and §§ 1.1491-1 through 1.1494-1 of this part to nonresident alien individuals does not include those with respect to whom an election under section 6013(g) or (h) is in effect, unless otherwise specifically provided. Similarly, any reference to resident aliens or U.S. residents includes those with respect to whom an election is in effect, unless otherwise specifically provided.

Par. 2. Paragraph (a)(1) of § 1.871-13 is amended by adding two sentences at the end that read as follows:

§ 1.871-13 Taxation of individuals for taxable year of change of U.S. citizenship or residence.

(a) In general. (1) * * * This section does not apply to alien individuals treated as residents for the entire taxable year under section 6013(g) or (h). These individuals are taxed under the rules in § 1.1-1(b).

* * * * *

Par. 3. There is added after § 1.878 the following new section:

§ 1.879-1 Treatment of community income.

(a) Treatment of community income—(1) In general. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976, community income of a citizen or resident of the United States who is married to a nonresident alien individual, and the deductions properly allocable to that income, shall be divided between the United States citizen or resident spouse and the nonresident alien spouse in accordance with the rules in section 879 and paragraph (a)(2) through (a)(6) of this section. This section does not apply for any taxable year with respect to which an election under section 6013 (g) or (h) is in effect. Community income for this purpose includes all gross income, whether derived from sources within or without the United States, which is treated as community income of the spouses under the community property laws of the State, foreign country, or possession of the United States in which the recipient of the income is domiciled. Income from real property also may be community income if so treated under the laws of the jurisdiction in which the real property is located.

(2) Earned income. Wages, salaries, or professional fees, and other amounts received as compensation for personal services actually performed, which are community income for the taxable year, shall be treated as the income of the spouse who actually performed the personal services. This paragraph (a)(2) does not apply, however, to the following items of community income:

(i) Community income from any trade or business carried on by the husband or the wife.

(ii) Community income attributable to a spouse's distributive share of the income of a partnership to which paragraph (a)(4) of this section applies.

(iii) Community income consisting of compensation for personal services rendered to a corporation which represents a distribution of the earnings and profits of the corporation rather than a reasonable allowance as compensation for the personal services actually performed, but not including any income that would be treated as earned income under the second sentence of section 911(b).

(iv) Community income derived from property which is acquired as consideration for personal services performed.

These items of community income are divided in accordance with the rules in paragraph (a)(3) through (a)(6) of this section.

(3) Trade or business income. If any income derived from a trade or business carried on by the husband or wife is community income for the taxable year, all of the gross income, and the deductions attributable to that income, shall be treated as the gross income and deductions of the husband. However, if the wife exercises substantially all of the management and control of the trade or business, all of the gross income and deductions shall be treated as the gross income and deductions of the wife. This paragraph (a)(3) does not apply to any income derived from a trade or business carried on by a partnership of which both or one of the spouses is a member (see paragraph (a)(4) of this section). For purposes of this paragraph (a)(3), income derived from a trade or business includes any income derived from a trade or business in which both personal services and capital are material income producing factors. The term "management and control" means management and control in fact, not the management and control imputed to the husband under the community property laws of a state, foreign country, or possession of the United States. For example, a wife who operates a pharmacy without any appreciable collaboration on the part of a husband is considered as having substantially all of the management and control of the business despite the provisions of any community property laws of a state, foreign country, or possession of the United States vesting in the husband the right of management and control of community property. The income and deductions attributable to the operation of the pharmacy are considered the income and deductions of the wife.

(4) Partnership income. If any portion of a spouse's distributive share of the income of a partnership, of which the spouse is a member, is community income for the taxable year, all of that distributive share shall be treated as the income of that spouse and shall not be taken into account in determining the income of the other spouse. If both spouses are members of the same partnership, the distributive share of the income of each spouse which is community income shall be treated as the income of that spouse. A spouse's distributive share of the income of a partnership that is community income shall be determined as provided in section 704 and the regulations thereunder.

(5) Income from separate property. Any community income for the taxable year, other than income described in section 978(a)(1) or (2) and paragraph (a)(2), (3), or (4) of this section, which is derived from the separate property of one of the spouses shall be treated as the income of that spouse. The determination of what property is separate property for this purpose shall be made in accordance with the laws of the State, foreign country, or possession of the United States in which, in accordance with paragraph (a)(1) of this section, the recipient of the income is domiciled or, in the case of income from real property, in which the real property is located.

(6) Other community income. Any community income for the taxable year, other than income described in section 879(a)(1), (2), or (3), and paragraph (a)(2), (3), (4), or (5) of this section, shall be treated as income of that spouse who has a proprietary vested interest in that income under the laws of the State, foreign country, or possession of the United States in which, in accordance with paragraph (a)(1) of this section, the recipient of the income is domiciled or, in the case of income from real property, in which the real property is located. Thus, for example, this paragraph (a)(6) applies to community income not described in paragraph (a)(2), (3), (4), or (5) of this section which consists of dividends, interest, rents, royalties, or gains, from community property or of the earnings of unemancipated minor children.

(7) Illustrations. The application of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). H, a U.S. citizen, and W, a nonresident alien individual, each of whose taxable years is the calendar year, were married throughout 1977. H and W were residents of, and domiciled in, foreign country Z during the entire taxable year. No election under section 6013(g) or (h) is in effect for 1977. During 1977, H earned $10,000 from the performance of personal services as an employee. H also received $500 in dividend income from stock which under the community property laws of country Z is considered to be the separate property of H. W had no separate income for 1977. Under the community property laws of country Z all income earned by either spouse is considered to be community income, and one-half of this income is considered to belong to the other spouse. In addition, the laws of country Z provide that all income derived from property held separately by either spouse is to be treated as community income and treated as belonging one-half to each spouse. Thus, under the community property laws of country Z, H and W are both considered to have realized income of $5,250 during 1977, even though Z's laws recognize the stock as the separate property of H. Under the rules of paragraph (a)(2) and (5) of this section all of the income of $10,500 derived during 1977 is treated, for U.S. income tax purposes, as the income of H.

Example (2). (a) The facts are the same as in example (1), except that H is the sole proprietor of a retail merchandising company, which has a $10,000 profit during 1977. W exercises no management and control over the business. In addition, H is a partner in a wholesale distributing company, and his distributive share of the partnership profit is $5,000. Both of these amounts of income are treated as community income under the community property laws of country Z, and under these laws both H and W are treated as realizing $7,500 of the income. Under the rule of paragraph (a)(3) and (4) of this section all $15,000 of the income is treated as the income of H for U.S. income tax purposes.

(b) If W exercises substantially all of the management and control over the retail merchandising company, then for U.S. income tax purposes the $10,000 profit is treated as the income of W.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that H also received $1,000 in dividends on stock held separately in his name. Under the community property laws of country Z the stock is considered to be community property, the dividends to be community income, and one-half of the income to be the income of each spouse. Under the rule of paragraph (a)(6) of this section, $500 of the dividend income is treated, for U.S. income tax purposes, as the income of each spouse.

(b) Definitions and other special rules—(1) Spouses with different taxable years. A special rule applies if the nonresident alien and the United States citizen or resident spouse of the alien do not have the same taxable years, as defined in section 441(b) and the regulations thereunder. The special rule is as follows. With respect to the United States citizen or resident spouse, section 879 and this section shall apply to each taxable year of the United States citizen or resident spouse for which no election under section 6013(g) or (h) is in effect. With respect to the nonresident alien spouse, section 879 and this section apply to each period falling within the consecutive taxable years of the nonresident alien spouse which coincides with a taxable year of the United States citizen or resident spouse to which section 879 and this section apply.

(2) Determination of marital status. For purposes of this section, marital status shall be determined under section 143(a).

Par. 4. Section 1.981 is repealed.

Par. 5. There is added after § 1.972-1 the following new section:

§ 1.981-0 Repeal of section 981; effective dates.

The provisions of section 981 are not effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976. For the treatment of the community income of aliens and their spouses for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976, see section 879 and the regulations thereunder.

Par. 6. Section 1.981-1 is amended as follows:

1. The title is amended to read as follows:

§ 1.981-1 Foreign law community income for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1966 and before January 1, 1977.

2. Paragraph (a)(1) is amended by inserting the phrase "and before January 1, 1977," in the first sentence between the phrases "after December 31, 1966" and the phrase ", may make a binding election".

Par. 7. Section 1.1441-1 is amended by adding a sentence at the end to read as follows:

§ 1.1441-1 Requirement for withholding of tax on nonresident aliens, foreign partnerships, and foreign corporations.

* * * The rules of chapter 3 of the Code and §§ 1.1441-1 through 1.1441-6 and §§ 1.1461-1 through 1.1464-1 apply to a nonresident alien individual even though the individual has an election in effect under section 6013 (g) or (h) of the Code.

Par. 8. Section 1.6012-1 is amended as follows:

1. Paragraph (b)(1)(i) is amended by inserting the phrase "(other than one treated as a resident under section 6013(g) or (h)" in the first sentence between the phrases "nonresident alien individual" and "who is engaged".

2. Paragraph (b)(2)(i) is amended by inserting the phrase "(other than one treated as a resident under section 6013(g) or (h))" in the first sentence between the phrases "A nonresident alien individual" and "who at no time".

3. Paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(a) is amended by deleting the period at the end of the second sentence and inserting in its place the phrase ", unless an election under section 6013(g) or (h) is in effect for the alien."

4. Paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(b) is amended by deleting the period at the end of the first sentence, and inserting in its place the phrase ", even if an election under section 6013(g) was in effect for the taxable year preceding the year of abandonment."

Par. 9. Paragraph (b) of § 1.6013-1 is revised to read as follows:

§ 1.6013-1 Joint returns.

* * * * *

(b) Nonresident alien. A joint return shall not be made if either the husband or wife at any time during the taxable year is a nonresident alien, unless an election is in effect for the taxable year under section 6013(g) or (h) and the regulations thereunder.

* * * * *

Par. 10. Section 1.6013-2 is amended by adding a new paragraph (a)(4) which reads as follows:

§ 1.6013-2 Joint return after filing separate return.

(a) In general.

(4) A nonresident alien treated as a resident under section 6013(g) or

(h) for any taxable year ending on or after December 31, 1975 and the alien's United States citizen or resident spouse may file a joint return for that taxable year, even though one or both of the spouses have previously filed separate returns for that taxable year. In this case, the rule in paragraph (a)(3) of this section does not apply.

* * * * *

Par. 11. There is added immediately after § 1.6013-5 the following new sections:

§ 1.6013-6 Election to treat nonresident alien individual as resident of the United States.

(a) Election for special treatment—(1) In general. Two individuals who are husband and wife at the close of a taxable year ending on or after December 31, 1975 may make an election under this section for that taxable year if, at the close of that year, one spouse is a citizen or resident of the United States and the other spouse is a nonresident alien. The effect of the election is that each spouse is treated as a resident of the United States for purposes of chapters 1, 5, and 24 and sections 6012, 6013, 6072, and 6091 of the Code for the entire taxable year. An election made under this section is in effect for the taxable year for which made and for all subsequent years of the husband and wife, except—

(i) Any taxable year for which the election is suspended, as described in paragraph (a)(3) of this section, and

(ii) Any taxable year for which the election is terminated in accordance with paragraph (b) of this section and all subsequent taxable years.

A husband and wife may not make an election if an election previously made under this section by either spouse has been terminated under paragraph (b) of this section.

(2) Particular rules. (i) As used in paragraph (a)(3) of this section, the term "United States spouse" means any married individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States at any time during a taxable year.

(ii) An individual's residence is determined by application of the principles of §§ 1.871-2 through 1.871-5 relating to what constitutes residence in the United States by an alien individual.

(iii) Whether two individuals are married at the close of a taxable year is determined by application of the rules in §1.6013-4(a).

(iv) The provisions of section 879 and the regulations thereunder shall not apply for any taxable year for which an election under this section is in effect.

(v) [Reserved]

(3) Suspension of election. (i) An election made under this section is suspended and is not in effect for a taxable year subsequent to the first taxable year for which made if neither spouse is a United States spouse during that subsequent taxable year. Thus, for example, the election is in suspense if both spouses are nonresident aliens for the entire taxable year.

(ii) If either spouse dies during any taxable year for which the election under this section is in effect, other than the first taxable year for which the election is to be in effect, the taxable year shall include, solely for purposes of this paragraph (a)(3), only those days during the taxable year on which both spouses are alive. Thus, for example, if the United States spouse dies during the taxable year, the election is not suspended for that year even if the surviving nonresident alien spouse never acquires United States citizenship or residency. Similarly, if the nonresident alien spouse dies during the taxable year, the election is not suspended for that year even if the surviving United States spouse subsequently abandons United States citizenship or residency. However, if neither spouse was a United States spouse at any time during the period of the taxable year when both spouses were alive, the election is suspended for that year even if the surviving spouse subsequently acquires United States citizenship or residency. For the effect of the death of either spouse on the status of the election in subsequent taxable years, see paragraph (b)(2) of this section.

(4) Time and manner of making an election. (i) A husband and wife shall make the election under this section by attaching a statement to a joint return for the first taxable year for which the election is to be in effect. The election must be made before the expiration of the period prescribed by section 6511(a) (or section 6511(c) if the period is extended by agreement) for making a claim for credit or refund. If either or both spouses die after the close of the taxable year but before the joint return is filed, the election may be made by the executor, administrator, or other person charged with the property of the deceased spouse. If the election is made with a joint amended return, the amended return should be made on Form 1040 or 1040A, the word "Amended" should be written clearly on the front of the return, and an amended return also must be filed for each subsequent taxable year as to which a return previously has been filed by either spouse.

(ii) The statement must contain a declaration that the election is being made and that the requirements of paragraph (a)(1) of this section are met for the taxable year. The statement must also contain the name, address, and taxpayer identifying number of each spouse. If the election is being made on behalf of a deceased spouse, the statement must contain the name and address of the executor, administrator, or other person making the election on behalf of the deceased spouse. The statement must be signed by both persons making the election.

(b) Termination of election—(1) Revocation. (i) An election under this section shall terminate if either spouse revokes the election. An election that is revoked terminates as of the first taxable year for which the last day prescribed by section 6072(a) and 6081(a) for filing the return of tax has not yet occurred.

(ii) Revocation of the election is made by filing a statement of revocation in the following manner. If the spouse revoking the election is required to file a return under section 6012, the statement is filed by attaching it to the return for the first taxable year to which the revocation applies. If the spouse revoking the election is not required to file a return under section 6012, but files a claim for refund under section 6511, the statement is filed by attaching it to the claim for refund. If the spouse revoking the election is not required to file a return and does not file a claim for refund, the statement is filed by submitting it to the service center director with whom was filed the most recent joint return of the spouses. The revocation may, if the revoking spouse dies after the close of the first taxable year to which the revocation applies but before the return, claim for refund, or statement of revocation is filed, be made by the executor, administrator or other person charged with the property of the deceased spouse.

(iii) A revocation of the election is effective as of a particular taxable year if it is filed on or before the last day prescribed by section 6072(a) and 6081(a) for filing the return of tax for that taxable year. However, the revocation is not final until that last day.

(iv) The statement of revocation must contain a declaration that the election under this section is being revoked. The statement must also contain the name, address, and taxpayer identifying number of each spouse. If the revocation is being made on behalf of a deceased spouse, the statement must contain the name and address of the executor, administrator, or other person revoking the election on behalf of the deceased spouse. The statement must also include a list of the States, foreign countries, and possessions of the United States which have community property laws and in which—

(A) Each spouse is domiciled, or

(B) Real property is located from which either of the spouses receives income. The statement must be signed by the person revoking the election.

(2) Death. An election under this section shall terminate if either spouse dies. An election that terminates on account of death terminates as of the first taxable year of the surviving spouse following the taxable year in which the death occurred. However, if the surviving spouse is a citizen or resident of the United States who is entitled to the benefits of section 2, the election terminates as of the first taxable year following the last taxable year for which the surviving spouse is entitled to the benefits of section 2. If both spouses die within the same taxable year, the election terminates as of the first day after the close of the taxable year in which the deaths occurred.

(3) Legal separation. An election under this section terminates if the spouses legally separate under a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance. An election that terminates on account of legal separation terminates as of the close of the taxable year preceding the taxable year in which the separation occurs. The rules in § 1.6013-4(a) are relevant in determining whether two spouses are legally separated.

(4) Inadequate records. An election under this section may be terminated by the Commissioner if it is determined that either spouse has failed to keep adequate records. An election that is terminated on account of inadequate records terminates as of the close of the taxable year preceding the taxable year for which the Commissioner determines that the election should be terminated. Adequate records are the books, records, and other information reasonably necessary to ascertain the amount of liability for taxes under chapters 1, 5, and 24 of the Code of either spouse for the taxable year. Adequate records also includes the granting of access to the books and records.

(c) Illustrations. The application of this section is illustrated by the following examples. In each case the individual's taxable year is the calendar year and the spouses are not legally separated.

Example (1). W, a U.S. citizen for the entire taxable year 1979, is married to H, a nonresident alien individual. W and H may make the section 6013(g) election for 1979 by filing the statement of election with a joint return. If W and H make the election, income from sources within and without the United States received by W and H in 1979 and subsequent years must be included in gross income for each taxable year unless the election later is terminated or suspended. While W and H must file a joint return for 1979, joint or separate returns may be filed for subsequent years.

Example (2). H and W are husband and wife and are both nonresident alien individuals. In June 1980 H becomes a U.S. resident and remains a resident for the balance of the year. H and W may make the section 6013(g) election for 1980. If H and W make the election, income from sources within and without the United States received by H and W for the entire taxable year 1980 and subsequent years must be included in gross income for each taxable year, unless the election later is terminated or suspended.

Example (3). W, a U.S. resident on December 31, 1981, is married to H, a nonresident alien. W and H make the section 6013(g) election and file joint returns for 1981 and succeeding years. On January 10, 1987, W becomes a nonresident alien. H has remained a nonresident alien. W and H may file a joint return or separate returns for 1987. As neither W nor H is a U.S. resident at any time during 1988, their election is suspended for 1988. If W and H have U.S. source or foreign source income effectively connected with the conduct of a U.S. trade or business in 1988, they must file separate returns as nonresident aliens. W becomes a U.S. resident again on January 5, 1990. Their election no longer is in suspense. Income from sources within and without the United States received by W or H in the years their election is not suspended must be included in gross income for each taxable year.

Example (4). H, a U.S. citizen for the entire taxable year 1979, is married to W, who is not a U.S. citizen. While W believes that she is a U.S. resident, H and W make the section 6013(g) election for 1979 to cover the possibility that later it would be determined that she is a nonresident alien during 1979. The election for 1979 will not be considered evidence that W was a nonresident alien in prior years. Income from sources within and without the United States received by H and W in 1979 and subsequent years must be included in gross income for each taxable year, unless the election later is terminated or suspended.

§ 1.6013-7 Joint return for year in which nonresident alien becomes resident of the United States.

(a) Election for special treatment—(1) In general. Two individuals who are husband and wife at the close of a taxable year ending on or after December 31, 1975, may make an election under this section for that taxable year if one spouse is a citizen or resident of the United States on the last day of that taxable year and the other spouse is a nonresident alien at the beginning of that taxable year and a citizen or resident of the United States at the close of that taxable year. Two married individuals who are nonresident aliens at the beginning of a taxable year and who are U.S. citizens or residents on the last day of that taxable year qualify for the election. The effect of the election is that each spouse is treated as a resident of the United States for purposes of chapters 1, 5, and 24 and sections 6012, 6013, 6072, and 6091 of the Code for all of that taxable year. A husband and wife may not make an election if an election has previously been made under this section by either spouse.

(2) Particular rules. The rules in subdivisions (ii) through (v) of § 1.6013-6(a)(2) are applicable to this section.

(3) Time and manner of making an election. A husband and wife shall make the election under this section in accordance with the rules in § 1.6013-6(a)(4).

(b) Section 6013(g) election in effect. If an election under section 6013 (g) is in effect for a year subsequent to the first taxable year for which made and during that subsequent year the husband and wife meet the requirements of section 6013(h) and paragraph (a)(1) of this section, then the election under section 6013(g) shall apply to that subsequent taxable year. A separate election under section 6013(h) is not required for that subsequent taxable year.

Par. 12. Paragraph (c) of § 1.6072-1 is amended by inserting the phrase "(other than one treated as a resident under section 6013(g) or (h))" in the first sentence between the phrases "nonresident alien individual" and "and of a foreign trust".

Par. 13. Paragraph (a) of § 1.6073-1 is amended by adding two sentences at the end that read as follows:

§ 1.6073-1 Time and place for filing declarations of estimated tax by individuals.

(a) Individuals other than farmers or fishermen. * * * A special rule applies to nonresident aliens who do not have wages subject to withholding under chapter 24 of the Code and are not treated as residents under section 6013(g) or (h) of the Code. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976, these aliens are not required to file a declaration of estimated tax before June 15th.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER D, PART 138.—TEMPORARY EXCISE TAX REGULATIONS UNDER THE ENERGY TAX ACT OF 1978

GAS GUZZLER TAX

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains Temporary Excise Tax Regulations relating to the gas guzzler tax, as provided by section 4064 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Energy Tax Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-618, 1978-3 (Vol. 2) 1, 6]. The regulations would provide manufacturers of automobiles with the guidance needed to comply with the new law. In addition, the rules contained in the temporary regulation set forth in this document also serve as a notice of proposed rulemaking by which the rules contained therein are proposed to be prescribed as final regulations.

DATES: These temporary regulations are effective with respect to 1980 and later model year automobiles. Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by April 8, 1980.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-205-78), Washington, D.C. 20224.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Eileen Murphy of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of the Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224 (Attention: CC:LR:T (202-566-3297).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains temporary regulations under section 4064 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The temporary regulations are necessary to conform the regulations to section 201 of the Energy Tax Act of 1978 (92 Stat. 3175).

The regulations promulgated in this documents are also proposed to be prescribed as final Excise Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 48) under sections 4064 and 4222 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

IN GENERAL

The Energy Tax Act of 1978 imposes on the sale by a manufacturer of an automobile a tax determined in accordance with tables provided under that Act. The tax is applicable to model types of 1980 and later model year automobiles which have a certain fuel economy level. The Act provides that a small manufacturer may apply to the Secretary for an alternate rate schedule by showing that it is not feasible for that manufacturer to meet the tax-free fuel economy level.

DEFINITIONS

The regulations define the following terms: sale, manufacturer, automobile, model year, model type, fuel economy, and fuel. The regulations define the term "sale" to include use or lease. Model year is defined as the manufacturer's annual production period (as determined by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency) which includes January 1 of any particular calendar year. The term "model type" means a particular class of automobile, as determined by regulation by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. The term "fuel economy" means the average (weighted 55 percent urban cycle and 45 percent highway cycle) number of miles traveled by an automobile per gallon of fuel consumed. Fuel is defined as gasoline and diesel fuel. The definitions of automobile, model year, model type, and fuel economy conform generally to the definition of these terms in regulations promulgated by the Department of Transportation and the Environmental Protection Agency.

PROCEDURE FOR APPLYING FOR ALTERNATE RATE SCHEDULE

The regulations outline the procedure to be followed by a small manufacturer seeking an alternate rate schedule. Applications are to be sent to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: Assistant Commissioner (Technical). The regulations prescribe the contents of the application. The regulations set forth the public policy considerations which will be taken into account by the Secretary in deciding whether to allow a manufacturer to use an alternate rate schedule. The regulations prescribe an alternate rate schedule that would be applicable to a qualifying small manufacturer.

WAIVER OF PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS OF TREASURY DIRECTIVE

There is need for expeditious adoption of the provisions contained in this document because of the need for immediate guidance to manufacturers to whom section 4064 applies in ascertaining whether they are liable for the tax imposed by that section. For this reason, Jerome Kurtz, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, has determined that the provisions of paragraphs 8 through 14 of the Treasury Department directive implementing Executive Order 12044 must be waived.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adoption of the final regulations proposed in this document, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably six copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the Federal Register.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is Eileen Murphy of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style. In addition, personnel from the Departments of Energy and Transportation, and the Environmental Protection Agency, were consulted with respect to technical and policy issues arising under the Act.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the following new sections are adopted and inserted in Part 138, Temporary Excise Tax Regulations Under the Energy Tax Act of 1978 (26 CFR Part 138):

(3) Liability for tax. The tax imposed by section 4064 is payable by the manufacturer making the sale.

(4) Cross-reference. In the case of an overpayment of tax imposed by this section, see section 6401 (relating to amounts treated as overpayments) and section 6416 (relating to certain taxes on sales and services).

(b) Definitions—(1) Sale. Sale includes the use (within the meaning of section 4218) or the first lease (within the meaning of section 4217(e)) of an automobile by the manufacturer.

(2) Manufacturer. The term "manufacturer" has the same meaning assigned to such term under § 48.0-2(a)(4). The term "manufacturer" includes a producer or importer. An importer is a person who imports an automobile whether or not in connection with a trade or business.

(3) Automobile. The term "automobile" means any four-wheeled vehicle, propelled by an engine powered by fuel, which is manufactured primarily for use on public streets, roads, and highways (except any vehicle operated exclusively on a rail or rails), and which is rated at 6,000 pounds gross vehicle weight or less, and which requires no further manufacturing operations to perform its intended function, other than the addition of readily attachable components, such as mirrors or tire and rim assemblies, or minor finishing operations such as painting. For this purpose, gross vehicle weight means the value specified by the manufacturer as the maximum design loaded weight of a single vehicle. An automobile does not include a nonpassenger automobile as defined in regulations in effect on November 9, 1978 (49 CFR 523.5) which were prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation for section 501 of the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act (15 U.S.C. 2001). In addition an automobile does not include the following: any vehicle sold for use and used primarily as an ambulance or combination ambulance-hearse; any vehicle sold for use and used by the United States or by a State or local government primarily for police or other law enforcement purposes or any vehicle sold for use and used primarily for firefighting purposes.

(4) Model year. The term "model year" means the manufacturer's annual production period (as determined by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency) which includes January 1 of any particular calendar year. If the manufacturer has no annual production year, the model year is the calendar year.

(5) Model type. The term "model type" means a particular class of automobile, as determined by regulation in effect on November 9, 1978 (40 CFR 600.002.79(a)(19)) which were prescribed by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

(6) Fuel economy. The term "fuel economy" means the average number of miles traveled by an automobile per gallon of fuel consumed. The fuel economy level for any model type is determined by the Environmental Protection Agency (as determined in accordance with the procedures provided in paragraph (c)). For this purpose, the fuel economy level is a combined (urban-highway weighted average) mileage figure estimated in connection with the determination of general label value (fuel economy information displayed on a sticker that is affixed to new automobiles) mandated under section 506 of the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act (15 U.S.C. 2006) and regulations thereunder in effect on November 9, 1978 (40 CFR 600).

(7) Fuel. The term "fuel" means gasoline and diesel fuel.

(c) Determination of fuel economy. For purposes of this section, the fuel economy for any model type is determined in accordance with the testing and calculation procedures utilized by the Environmental Protection Agency Administrator for model year 1975 (weighted 55 percent urban cycle and 45 percent highway cycle) or procedures established by the Administrator which yield comparable results. The Environmental Protection Agency's determination of a model type's fuel economy is made at the time the general label fuel economy value is calculated. This determination is conclusive for purposes of this section.

(d) Special rule for small manufacturers—(1) In general. A small manufacturer (as defined in subparagraph (2)(i)) may apply for a determination that it is not feasible for that manufacturer to meet the tax-free fuel economy level for the model year, with respect to all automobiles produced by that manufacturer, or with respect to a particular model type. For this purpose, the Commissioner will make a determination of maximum feasible fuel economy level with respect to the automobiles which are the subject of the determination, but only after consultation with the Secretary of Energy, the Secretary of Transportation, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency (or their delegates) to obtain their views. A finding that it is not feasible for the manufacturer to meet the statutory tax-free fuel economy level will be made by the Internal Revenue Service if the maximum feasible fuel economy level of the automobiles which are the subject of the determination is lower than the statutory tax-free fuel economy level for these automobiles. If it is determined that it is not feasible for a small manufacturer to meet the tax-free fuel economy level, the Secretary has the discretion to grant to the manufacturer the alternate rate schedule prescribed in paragraph (d)(3)(iii) in lieu of the rate schedule prescribed in section 4064 (a)(1) through (7). The decision whether to grant the alternate rate schedule is based on the consideration set forth in paragraph (d)(3)(ii) of this section. If a small manufacturer for which an alternate rate schedule under this paragraph (d) is applicable sells an automobile to an importer, the alternate rate schedule applies to the sale by the importer of such automobile (if such automobile is of the model type or year to which such alternate schedule applies).

(2) Definitions—(i) Small manufacturer. A small manufacturer is any manufacturer who produced (whether or not in the United States) fewer than 10,000 automobiles in the second model year preceding the affected model year (the model year for which the determination under this paragraph is being made), and who can reasonably be expected to produce (whether or not in the United States) fewer than 10,000 automobiles in the affected model year.

(ii) Manufacturer. For purposes of this paragraph, the term "manufacturer" does not include a person who is solely an importer, but does include a producer of automobiles outside the United States who is also an importer.

(iii) Members of a controlled group. For the purposes of this paragraph (d), persons who are members of a controlled group of corporations (as defined in section 1563(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, except that "more than 50 percent" is substituted for "at least 80 percent" each place it appears in section 1563(a)) are treated as one manufacturer.

(3) Basis for determination—(i) Maximum feasible fuel economy level. For purposes of this paragraph, the maximum feasible fuel economy level is determined by taking into account the same factors used in determining the maximum feasible fuel economy level under section 502(e) of the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act (as amended) and the regulations thereunder in effect on November 9, 1978. (These regulations for small manufacturers are prescribed in 49 CFR 525 (1978).) In making this determination, the Commissioner will consult with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration of the Department of Transportation.

(ii) Decision to grant alternate rate schedule. In deciding whether to grant an alternate rate schedule, the Secretary will consider whether the use (in the United States) of the automobile serves an important public policy (e.g., providing public transportation or transportation for the handicapped) that overrides the Nation's need to conserve energy. The manufacturer has the burden of demonstrating that the public policy consideration involved overrides the Nation's need to conserve energy. The Commissioner, after consultation with the Secretary of Energy, the Secretary of Transportation, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency (or their delegates), will review the information submitted by the manufacturer and report findings and recommendations to the Secretary.

(iii) Alternate rate schedule and tax. If an alternate rate schedule is granted, the maximum feasible fuel economy level is considered the tax-free fuel economy level. Accordingly, a tax is imposed on automobiles sold which fail to meet that level. The applicable tax is determined by substituting the maximum feasible fuel economy level for the tax-free fuel economy level in the tax schedules set forth in section 4064(a), and by substituting for the miles per gallon amount prescribed in section 4064(a) an amount which is the tax-free level decreased by one mile per gallon increments, while keeping the same corresponding tax amount prescribed in section 4064 (a). This rule may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Manufacturer X, a small manufacturer, applied for a determination that it is not feasible for X to meet the tax-free fuel economy level for a particular model type of X's 1982 model year automobiles. It was determined that the maximum feasible fuel economy level for that model type was 15 miles per gallon. The Secretary decided to grant X an alternate rate schedule. The alternate rate schedule for the model type would be as follows:

If the fuel economy of the automobile is:	The tax is:
At least 15	$ 0
At least 14 but not more than 15	200
At least 13 but not more than 14	350
At least 12 but not more than 13	450
At least 11 but not more than 12	600
At least 10 but not more than 11	750
At least 9 but not more than 10	950
Less than 9	1,200

Thus, if X's 1982 automobiles of that model year and type only attain 12 miles per gallon (because X fails to modify them to reach the maximum feasible fuel economy level before they are sold), the tax imposed upon the sale of each automobile is $450 (instead of the $1,200 tax (see the tax table set forth in section 4064(a)(2)) which would have been imposed had no alternate rate schedule been prescribed).

(4) Duration of determination. A determination under this paragraph does not apply to more than three model years.

(5) Requirements for application. Each application for a determination under this section must—

(i) Identify the model year or years, and particular model type or types for which a determination is requested;

(ii)(A) In the case of an application for model year 1980, be submitted not later than May 8, 1980;

(B) In the case of an application for model year 1981, be submitted not later than 9 months before the beginning of that model year or March 10, 1980, whichever is later;

(C) In the case of an application for model year 1982 or any subsequent model year, be submitted not later than 9 months before that model year;

(iii) Be submitted in three copies to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: Assistant Commissioner (Technical), 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224;

(iv) Be written in the English language;

(v) Set forth the full name, address, and title of the official responsible for preparing the application;

(vi) State whether the applicant is a member of a controlled group of corporations (as defined in paragraph (d)(2)(iii));

(vii) State the total number of automobiles manufactured (whether or not in the United States) by the applicant (or the controlled group of corporations in the case where the applicant is a member of the group) in the second model year immediately preceding each affected model year and the total number of automobiles likely to be manufactured in the affected model year;

(viii) Set forth the same information required by an application pursuant to section 502(e) of the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act (as amended) and the regulations thereunder (see 49 C.F.R. 525 (1978)) (whether or not the applicant under this paragraph has also made an application pursuant to such Act); and

(ix) Set forth the reasons why an alternate rate schedule should be granted under paragraph (d)(3)(ii) of this section.

(6) Update of application. A manufacturer making an application under this section must update the application when a material change of circumstances occurs or material information not available at the time of applying becomes available. The manufacturer must also furnish any further information relevant to the application which may be required by the Internal Revenue Service.

(7) Processing of applications. If a manufacturer's application is found not to contain the information required by this paragraph, the applicant will be informed of the areas of insufficiency. The application will not receive further consideration until the required information is submitted. Each applicant will be informed in writing whether an application has been granted or denied.

§ 138.4222-1 Registration.

The registration procedure set forth in § 48.4222(a)-1 applies to tax-free sales on or after March 10, 1980 under section 4064(b)(1)(C) (relating to emergency vehicles). The manufacturer, intervening vendors (if any), and the vendee must be registered. See section 4064 and the regulations thereunder. The exceptions to the requirement for registration set forth in § 48.4222(b)-1 shall apply. Notwithstanding any provision in paragraph (a) of § 48.4222(b)-1, a State or local government is not required to register as provided in § 48.4222(a)-1 even though the purchased vehicle is not purchased directly from the manufacturer for its exclusive use.

There is need for the immediate guidance provided by the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it is found impracticable to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

ISSUE

How will the trust arrangement described below be classified for federal tax purposes?

FACTS

A promoter established a trust that was funded by contributions from various individuals designated as income beneficiaries. Each individual contributed 100x dollars for an income interest in the trust, with the remainder interest passing to other persons designated by them. The trust agreement provides that the income of the trust is distributable to the income beneficiaries for a period of 12 years, at which time it will terminate and its remaining assets will be distributed to the remaindermen. No beneficiary has a power under local law to terminate the trust, nor will the death, insanity, bankruptcy, retirement, resignation or expulsion of any beneficiary cause the trust to be dissolved. The trustee has, in addition to other powers, the power to engage in business, and has continuing exclusive authority to make the management decisions necessary for the conduct of the trust business. The agreement further provides that the beneficiaries may not transfer, pledge or assign their beneficial interests in the trust. Under local law the beneficiaries are not personally liable for the debts of the trust.

The trustee used the contributed funds as a downpayment to purchase from the inventor a patent for exploitation by the trust in a business activity described in section 465(c) of the Internal Revenue Code. The balance of the stated purchase price for the patent was financed by giving a full-recourse note to the inventor, with the properties as security. The promoter and the trustee selected by the promoter represent that the trust qualifies as an ordinary trust under the provisions of subparts A, B, C, and D, (section 641 and following), part I, subchapter J, chapter 1 of the Code, and that the income beneficiaries are entitled to deduct, under section 167(h), any depreciation or amortization of the trust as if they were absolute owners of the properties held by the trust. The promoter further represents that the beneficiaries are not subject to the loss limiting rules of section 465 with respect to such depreciation.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 7701(a)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that the term "corporation" includes associations, joint-stock companies, and insurance companies.

In general, the term "trust" as used in the Internal Revenue Code refers to an arrangement created by a will or an inter vivos declaration whereby trustees take title to property for the purpose of protecting or conserving it for the beneficiaries under the ordinary rules applied in chancery or probate courts. See section 301.7701-4(a) of the Procedure and Administration Regulations.

There are other arrangements which while trusts under local law are not classified as trusts under the Internal Revenue Code because they are not arrangements to protect and conserve property for the beneficiaries. Rather, these trusts, which are often known as business or commercial trusts, are created by the beneficiaries as a device to carry on a profit-making business.

Section 301.7701-2(a)(1) of the regulations provides that an "association" is an organization whose characteristics require it to be classified for purposes of taxation as a corporation rather than as another type of organization such as a partnership or trust. An organization will be treated as an association if its corporate characteristics are such that the organization more nearly resembles a corporation than a partnership or trust. The regulations refer to six characteristics ordinarily found in a pure corporation that, taken together, distinguish it from other organizations. These are: (1) associates, (2) an objective to carry on business and divide the gains therefrom, (3) continuity of life, (4) centralization of management, (5) liability for corporate debts limited to corporate property, and (6) free transferability of interests. Section 301.7701-2 (a)(3) provides that an unincorporated organization will not be classified as an association unless such organization has more corporate characteristics than noncorporate characteristics. However, in determining whether an organization has more corporate characteristics than noncorporate characteristics, all characteristics common to both types of organizations shall not be considered.

Because centralization of management, continuity of life, free transferability of interests, and limited liability are generally common to trusts and corporations, the determination of whether a trust that has such characteristics is to be treated for tax purposes as a trust or as an association depends on whether there are associates and an objective to carry on business and divide the gains therefrom. This trust arrangement has associates and an objective to carry on business and divide the gains therefrom. Thus, under the regulations, it will be classified as an association for federal tax purposes. However, it should be noted that if, under the regulations, the arrangement could have been classified as a trust, it would have been a grantor trust pursuant to Rev. Rul. 78-175, 1978-1 C.B. 144, each grantor would have been treated as engaged in the section 465 activity of the trust and therefore subject to the loss limitations of that section.

HOLDING

The arrangement is classified as an association taxable as a corporation for federal tax purposes. Therefore, the income beneficiaries may not deduct any depreciation or amortization on any property held by the association.

Part III. Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER H, PART 601.—STATEMENT OF PROCEDURAL RULES

Miscellaneous Amendments

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Amendment of Statement of Procedural Rules.

SUMMARY: This document contains miscellaneous amendments to the Statement of Procedural Rules (SPR). The SPR sets forth the procedural rules of the Internal Revenue Service for all taxes administered by the Service as well as certain rules that apply to the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. These amendments make certain changes in the Service's procedure, eliminate discriminatory language, and bring certain provisions of the SPR up to date.

DATE: The amendments are effective upon publication.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains amendments to the SPR (26 CFR Part 601). These amendments do not meet the Treasury Department criteria for a significant regulation set forth in paragraph 8 of the Treasury Directive for improving government regulations, published in the Federal Register for November 8, 1978 (43 FR 52120). The amendments are issued under the authority contained in 5 U.S.C. §§ 301 and 552.

These amendments fall into several categories. A description of the most significant amendments in each category follows:

Conforming Amendments

Several amendments reflect the delegation of authority within the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. For example, the change in § 601.327(a) from Director, Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division to Assistant Director (Regulatory Enforcement), Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms reflects the delegation of authority in ATF Order 1100.63B (43 FR 55305). Other amendments relating to the Bureau change nomenclature, addresses, and cross-references.

Several amendments conform the SPR to the procedures set forth in the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 for the assessment, collection, refund, and credit of excise taxes imposed by chapters 41 through 44 of the Code.

Several sections are changed to conform to the amendments made by section 1202 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (Pub. L. No. 94-455, 90 Stat. 1667) [1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 143], which revised section 6103 of the Code, relating to disclosure of returns and return information, and repealed section 6106 of the Code, relating to publicity of unemployment tax returns. Thus, § 601.702(d)(1) is revised to reflect the amendment to section 6103 deleting the provision that returns are open to inspection only upon order of the President and under rules and regulations approved by the President. Paragraphs (d)(2) and (4) of § 601.702, which relate to disclosure of information as to persons filing certain tax returns, are deleted to reflect the amendment of section 6103(f) and the repeal of section 6106.

Paragraphs (a)(1)(i), (a)(2), and (d)(3) of § 601.106, relating to Appeals functions, are amended to conform to Delegation Order 60 (Rev. 5) (1979-48 I.R.B. 20), Delegation Order No. 66 (Rev. 9) [1979-27 I.R.B. 18] (44 FR 33509), and Rev. Proc. 79-59 (1979-48 I.R.B. 21). The amendments relate to limitations upon Appeals authority and to the processing of cases docketed in the United States Tax Court.

Section 601.203(a)(1) is amended to conform to Delegation Order 11 (Rev. 11) [1979-43 I.R.B. 25] (44 FR 50128), which authorizes certain officials to accept or reject offers in compromise for specified categories of civil and criminal cases.

Amendments deleting out-of-date material

Sections 601.101(c) and 601.501(a) are amended by deleting references to the Economic Stabilization Program, which has been terminated.

Section 601.105(i) is amended by deleting reference to review by the National Office Examination Division of examined cases closed in the Office of International Operations. The National Office no longer performs that function.

Section 601.404, relating to miscellaneous excise taxes collected by sale of revenue stamps, is amended to reflect the repeal of some of these excise taxes.

Amendments clarifying the SPR

Section 601.105(k) is amended to provide further guidance with respect to the transfer of returns between districts for examination or the closing of a case. The amendment makes clear that the transfer of returns is not mandatory and that the effective administration of the tax laws will be considered in determining if returns will be transferred to another district.

Amendments reflecting changes in procedure

Section 601.106(a)(1)(ii), relating to Appeals procedures, is amended to reflect the Service's requirement that a written protest be submitted on all post-assessment penalty appeals.

Paragraph (b)(1) of § 601.502, relating to requirements for recognition to practice before the Revenue Service, is amended to reflect the requirement that taxpayer representatives present satisfactory identification before they appear on behalf of any taxpayer. Paragraph (b)(1)(iii) is amended to extend to enrolled agents the requirement of filing a written declaration of qualification and authorization.

Section 601.504(b)(1), relating to execution of a power of attorney or a tax information authorization, is amended to provide that a husband and wife can authorize separate representatives with respect to joint returns. A separate representative cannot, however, perform any act with respect to a joint return year that the spouse represented could not perform alone.

Section 601.506(b)(2), relating to delivery of refund checks in cases in litigation, is amended to provide a procedure for delivery of such checks in actions arising in the United States Tax Court. Under this procedure a check is delivered to the appropriate Internal Revenue Service District Counsel or, in certain cases, to the appropriate member of the National Office Trial Staff, for delivery to the taxpayer or to the counsel of record.

Amendments eliminating discriminatory language

Many sections of the SPR are to eliminate the exclusive use of masculine pronouns in referring to taxpayers, internal revenue agents, etc. For example, in § 601.103(c)(3) "he" is changed to "the taxpayer".

Miscellaneous amendments

Additional miscellaneous amendments are included, such as the correction of a clerical error, the change of a publication number, the addition of form numbers, and other amendments of a similar nature.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these amendments to the Statement of Procedural Rules is Benedetta A. Kissel of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service participated in developing the amendments, both on matters of substance and style.

§ 601.106 Appeals functions.

(a) General. (1)(i) * * * After the filing of a petition in the Tax Court the Appeals office will have exclusive settlement jurisdiction, subject to the provisions of subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, for a period of 4 months (but no later than the receipt of the trial calendar in regular cases and no later than 15 days before the calendar call in S cases), over cases docketed in the Tax Court. * * *

(ii) * * * A written protest is required on all postassessment penalty appeals.

(iii) * * *

(c) Penalties that are subject to an administratively granted preassessment appeal procedure such as that provided in § 1.6694-2(a)(1) because taxpayers are able to protest such penalties prior to assessment;

* * * * *

(2) The authority described in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph does not include the authority to:

(i) Negotiate or make a settlement in any case docketed in the Tax Court if the notice of deficiency, liability or other determination was issued by Appeals officials;

(ii) Negotiate or make a settlement in any docketed case if the notice of deficiency, liability or other determination was issued after appeals consideration of all petitioned issues by the Employee Plans/Exempt Organizations function;

(iii) Negotiate or make a settlement in any docketed case if the notice of deficiency, liability or final adverse determination letter was issued by a District Director and is based upon a National Office ruling or National Office technical advice in that case involving a qualification of an employee plan or tax exemption and/or foundation status of an organization (but only to the extent the case involves such issue);

(iv) Negotiate or make a settlement if the case was docketed under Code sections 6110, 7477, or 7478;

(v) Eliminate the ad valorem fraud penalty in any case in which the penalty was determined by the district office or service center office in connection with a tax year or period, or which is related to or affects such year or period, for which criminal prosecution against the taxpayer (or related taxpayer involving the same transaction) has been recommended to the Department of Justice for willful attempt to evade or defeat tax, or for willful failure to file a return, except upon the recommendation or concurrence of Counsel; or

(vi) Act in any case in which a recommendation for criminal prosecution is pending, except with the concurrence of Counsel.

* * * * *

(d) Disposition and settlement of cases before Appeals. * * *

(2) Cases not docketed in the Tax Court. * * *

(ii) If after consideration of the case by Appeals it is determined that there is a deficiency in income, profits, estate, gift tax, chapter 41, 42, 43, or 44 tax liability to which the taxpayer does not agree, a statutory notice of deficiency will be prepared and issued by Appeals. * * *

* * * * *

(3) Cases docketed in the Tax Court. * * *

(iii) * * *

(a) The Appeals office will have exclusive settlement jurisdiction for a period of 4 months over certain cases docketed in the Tax Court. The 4-month period will commence at the time Appeals receives the case from Counsel, which will be after the case is at issue. Appeals will arrange settlement conferences in such cases within 45 days of receipt of the case. In the event of a settlement, Appeals will prepare and forward to Counsel the necessary computations and any stipulation decisions secured. Counsel will prepare any needed settlement documents for execution by the parties and filing with the Tax Court. Appeals will also have authority to settle less than all the issues in the case and to refer the unsettled issues to Counsel for disposition. In the event of a partial settlement, Appeals will inform Counsel of the agreement of the petitioner(s) and Appeals may secure and forward to Counsel a stipulation covering the agreed issues. Counsel will, if necessary, prepare documents reflecting settlement of the agreed issues for execution by the parties and filing with the Tax Court at the appropriate time.

(b) At the end of the 4-month period, or before that time if Appeals determines the case is not susceptible of settlement, the case will be returned to Counsel. Thereafter, Counsel will have exclusive authority to dispose of the case. If, at the end of the 4-month period, there is substantial likelihood that a settlement of the entire case can be effected in a reasonable period of time, Counsel may extend Appeals setlement jurisdiction for a period not to exceed 60 days, but not beyond the date of the receipt of a trial calendar upon which the case appears. Extensions beyond the 60-day period or after the event indicated will be granted only with the personal approval of regional counsel and will be made only in those cases in which the probability of settlement of the case in its entirety by Appeals clearly outweighs the need to commence trial preparation.

(c) During the period of Appeals jurisdiction, Appeals will make available such files and information as may be necessary for Counsel to take any action required by the Court or which is in the best interest of the Government. When a case is referred by Counsel to Appeals, Counsel may indicate areas of needed factual development or areas of possible technical uncertainties. In referring a case to Counsel, Appeals will furnish its summary of the facts and the pertinent legal authorities.

(d) The Appeals office may specify that proposed Counsel settlements be referred back to Appeals for its views. Appeals may protest the proposed Counsel settlements. If Counsel disagrees with Appeals, the Regional Counsel will determine the disposition of the cases.

(e) If an offer is received at or about the time of trial in a case designated by the Appeals office for setlement consultation, Counsel will endeavor to have the case placed on a motions calendar to permit consultation with and review by Appeals in accordance with the foregoing procedures.

(f) For issues in docketed and nondocketed cases pending with Appeals which are related to issues in docketed cases over which Counsel has jurisdiction, no settlement offer will be accepted by either Appeals or Counsel unless both agree that the offer is acceptable. The protest procedure will be available to Appeals and regional counsel will have authority to resolve the issue with respect to both the Appeals and Counsel cases. If settlement of the docketed case requires approval by regional counsel or Chief Counsel, the final decision with respect to the issues under the jurisdiction of both Appeals and Counsel will be made by regional counsel or Chief Counsel. See Rev. Proc. 79-59 [1979-48 I.R.B. 21].

(f) Conference and practice requirements. * * *

(2) Rule II. Appeals will ordinarily give serious consideration to an offer to settle a tax controversy on a basis which fairly reflects the relative merits of the opposing views in light of the hazards which would exist if the case were litigated. However, no settlement will be made based upon nuisance value of the case to either party. If the taxpayer makes an unacceptable proposal of settlement under circumstances indicating a good-faith attempt to reach an agreed disposition of the case on a basis fair both to the Government and the taxpayer, the Appeals official generally should give an evaluation of the case in such a manner as to enable the taxpayer to ascertain the kind of settlement that would be recommended for acceptance. Appeals may defer action on or decline to settle some cases or issues (for example, issues on which action has been suspended nationwide) in order to achieve greater uniformity and enhance overall voluntary compliance with the tax laws.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on Subpart A, Tax Conventions and related Treasury Decisions and Revenue Rulings; Subpart B, Legislation and related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical Indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Price: $1.00 (single copy). Subscription price: $50.00 a year; $12.50 additional for foreign mailing.

ESTATE TAX

Rev. Rul. 80-81, page 12.

Refund of deceased employee's contribution to Civil Service Retirement System. A divorce court that has the power to decree a settlement of all marital rights ordered that if a federal employee died prior to retirement, the lump-sum refund of the employee's contribution to the U.S. Civil Service Retirement System, plus any interest accrued thereon, would be payable to the employee's former spouse. The employee died prior to retirement. The refund is includible in the employee's gross estate under section 2039 of the Code and is deductible under section 2053(a)(4).

GIFT TAX

Rev. Rul. 80-82, page 13.

Transfer of annuity payments; incident to agreement in contemplation of divorce. A retired federal employee, in contemplation of a divorce, entered into a written property settlement agreement providing that, after the divorce, the ex-spouse would receive one-half of the employee's annuity payments under the U.S. Civil Service Retirement System. Within two years thereafter, a divorce court that had no power to alter the agreement incorporated it into a divorce decree. The employee did not make a gift to the ex-spouse, because the transfer is deemed to be made for full and adequate consideration in money or money's worth under section 2516.

Rev. Rul. 80-83, page 14.

Unitrust remainder interest; donee's power; beneficial interest; presently ascertainable. A donor transferred shares of stock in a publicly held corporation to a qualified, pre-existing charitable remainder unitrust. The donor was both a director of the corporation and one of two cotrustees of the trust. The trust corpus consisted solely of that corporation's stock, which was subject to a right of "first refusal." The trustees, using independent judgment, consistently adopted the same price as the fair market value of the trust's stock. Because the donor is bound by a fiduciary duty as both a director and cotrustee, the donor's power to determine the stock's value is limited. Therefore, the value of the charitable beneficial interest is presently ascertainable, and the charitable deduction is allowable with respect to the remainder interest.

ESTATE AND GIFT TAXES

Rev. Rul. 80-80, page 10.

Valuation; actuarial tables; imminent death of transferee. The actuarial tables set forth in the regulations may be disregarded in valuing annuities, life estates, terms for years, remainders, and reversions for estate and gift tax purposes only if the individual is known to have been afflicted, at the time of transfer, with an incurable physical condition that is in such an advanced stage that death is clearly imminent; Rev. Rul. 66-307 clarified.

Announcement Relating to Decisions of the Tax Court

It is the policy of the Internal Revenue Service to announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin at the earliest practicable date the determination of the Commissioner to acquiesce or not acquiesce in a decision of the Tax Court which disallows a deficiency in tax determined by the Commissioner to be due.

Notice that the Commissioner has acquiesced or nonacquiesced in a decision of the Tax Court relates only to the issues or issues decided adversely to the Government.

Actions of acquiescences in adverse decisions shall be relied on by Revenue officers and others concerned as conclusions of the Service only to the application of the law to the facts in the particular case. Caution should be exercised in extending the application of the decision to a similar case unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same, and consideration should be given to the effect of new legislation, regulations, and rulings as well as subsequent court decisions and actions thereon.

Acquiescence in a decision means acceptance by the Service of the conclusion reached, and does not necessarily mean acceptance and approval of any or all of the reasons assigned by the Court for its conclusions.

No announcements are made in the Bulletin with respect to memorandum opinions of the Tax Court.

The announcements published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletins are consolidated semiannually and annually. The semiannual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for July and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the first half of the year and the annual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for the following January and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the last half of the year.

The Commissioner ACQUIESCES in the following decisions:

Stock transfer; stockholder to employee of corporation's subsidiary. A corporation's majority stockholder recognizes no gain or loss on a transfer of stock of the corporation to an employee of the corporation's subsidiary, but must allocate the basis in the transferred stock to the shares retained. The fair market value of the stock at the time of transfer is includible in the employee's gross income and is subject to income tax withholding. The subsidiary may deduct the amount includible in the employee's income, but does not recognize gain or loss on the transfer. Rev. Rev. Rul. 80-76

ISSUE

What are the federal income tax consequences of a transfer of stock under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

On January 2, 1979, A, an individual who owned a majority of the outstanding shares of P, a domestic corporation, transferred 10 shares of P stock to B. B was a key employee of S, also a domestic corporation and controlled by P within the meaning of section 368(c) of the Internal Revenue Code. The fair market value of the 10 shares on the date of transfer was 75*x* dollars. B's rights in the P stock were not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture. The total compensation received by B in 1979, including the fair market value of the P stock, was reasonable compensation for services performed by B for S. Both S and B file federal income tax returns on a calendar year basis.

LAW

The applicable sections of the Code and the Income Tax Regulations are 83(a) and 1.83-1(a)(1), relating to the inclusion in gross income of the fair market value of property transferred in connection with the performance of services; 83(h) and 1.83-6, relating to the allowance of a deduction by the employer; and 3402 and 31.3402(a)-1, relating to the withholding of income tax at source on wages.

Section 83(a) of the Code provides that if, in connection with the performance of services, property is transferred to any person other than the person for whom the services are performed, the excess of (1) the fair market value of the property (determined without regard to any restriction other than a restriction which by its terms will never lapse) at the first time the rights of the person having the beneficial interest in the property are transferable or are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture, whichever occurs earlier, over (2) the amount (if any) paid for the property, is includible in the gross income of the person who performed the services in the first taxable year in which the rights of the person having the beneficial interest in the property are transferable or are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture, whichever is applicable.

Section 1.83-6(a)(1) of the regulations provides that, in the case of a transfer of property in connection with the performance of services, a reduction is allowable under section 162 or 212 of the Code, to the person for whom the services were performed. The amount of the deduction is equal to the amount includible as compensation in the gross income of the service provider, but only to the extent the amount meets the requirements of section 162 or 212 and the regulations thereunder.

Section 1.83-6(a)(2) of the regulations provides that, if the service provider is an employee of the person for whom services are performed, the deduction is allowed only if the employer deducts and withholds upon the amount in accordance with section 3402 of the Code.

HOLDINGS

(1) No gain or loss is recognized by A as a result of the transfer of the 10 shares of P stock; however, A must allocate A's basis in the transferred stock to A's remaining shares of P stock.

(2) The fair market value of the stock on January 2, 1979, 75*x* dollars, is includible in B's gross income under section 83(a) of the Code for 1979 and is subject to the withholding of income tax at source on wages.

(3) Pursuant to section 83(h), S is allowed a deduction under section 162 of 75*x* dollars for 1979.

(4) Because section 83 applies to the transfer of the P stock to B, S does not recognize gain or loss on the transfer of the P stock.

The above principles would also apply had B's rights in the P stock been subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 69-369, 1969-2 C.B. 27, which holds that the fair market value of stock transferred to a corporation by its majority shareholder pursuant to a prearranged plan for distribution by the corporation to certain of its employees is includible in the gross incomes of the employees under section 61 of the Code, but is not deductible by the corporation under section 162, is obsoleted with respect to transfers occurring after June 30, 1969, the effective date of section 83.

Rev. Rul. 69-368, 1969-2 C.B. 27, which holds that the fair market value of stock contributed to a corporation by its majority shareholder, not under a prearranged plan, and subsequently distributed by the corporation to its employees is includible in the gross incomes of the employees under section 61 of the Code and is deductible by the corporation under section 162, is also obsoleted with respect to transfers occurring after June 30, 1969.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On July 30, 1979, the Federal Register published amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 84 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, and to the Gift Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 25) under section 2501 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (44 FR 44553). These amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to sections 13 and 14 of the Act of January 3, 1975 (88 Stat. 2120). No comments were received with respect to the proposed amendments, and no public hearing was requested or held. The proposed amendments are adopted by this Treasury decision without change.

NEW RULES

The regulations adopted by this Treasury decision contain new rules applicable to transfers of appreciated property to political organizations after May 7, 1974. These transfers are governed by section 84, added to the Code in 1975.

In general, section 84 treats certain transfers of appreciated property to political organizations as sales for purposes of the income tax. The term "political organization" is defined in section 527(e)(1). The term "transfer" is defined under the new rules as any assignment, conveyance or delivery of property other than a bona fide sale for an adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth.

The transferor is taxed on the difference between the fair market value and the adjusted basis of the property. In determining the amount of gain recognized by the transferor, the income tax rules relating to a sale of property apply. Because of the recognition of gain by the transferor at the time the property is contributed, the political organization is not permitted to "tack" the holding period of the donor to its holding period for purposes of determining its own holding period. Rather, under the new rules, the holding period of the political organization begins on the day after it acquires the property.

The new rules conform the regulations to the exemption from gift tax of money or other property transferred to a political organization. At the same time, the rules emphasize that the gift tax continues to apply to transfers to organizations other than political organizations.

The final regulations adopted by this Treasury decision impose no new reporting or recordkeeping requirements. Evaluation of the effectiveness of these regulations after issuance will be based upon comments received from offices within Treasury and the Internal Revenue Service, other governmental agencies, and the public.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is Susan K. Thompson of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Parts 1 and 25 are amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The following new section is inserted immediately following section 1.83-8:

§ 1.84-1 Transfer of appreciated property to political organizations.

(a) Transfer defined. A transfer after May 7, 1974, of property to a political organization (as defined in section 527(e)(1), and including a newsletter fund to the extent provided under section 527(g)) is treated as a sale of the property to the political organization if the fair market value of the property exceeds its adjusted basis. The transferor is treated as having realized an amount equal to the fair market value of the property on the date of the transfer. For purposes of this section, a transfer is any assignment, conveyance, or delivery of property other than a bona fide sale for an adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth, whether the transfer is in trust or otherwise, whether the transfer is direct or indirect and whether the property is real or personal, tangible or intangible. Thus, for example, a sale at less than fair market value (other than an ordinary trade discount), or a receipt of property by a political organization under an agency agreement entitling the organization to sell the property and retain all or a portion of the proceeds of the sale, is a transfer within the meaning of this section. The term "transfer" also includes an illegal contribution of property.

(b) Amount realized. A transferor to whom this section applies realizes an amount equal to the fair market value of the property on the date of the transfer. For purposes of this section, the definition of fair market value set forth in § 1.170A-1(c)(2) and (3) is incorporated by reference.

(c) Amount recognized. A transferor to whom this section applies is treated as having sold the property to the political organization on the date of the transfer. Therefore, the rules of chapter 1 of subtitle A (relating to income tax) apply to the gain realized under this section as if this gain were an amount realized upon the sale of the property. These rules include those of section 55 and section 56 (relating to minimum tax for tax preference), section 306 (relating to disposition of certain stock), section 1201 (relating to the alternative tax on certain capital gains), section 1245 (relating to gain from dispositions of certain depreciable property), and section 1250 (relating to gain from dispositions of certain depreciable realty).

(d) Holding period. The holding period of property transferred to a political organization to which this section applies begins on the day after the date of acquisition of the property by the political organization.

Par. 2. Section 25.2501 is deleted.

Par. 3. Section 25.2501-1 is amended by adding at the end of paragraph (a) a new subparagraph (5) to read as follows:

§ 25.2501-1 Imposition of tax.

(a) In general. * * *

(5) The general rule of this paragraph (a) shall not apply to a transfer after May 7, 1974, of money or other property to a political organization for the use of that organization. However, this exception to the general rule applies solely to a transfer to a political organization as defined in section 527(e)(1) and including a newsletter fund to the extent provided under section 527(g). The general rule governs a transfer of property to an organization other than a political organization as so defined.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Section 162.—Trade or Business Expenses

26 CFR 1.162-7: Compensation for personal services.

Applicability of section 83 of the Code to the transfer of a corporation's stock from a shareholder of the corporation to an employee of the corporation's wholly owned subsidiary. See Rev. Rul. 80-76, page 6.

Section 170.—Charitable, Etc., Contributions and Gifts

26 CFR 1.170A-1: Charitable, etc., contributions and gifts; allowance of deduction.

Charitable contributions. Situations are presented in which payments to the Red Cross, a volunteer fire department, the Girl Scouts, and a combined charity fund are charitable contributions under section 170 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-77

ISSUE

Is a charitable contribution deduction allowable under section 170 of the Internal Revenue Code under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

Situation 1: A tornado destroys several homes in a town. The local chapter of the American National Red Cross provides food and temporary shelter to a taxpayer whose home was destroyed. The taxpayer, motivated by gratitude, makes a contribution of $5x$ dollars to the local chapter of the American National Red Cross.

Situation 2: A taxpayer owns a home in an area served by a volunteer fire department. No state or local taxes are used to support the fire department. The taxpayer makes a contribution of $5x$ dollars to the volunteer fire department's annual fund drive.

Situation 3: The taxpayer's daughter is a member of a local unit of the Girl Scouts of America. The taxpayer makes a contribution of $5x$ dollars to the Girl Scouts of America.

Situation 4: The taxpayer has a dependent parent who is a resident of a home for the elderly which is a member organization of a combined charity fund. The taxpayer makes an unrestricted contribution of $5x$ dollars to the combined charity fund that distributes the contributions to the member organizations according to a formula.

HOLDING

In each of the four situations, the taxpayer is allowed a charitable contribution deduction under section 170 of the Code, subject to the percentage limitations of section 170(b)(1).

Section 911.—Income Earned by Individuals in Certain Camps

26 CFR 1.911-2: Earned income from sources without the United States attributable to services performed after 1962. (Also Section 913.)

Earned income exclusion; contract employee of Trust Territory. For purposes of section 911 of the Code, both before and after its amendment by the Foreign Earned Income Act of 1978, and section 913, a U.S. citizen and contract employee of the Government of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands who is not a U.S. Civil Service employee is not considered paid by the U.S. or any agency thereof; Rev. Rul. 68-608 modified.

Rev. Rul. 80-78

ISSUE

Is a taxpayer, a U.S. citizen and contract employee of the Government of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands (GTTPI), entitled to exclude from gross income under section 911 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code the salary paid by the GTTPI?

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 911 of the Code provides, in part, for the exclusion from gross income of earned income from sources without the United States (except amounts paid by the United States or any agency thereof) in the case of a United States citizen who is a bona fide resident of a foreign country for an uninterrupted period that includes an entire taxable year, or is physically present in a foreign country or countries during at least 510 full days of a period of 18 consecutive months.

For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1977 (or December 31, 1978, if a timely election is filed), the section 911 exclusion is further limited by section 202 of the Foreign Earned Income Act of 1978, Pub. L. 95-615, 1978-2 C.B. 415, to individuals who, because of their employment, reside in a camp located in a hardship area. A new section 913, added by section 203 of that Act and effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1977, provides a deduction for certain expenses of an individual living abroad, but not in excess of the individual's earned income. Section 913(j) provides that the term "earned income" does not include amounts paid by the United States or any agency thereof.

Rev. Rul. 68-608, 1968-2 C.B. 309, holds that in view of the control exercised by the Secretary of the Interior, or the Secretary's representatives over the GTTPI, United States citizens employed by that government are "paid by the United States or any agency thereof" for purposes of section 911 of the Code, and thus are not entitled to exclude from gross income under section 911 of the salary paid by the GTTPI whether they are United States Civil Service employees or contract employees who are outside the Civil Service system. Accord Groves v. United States, 533 F.2d 1376 (5th Cir. 1976), aff'g, Civil No. 74-15 (N.D. Fla., Nov. 21, 1974), cert denied, 429 U.S. 1000 (1977), which reaches a similar nonexcludable result for salary paid to contract employees of GTTPI.

In McComish v. Commissioner, 580 F.2d 1323 (9th Cir. 1978), rev'g, 64 T.C. 909 (1975), the Ninth Circuit considered the same issue for tax year 1968. In that decision, however, the court held that a U.S. citizen who was a contract employee of the GTTPI could exclude from gross income under section 911(a) of the Code the salary paid by the GTTPI because of the "severely limited" United States control over GTTPI, and the fact that the taxpayer was neither a U.S. government employee nor a person receiving the benefits accorded such an employee.

The Internal Revenue Service will follow McComish only to the extent of its holding that contract employees of the GTTPI are not paid by an agency of the United States. It remains the position of the Service that the exception in section 911(a) applies to any U.S. citizen, regardless of whether such citizen is a Civil Service or contract employee, who is paid by the United States or any agency thereof. See, Erlandson v. Commissioner, 277 F.2d 70 (9th Cir. 1960), in which the court stated at page 72 that "amounts paid by the United States or an agency thereof are excepted from the benefits of section 911(a)(2) whether or not the recipient is an employee of the United States"; and Donaldson v. Commissioner, 51 T.C. 830 (1969), in which the court examined the degree of control exercised by the United States over the operations of the paying entity in determining that it was an agency of the United States.

HOLDING

On the basis of the result reached under section 911 of the Code by the Ninth Circuit in McComish, taxpayer, a U.S. citizen and contract employee of the GTTPI, may exclude from gross income under section 911(a) of the Code the salary paid by the GTTPI for all open tax years. Section 911 as amended by Pub. L. 95-615, and section 913 as added by that Act, will be similarly interpreted.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 68-608, 1968-2 C.B. 309, is modified with respect to U.S. citizens who are contract employees of the GTTPI. This modification is not applicable to U.S. citizens, employed by the GTTPI, who are U.S. Civil Service employees.

Section 913.—Deduction for Certain Expenses of Living Abroad

Whether taxpayer, a U.S. citizen and contract employee of the Government of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands (GTTPI), may exclude from gross income under section 911(a) of the Internal Revenue Code the salary paid by the GTTPI. See Rev. Rul. 80-78, page 8.

Section 1502.—Consolidated Return Regulations

26 CFR 1.1502-79: Separate return years.

Consolidated returns; net operating loss and unused investment credit carryback; newly formed parent. A consolidated net operating loss and a consolidated unused investment credit that are attributable to a newly organized corporation, which became the parent of an affiliated group by acquiring the stock of two unrelated corporations, may not be carried back to the separate return years of the subsidiary member corporations.

Rev. Rul. 80-79

ISSUE

May a consolidated net operating loss and a consolidated unused investment credit that are attributable to a newly-organized corporation which became the parent of an affiliated group by acquiring the stock of two other unrelated corporations be carried back to the separate return years of the subsidiary members of the group?

FACTS

Corp P was incorporated by separate unrelated interests in April 1976 for the purpose of acquiring ownership of X and Y, two unrelated corporations which had filed separate returns since their own formation several years ago. Immediately after incorporation, P acquired all of the stock of X and Y, thus becoming the parent corporation of an affiliated group.

For taxable years ending December 31, 1976, and December 31, 1977, P and its subsidiaries X and Y filed consolidated federal income tax returns. In both years the consolidated group experienced net operating losses all of which were attributable to P. These losses included interest charges incurred in acquiring the stock of X and Y as well as other operating losses. P also made investment in those years that qualified for the investment tax credit.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1502 of the Internal Revenue Code grants the Secretary authority to issue such regulations as are deemed necessary in the case of consolidated returns. Section 1.1502-79 (a)(1)(i) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that if a consolidated net operating loss can be carried under the principles of section 172(b) of the Code and 1.1502-21(b) of the regulations to a separate return year of a corporation (or could have been so carried if such were in existence) which was a member in the year in which such loss arose, then the portion of such consolidated net operating loss attributable to such corporation shall be apportioned to such corporation and shall be a net operating loss carryover or carryback to such separate return year. Under section 1.1502-79(a)(2), however, the portion of a consolidated net operating loss attributable to a member shall not be apportioned to a prior separate return year for which such member was not in existence and shall be included in the consolidated net operating loss carrybacks to the equivalent consolidated return year of the group (which may be a separate return year if the equivalent year is a separate return year), provided that such member was a member of the group immediately after its organization.

Section 1.1502-79(c) of the regulations provides that if a consolidated unused investment credit can be carried under the principles of section 46 (b) of the Code and section 1.1502-3 (b) to a separate return year of a corporation (or could have been so carried if such corporation were in existence) that was a member of the group in the year in which such unused credit arose, then the portion of such consolidated unused credit attributable to such corporation shall be apportioned to that corporation under the principles of section 1.1502-79(a) (1) and (2) and shall be an investment credit carryover or carryback to such separate return year.

Rev. Rul. 74-610, 1974-2 C.B. 288, holds that a consolidated net operating loss attributable to a new subsidiary wholly owned by another subsidiary which formerly owned the assets and operations that generated the loss may be carried back to the other subsidiary's separate return for a year in which the new wholly-owned subsidiary was not in existence but may not be carried back to the common parent's separate return for that year. The rationale is that if the new subsidiary had not been formed by the other subsidiary, the loss sustained by the new subsidiary would have been sustained by the other subsidiary and could have been carried back to the latter's separate return years.

In Rev. Rul. 74-610, the group member allowed the net operating loss carryback was the corporation that formed the loss corporation because that corporation would have incurred the loss had the loss corporation not been formed. In this revenue ruling, the loss sustained by P was not attributable to any assets or operations of X or Y. P was formed not by those corporations but by separate unrelated interests. Therefore, the loss of P would not have been incurred by X or Y if P had not been organized, and thus the loss may not be carried back to the separate return years of X and Y under the rationale of Rev. Rul. 74-610. The same reasoning applies to disallow the unused investment credit carryback attributable to P to the separate returns years of X and Y.

HOLDING

The consolidated net operating loss and consolidated unused investment credit attributable to P may not be carried back to the separate return years of X and Y.

Rul. 66-307 clarified.

Rev. Rul. 80-80

ISSUE

Under what circumstances will the physical condition of an individual justify departure from using the actuarial tables to value property interests for federal estate and gift tax purposes?

LAW AND ANALYSIS

The methods and actuarial tables (based on Table LN) that are to be used in valuing annuities, life estates, terms for years, remainders, and reversions are set forth in section 20.2031-10 of the Estate Tax Regulations, for estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1970, and in section 25.2512-9 of the Gift Tax Regulations for gifts made after December 31, 1970.

The actuarial tables in the regulations are provided as an administrative necessity, and their general use has been readily approved by the courts. See Ithaca Trust Company v.

United States, 279 U.S. 151 (1929); Simpson v. United States, 252 U.S. 547 (1920); McMurtry v. Commissioner, 203 F. 2d 659 (1st Cir. 1953).

The actuarial tables are not based on data that exclusively involve persons of "good" or "normal" health. They reflect the incidence of death by disease and illness as well as by accident. The actuarial tables are properly applicable to the vast majority of individual life interests, even though the health of a particular individual is obviously better or worse than that of the "average" person of the same age and sex. Occasionally, however, the actual facts of an individual's condition are so exceptional as to justify departure from the actuarial tables.

Rev. Rul. 66-307, 1966-2 C.B. 429, dealing with the value of a transferred property interest for purposes of section 2013 of the Internal Revenue Code, concludes that if it is known on the valuation date that the life tenant is afflicted with a fatal and incurable disease in its advanced stages and cannot survive for more than a brief period of time, the value of the life or remainder interest should be determined by reference to such known facts.

In Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Company v. United States, 504 F. 2d 586 (7th Cir. 1974), the court analyzed the requirement in Rev. Rul. 66-307 that survival by only a "brief" period must be expected, if the actuarial tables are to be properly avoided. The court rejected the argument that the word "brief" means relatively brief when compared to the life expectancy predicted by the tables. Instead, the word "brief" was interpreted as being an absolute term. The actuarial tables were consequently held to be applicable for purposes of section 2013 of the Code, because the medical experts failed to testify that the transferee's death was "imminent" at the date of death of the transferor.

The cases cited in Rev. Rul. 66-307 were primarily concerned with the maximum period of actual life expectancy. All but one of those cases dealt with persons who were expected to survive by less than one year. The cases decided since Rev. Rul. 66-307 was issued place more emphasis on the immediacy of the individual's death rather than on the maximum period of expected survival. See Miami Beach First National Bank v. United States, 443 F. 2d 116 (5th Cir. 1971); Mercantile-Safe Deposit and Trust Company v. United States, 368 F. Supp. 743 (D. Md. 1974); and especially Continental Illinois, discussed above. These later cases, by focusing on whether the death of the subject individual is "imminent," differ from the cases relied on in Rev. Rul. 66-307.

The Service agrees that the expected death of the individual must be "imminent" in absolute terms rather than in relative terms. Comparison of each subject individual's actual life expectancy to the life expectancy derived from the tables, in order to depart from the tables where the actual life expectancy is "relatively" shorter, would involve the same case-by-case analysis of each individual's physical condition that the tables are designed to avoid.

In view of recent case law, the resulting principle is as follows: the current actuarial tables in the regulations shall be applied if valuation of an individual's life interest is required for purposes of the federal estate or gift taxes unless the individual is known to have been afflicted, at the time of transfer, with an incurable physical condition that is in such an advanced stage that death is clearly imminent. Death is not clearly imminent if there is a reasonable possibility of survival for more than a very brief period. For example, death is not clearly imminent if the individual may survive for a year or more and if such a possibility is not so remote as to be negligible. If the evidence indicates that the decedent will survive for less than a year, no inference should be drawn that death will be regarded as clearly imminent, because this question depends on all the facts and circumstances.

The above principle is applicable to every situation that involves valuation of an interest that is dependent upon the life of one or more individuals for federal estate or gift tax purposes, including valuation with respect to deductions allowable under section 2055 or section 2522 of the Code, with the exception of determinations involving a decedent's own life expectancy under sections 2037 and 2042(2). The Service adheres to the conclusion, stated in Rev. Rul. 66-307, that the actuarial tables must be applied in every case where a decedent's reversionary interest must be valued under sections 2042 (2) or 2037 of the Code. See the discussion in Estate of Roy v. Commissioner, 54 T.C. 1317 (1970), which declined to follow Hall v. United States, 353 F. 2d 500 (7th Cir. 1965). See also Estate of Allen v. United States, 558 F. 2d 14 (Ct. Cl. 1977).

The above principle will govern cases involving application of section 2013 of the Code unless a final determination of the federal estate tax liability of the transferor's estate has been made under circumstances that required valuation, by whatever method, of the life interest received by the transferee. If such a valuation was required, then the value of the property transferred, for the purposes of the credit allowable to the transferee's estate, shall be the value determined previously for the transferor's estate. See section 2013(d) of the Code.

HOLDING

The actuarial tables in the regulations may be disregarded only if the individual is known to have been afflicted, at the time of transfer, with an incurable physical condition that is in such an advanced stage that death is clearly imminent.

The employee died prior to retirement. The refund is includible in the employee's gross estate under section 2039 of the Code and is deductible under section 2053(a)(4).

Rev. Rul. 80-81

ISSUES

1. Is the refund of a deceased employee's contribution to the United States Civil Service Retirement System, plus interest thereon, includible in the employee's gross estate under section 2039 of the Internal Revenue Code, if the refund is paid by the Civil Service Commission directly to the employee's former spouse pursuant to a divorce decree?

2. Is the amount of the refund payable to the former spouse deductible under section 2053(a)(4) of the Code, if the divorce court has the power to decree a settlement of all marital rights?

FACTS

In 1978, D and A entered into a written agreement in contemplation of their obtaining a divorce. The agreement provides that, upon D's retirement, A would receive one-half of the annuity payments that would otherwise be payable to D as a retired federal employee under the United States Civil Service Retirement System. The agreement also provides that, if D died prior to retirement, the lump-sum refund of D's contribution to the system plus interest accrued thereon would be payable to A.

In March 1979, D and A were divorced by a court in State X. The court incorporated the settlement agreement into the divorce decree. Under the laws of State X, a divorce court has the power to decree a settlement of all marital property rights.

D died in July 1979, prior to retirement.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2039(a) of the Code provides for the inclusion in the gross estate of the value of an annuity or other payment receivable by any beneficiary by reason of surviving the decedent under any form of contract or agreement, if, under such contract or agreement, the decedent possessed for life the right to receive such annuity or other payment either alone or in conjunction with another. Section 2039(b) provides that the amount includible is the portion of the annuity or other payment attributable to the decedent's contribution to the purchase price and that contributions made by the decedent's employer are considered to be contributed by the decedent. Section 2039(c) provides that contributions by an employer under an employee's trust meeting the requirements of section 401(a) are not considered as having been made by the decedent.

The United States Civil Service Retirement System is treated as an employees' trust which has been held to meet the requirements of section 401(a) of the Code. Rev. Rul. 56-1, 1956-1 C.B. 444, holds that if an individual who is covered by the Civil Service Retirement System dies before retirement, the amount includible in the gross estate under section 2039, because of the annuity payable to the surviving spouse or other beneficiary, is the amount of the decedent's contribution to the system plus the interest accrued thereon.

Section 2053(a)(4) of the Code allows a deduction for the amount of an unpaid mortgage or other indebtedness with respect to property, if the full value of the decedent's interest in the property is included in the gross estate without diminution by the amount of the mortgage or indebtedness.

In Rev. Rul. 76-113, 1976-1 C.B. 276, the decedent was divorced by a court with the power to decree a settlement of all marital property rights. Under the terms of the divorce decree, the decedent was required to maintain certain life insurance policies until death and to name the spouse as beneficiary of the policies. The ruling holds that since the insurance proceeds are includible in the decedent's gross estate under section 2042 of the Code, the obligation to pay the proceeds to the former spouse pursuant to the divorce decree is an indebtedness against property included in the value of the gross estate and is deductible under section 2053(a)(4).

Subsection (j) of 5 U.S.C. section 8345, added by Pub. L. No. 95-366, 92 Stat. 600 (1978), authorizes the Civil Service Commission to make payments, which would otherwise be payable to a retired federal employee, to another person if and to the extent expressly provided for in the terms of any court decree of, or any court order or court-approved property settlement incident to, divorce, annulment or legal separation. Section 8345(j)(3) defines a court as any court of any state or the District of Columbia.

In the present situation, the value of D's contribution to the Civil Service Retirement System plus interest accrued thereon is includible in D's gross estate under section 2039 of the Code because D, immediately before death, possessed the right to receive an annuity upon retirement. The refund of D's contribution plus interest is payable by the Civil Service Commission directly to the former spouse because of a divorce decree by a court having the power to decree a settlement of all marital property rights. Therefore, a deduction for the amount of the refund is allowable under section 2053(a)(4) of the Code.

HOLDINGS

1. The refund of D's contribution to the United States Civil Service Retirement System, plus the interest accrued thereon, is includible in the gross estate under section 2039 of the Code, even though the refund is paid to D's former spouse pursuant to the terms of a divorce decree.

2. Because the refund is payable to D's former spouse pursuant to a divorce decree issued by a court having the power to decree a settlement of all marital property rights, the amount of the refund is deductible under section 2053(a)(4) of the Code.

Transfer of annuity payments; incident to agreement in contemplation of divorce. A retired federal employee, in contemplation of a divorce, entered into a written property settlement agreement providing that, after the divorce, the ex-spouse would receive one-half of the employee's annuity payments under the U.S. Civil Service Retirement System. Within two years thereafter, a divorce court that had no power to alter the agreement incorporated it into a divorce decree. The employee did not make a gift to the ex-spouse, because the transfer is deemed to be made for full and adequate consideration in money or money's worth under section 2516.

Rev. Rul. 80-82

ISSUE

Has a retired federal employee made a gift of the portion of the United States Civil Service Retirement annuity that is to be paid by the Civil Service Commission to the spouse pursuant to an agreement executed in contemplation of a divorce, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

G, a retired federal employee, is receiving annuity payments under the United States Civil Service Retirement System. In May 1979, G and A, G's spouse, entered into a written property settlement agreement in contemplation of their obtaining a divorce. The agreement provides, in part, that after the divorce becomes final, A will receive one-half of G's annuity payments. In August 1979, G and A were divorced by the final decree of a court in State X. Under the laws of State X, the divorce court had no power to alter the settlement agreement, but it did incorporate the settlement agreement into the divorce decree. Thereafter, upon application to the Civil Service Commission, A began to receive one-half of G's annuity payments.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2511 of the Internal Revenue Code states that the federal gift tax is applicable whether a gift is in trust or otherwise, whether direct or indirect, and whether the transferred property is real or personal, tangible or intangible.

Section 2512(b) of the Code provides that if property is transferred for less than an adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth, then the amount of the gift is the amount by which the value of the transferred property exceeds the value of the consideration received.

Section 2043(b) of the Code, an estate tax provision, requires that a relinquishment of dower or curtesy, or of a statutory estate created in lieu thereof, or "of other marital rights" in the decedent's estate, shall not be considered to any extent a consideration in money or money's worth. This provision was held applicable to the definition of "consideration in money or money's worth" for gift tax purposes, as well as for estate tax purposes, by the Supreme Court in Merrill v. Fahs, 324 U.S. 308 (1945), 1945 C.B. 418. See also section 25.2512-8 of the Gift Tax Regulations.

Therefore, the release by a spouse of marital property rights cannot serve as consideration in money or money's worth for gift tax purposes. However, the release of the right to support constitutes consideration in money or money's worth. See Rev. Rul. 68-379, 1968-2 C.B. 414.

Section 2516 of the Code provides that if a married couple executes a written agreement with respect to their "marital and property rights" and if a divorce is obtained within two years thereafter, all transfers made under the agreement to the donor's spouse in settlement of the spouse's marital or property rights shall be deemed, for gift tax purposes, to be made for full and adequate consideration in money or money's worth.

Subsection (j) of 5 U.S.C. section 8345, added by Pub. L. No. 95-366, 92 Stat. 600 (1978), authorizes the Civil Service Commission to make payments, which would otherwise be payable to a retired federal employee, to another person if and to the extent expressly provided for in the terms of any court decree of, or any court order or court-approved property settlement incident to, divorce, annulment or legal separation. Section 8345(j)(3) defines a court as any court of any state or the District of Columbia.

In the present situation, G and A were divorced within two years after executing the property settlement agreement. The payments of one-half of G's annuity to A by the Civil Service Commission are deemed to be made for full and adequate consideration in money or money's worth under section 2516 of the Code. Therefore, the payments to A are exempt from gift tax.

If G and A had not obtained a divorce within two years after executing the property settlement agreement, G would have made a gift to A to the extent that the present value of the payments to be made to A under the agreement exceeds the present value of the support rights relinquished by A. See Situation 1 in Rev. Rul. 77-314, 1977-2 C.B. 349.

HOLDING

G has not made a gift to A of the portion of G's Civil Service Retirement annuity that is payable to A pursuant to a property settlement agreement executed within two years prior to divorce, because the transfer is deemed to be made for full and adequate consideration in money or money's worth under section 2516 of the Code.

Section 2522.—Charitable and Similar Gifts

26 CFR 25.2522(c)-3: Transfer not exclusively for charitable, etc., purposes in the case of gifts made after July 31, 1969.

Unitrust remainder interest; donee's power; beneficial interest; presently ascertainable. A donor transferred shares of stock in a publicly held corporation to a qualified, pre-existing charitable remainder unitrust. The donor was both a director of the corporation and one of two cotrustees of the trust. The trust corpus consisted solely of that corporation's stock, which was subject to a right of "first refusal." The trustees, using independent judgement, consistently adopted the same price as the fair market value of the trust's stock. Because the donor is bound by a fiduciary duty as both a director and cotrustee, the donor's power to determine the stock's value is limited. Therefore, the value of the charitable beneficial interest is presently ascertainable, and the charitable deduction is allowable with respect to the remainder interest.

Rev. Rul. 80-83

ISSUE

Is a charitable deduction allowable under section 2522 of the Internal Revenue Code, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

During 1977, a donor transferred additional shares of M Corporation stock to a pre-existing charitable remainder unitrust that meets the requirements of section 664 of the Code, as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1969, Pub. L. 91-172, 1969-3 C.B. 10. The donor, who was one of fourteen directors of M Corporation, a publicly held corporation, was named as one of two cotrustees. Trust corpus consists solely of M Corporation stock. The trust provides that an amount equal to six percent of the net fair market value of the corpus, as determined annually by the trustees, is to be paid annually to the donor's child for life. At the child's death, the remaining trust property is to be paid to organizations described in sections 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a) of the Code.

Under the certificate of incorporation, the sale of M Corporation stock is subject to a right of "first refusal" that requires any stockholder desiring to sell M Corporation stock to first offer the shares to the corporation at the same price and terms as offered to any other buyer. Additionally, the Board of Directors of the corporation periodically establishes a price at which it will buy a limited number of its shares. The trustees of the trust, using independent judgement, have consistently adopted the price established by M Corporation as the fair market value of its stock.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2522 of the Code provides that, in computing taxable gifts for the calendar quarter, there shall be allowed as a deduction the amount of all gifts made during such quarter to or for the use of charitable organizations or trusts.

Under section 25.2522(c)-3 of the Gift Tax Regulations, certain conditions are applicable with respect to transfers that are not exclusively for charitable purposes. Section 25.2522(c)-3 reads, in part:

> (a) Remainders and similar interests. If a trust is created or property is transferred for both a charitable and a private purpose, deduction may be taken of the value of the charitable beneficial interest only insofar as that interest is presently ascertainable, and hence severable from the noncharitable interest.

While the donor in this case acts both as a cotrustee and a director in determining the value of the stock, the donor is bound by a fiduciary duty in each capacity to exercise independent judgment on behalf of the trust beneficiaries and corporation, respectively. The donor does not have the freedom to control circumstances affecting the value of the corpus during the term of the unitrust. Therefore, the donor's power, as a cotrustee and a director, to determine the value of the charitable beneficial interest is ascertainable within the meaning of section 25.2522(c)-3 of the regulations.

The value determined by the donor, acting as a cotrustee and a director, does not bind the Internal Revenue Service for the purpose of determining the amount of the charitable deduction either initially or at the time of a subsequent transfer of stock. Similarly, the Service is not bound by the trustee's determination for purposes of the annual valuation required to determine the payment to the noncharitable beneficiary. See section 1.664-2(a)(1)(iii), Income Tax Regulations.

HOLDING

The value of the charitable beneficial interest is presently ascertainable as that term is used in section 25.2522(c)-3 of the regulations. Accordingly, the charitable deduction is allowable under section 2522 of the Code, with respect to the remainder interest.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on Subpart A, Tax Conventions and related Treasury Decisions and Revenue Rulings; Subpart B, Legislation and related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical Indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Price: $1.00 (single copy). Subscription price: $50.00 a year; $12.50 additional for foreign mailing.

Rev. Rul. 80-84

ISSUE

Are amounts received under Los Angeles, California, Charter Art. XVII, section 183 by beneficiaries of deceased members of the Los Angeles fire and police departments excludable from gross income under section 104 (a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

Los Angeles, California, Charter Art. XVII, section 183 states:

> Whenever any member of the Fire or Police Department shall die as a result of any injury received during the performance of his duty, or from sickness caused by the discharge of such duty, or after retirement, or while eligible to retirement from such department on account of years of service, then an annual pension shall be paid in equal monthly installments to his widow or child or children, or dependent parent or parents, in an amount equal to one-half (½) of the average monthly rate of salary assigned to the ranks or positions held by such member during the three years immediately preceding the time of his death or the date of his retirement from active duty in such department. . . .

Charter section 182 states:

> Whenever any member of the Fire or Police Department shall become so physically or mentally disabled by reason of bodily injuries received in, or by reason of sickness caused by the discharge of the duties of such person in such department as to render necessary his retirement from active service, such member shall be retired and, during his lifetime (if the disability or sickness does not sooner cease) shall be paid . . . a pension. . . .

The Charter section 182 pension is computed by a formula that does not refer to age or years of service and the benefits are provided to a class that is restricted to employees with service-incurred disabilities. These benefits are therefore payments for those disabilities. Thus, Charter section 182 is a statute in the nature of a workmen's compensation act. See Rev. Rul. 72-44, 1972-1 C.B. 31.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 104(a)(1) of the Code provides that gross income does not include amounts received under workmen's compensation acts as compensation for personal injuries or sickness.

Section 1.104-1(b) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that section 104(a)(1) of the Code excludes from gross income amounts received by an employee under a workmen's compensation act or under a statute in the nature of a workmen's compensation act that provides compensation to employees for personal injuries or sickness incurred in the course of employment. Section 104(a)(1) also applies to compensation that is paid under a workmen's compensation act to the survivor or survivors of a deceased employee. Section 104(a)(1) does not apply to a retirement pension or annuity to the extent that it is determined by reference to the employee's age or length of service even though the employee's retirement is occasioned by occupational injury or sickness.

A statute authorizing benefits for employees' survivors may qualify as a statute in the nature of a workmen's compensation act if it requires as a prerequisite to payment a determination that the cause of the employee's death was service-related. See Riley v. United States, 156 F. Supp. 751 (Ct. Cl. 1957); Rev. Rul. 72-291, 1972-1 C.B. 36. The Charter section 183 provisions authorizing benefits to survivors of members dying from service-connected injury or sickness (the service-connected death provisions) require such a determination as a prerequisite to payment. Thus, the benefits are in the nature of workmen's compensation. Accordingly, if a taxpayer can establish that the taxpayer's Charter section 183 benefits are received under the service-connected death provisions, those benefits will qualify for exclusion under section 104(a)(1) of the Code. The fact that such a taxpayer could also have qualified for the same benefits under another provision of section 183 will not prevent the section 104(a)(1) exclusion from applying. See Neill v. Commissioner, 17 T.C. 1015 (1951), acq., 1952-1 C.B. 3; Rev. Rul. 74-582, 1974-2 C.B. 34.

Benefits paid to employees' survivors may also qualify as paid under a statute in the nature of a workmen's compensation act if those benefits are part of the compensation for service-related injury or illness and thus are a mere continuation of employees' lifetime section 104(a)(1) benefits. If a Los Angeles fireman or policeman suffers a service-related injury or illness necessitating the employee's retirement, the compensation for that injury or illness is two-fold—1) because of that injury, the employee may retire under Charter section 182 and receive lifetime benefits under that section, and 2) because that injury qualifies the employee for retirement, the employee's survivors qualify for Charter section 183 benefits under the provision of Charter section 183 authorizing survivors' benefits whenever any member dies after retirement (the retirement provision). Benefits paid under this provision to survivors of employees who were retired under section 182 at the time of death are thus part of the compensation for the employee's service-related injury or illness. These benefits therefore are treated as a continuation of the employee's lifetime section 104(a)(1) benefits.

HOLDING

Charter section 183 benefits are excludable from gross income under section 104(a)(1) of the Code if the recipient can establish either 1) that the benefits are received under the service-connected death provisions, or 2) that the benefits are received under the retirement provision and that the employee on account of whose death the benefits are paid was retired under Charter section 182 at the time of that employee's death.

Section 167.—Depreciation

26 CFR 1.167(k)-3: Definitions.

Depreciation; rehabilitation expenditures; low income rental housing. Rev. Rul. 76-439, which holds that because a partnership did not obtain the sworn and notarized income certification required by section 1.167(k)-3(b)(4) of the regulations in existence at that time, it does not qualify to compute the depreciation deduction of rehabilitation expenditures under section 167(k) of the Code, is revoked.

Rev. Rul. 80-85

Rev. Rul. 76-439, 1976-2 C.B. 50, holds that because a partnership did not obtain the sworn and notarized income certifications required by section 1.167(k)-3(b)(4) of the Income Tax Regulations in existence at that time, it does not qualify to compute the depreciation deduction of the rehabilitation expenditures under section 167(k) of the Internal Revenue Code. The taxpayer submitted Federal Housing Administration's Form 1705, "Total Family Income Certification" in lieu of the sworn notarized certification.

The amendment to section 1.167(k)-3(b)(5) of the regulations by T.D. 7642, 1979-43 I.R.B. 8, makes Rev. Rul. 76-439 obsolete with respect to property attributable to expenditures paid or incurred after July 24, 1969. The Federal Housing Administration's Form 1705 is an acceptable form under section 1.167(k)-3(b)(5) as amended.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 76-439 is revoked.

Section 501.—Exemption from Tax on Corporations, Certain Trusts, Etc.

26 CFR 1.501(c)(12)-1: Local benevolent life insurance associations, mutual irrigation and telephone companies, and like organizations.

Electric cooperative; sale of excess fuel. An electric cooperative's sale of excess fuel at cost in the year of purchase is not income for purposes of determining compliance with the 85 percent member-income requirement of section 501(c)(12) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-86

ISSUE

Will an organization exempt from federal income tax under section 501(c)(12) of the Internal Revenue Code jeopardize its exempt status in the taxable year in which it engages in the transaction described below?

FACTS

The organization's primary purpose is to generate and transmit electricity to its members on a cooperative basis. Its gross receipts from the sale of electricity to members usually represent the organization's only receipts.

In the process of producing electricity the organization regularly uses large quantities of natural gas as fuel to operate its generators. In order to guarantee itself an adequate supply of natural gas in the event of a fuel shortage, the organization entered into a contract with a commercial gas supplier to purchase approximately 500*x* dollars worth of natural gas during the taxable year. However, the organization estimates that in ordinary operations, assuming no fuel shortage occurs, it will only use approximately 200*x* dollars of the gas it contracted to purchase. Therefore, the organization entered into a second contract with a commercial pipeline company whereby the pipeline company would buy any excess gas at cost. The pipeline company is not a member of the organization and purchases no electricity from it.

In the taxable year under consideration no fuel shortage occurred and the organization only used 200*x* dollars worth of the gas it originally estimated. Consequently, pursuant to its contract with the pipeline company, it sold the excess natural gas at cost receiving approximately 300*x* in gross receipts from the sale.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 501(c)(12) of the Code provides for the exemption from federal income tax of benevolent life insurance associations of a purely local character, mutual ditch or irrigation companies, mutual or cooperative telephone companies, or like organizations; but only if 85 percent or more of the income consists of amounts collected from members for the sole purpose of meeting losses and expenses.

Rev. Rul. 65-99, 1965-1 C.B. 242, holds, in part, that the 85 percent income requirement of section 501(c)(12) of the Code is applied on the basis of annual accounting periods.

The question presented is to what extent, if any, the gross receipts from the sale of the natural gas to the pipeline company should be taken into consideration in determining whether 85 percent or more of the organization's income consists of amounts collected from members for the sole purpose of meeting losses and expenses, in the taxable year in question. The answer to this question depends upon the meaning of the term "income" as used in section 501(c)(12) of the Code. Though the term is not specifically defined in that section, or in the Income Tax Regulations thereunder, there is precedent as to its meaning for purposes of the 85 percent member income requirement.

Rev. Rul. 74-362, 1974-2 C.B. 170, states, in part, that compliance with the 85 percent member-income requirement by an organization that is exempt under section 501(c)(12) of the Code is based on "gross income." Thus, for purposes of determining whether 85 percent or more of its income is collected by the organization from members for the sole purpose of meeting losses or expenses, the term "income" means "gross income."

Gross income is generally considered to represent an intermediate figure between gross receipts and net income. There are two categories of adjustments from gross receipts that must be taken into consideration in arriving at gross income. These are: 1) trade discounts, allowances on goods sold and refunds on returned goods, and 2) cost of goods sold. In the case of an organization selling merchandise, the cost of goods sold generally is the more significant figure in determining gross income.

While the Code does not specifically allow the deduction for cost of goods sold, section 1.61-3(a) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that in a manufacturing, merchandising, or mining business, "gross income" means total sales less cost of goods sold. Similarly, in the case of the sale of merchandise by an organization exempt under section 501(c)(12) of the Code, the cost of goods sold should be subtracted from gross receipts in determining whether 85 percent or more of its income has been collected from members for the sole purpose of meeting losses and expenses. This principle applies to both the sale of merchandise in the ordinary course of business, and to the incidental sale of excess supplies or fuel.

Rev. Rul. 68-620, 1968-2 C.B. 199, holds, in part, that gas is generally considered to be inventoriable merchandise. See also Rev. Rul. 78-352, 1978-2 C.B. 168. Consequently, even though the sales of gas by this organization is merely ancillary to its primary purpose of providing electricity to its members, the cost of the gas sold should be taken into consideration in determining the amount of gross income derived from the sale.

HOLDING

Since the organization is selling the excess gas at cost, there would be no gross income derived from its sale. Thus, in a year in which the organization's only income is from the sale of electricity to its members and from the sale of its excess gas at a price equal to its cost, the organization's only income for purposes of determining compliance with the 85 percent member-income requirement would be that derived from the sale of electricity to its members. Accordingly, the transaction would not adversely affect the exempt status of the organization under section 501(c)(12) of the Code in the taxable year in which the transaction takes place.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On May 9, 1979, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) relating to the making and revoking of elections under section 936(e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (44 FR 27180). These amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 1051(b) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1643). No comments disagreeing with these amendments and no requests for a public hearing were received. Accordingly, these amendments are adopted by this Treasury decision. In addition, the Treasury decision resolves a question that has arisen as to whether, if a corporation is a member of an affiliated group (as defined in section 1504(a)), the section 936(e) election is made by the corporation itself or by the common parent under § 1.1502-77(a).

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Section 1051(b) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 added section 936 to the Code. A domestic corporation which elects the application of section 936 may qualify for the Puerto Rico and possession tax credit. Section 936(e) provides that the election shall be made at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe. The election shall apply for the first taxable year for which it is made and for which the conditions of section 936(a)(1)(A) and (B), as in effect prior to the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1978 [1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1], are satisfied. It shall continue to apply for at least the 9 immediately following taxable years unless the Secretary grants consent for earlier revocation. Temporary regulations § 7.0(c)(5) now provides that the election be made by filing Form 5712 within 90 days after the beginning of the first taxable year for which the election is made.

The amendments to the Income Tax Regulations provide that a corporation shall make the election by filing Form 5712 on or before the later of the two following dates. The first date is the date on which such corporation is required to file its Federal income tax return for the first taxable year for which the election is made. The second date is April 8, 1980. In addition, any corporation to which an election applies on February 8, 1980 is granted the consent of the Secretary to revoke the election for the first taxable year to which the election applied.

Existing § 1.1502-77(a) provides that the common parent of an affiliated group shall be the sole agent for each subsidiary in the group for all matters relating to tax liability other than the exceptions therein specified.

However, section 936(a) is drafted in terms of the electing corporation itself making the election. To eliminate this ambiguity, § 1.1502-77(a) is amended to add the section 936 election to the specified exceptions to its general rule.

The amendments to the Income Tax Regulations do not meet the Treasury Department criteria for a significant regulation because they are essentially procedural.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Daniel Horowitz of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chef Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. Section 7.0(c)(5) is deleted and § 7.0(c)(6) is redesignated as § 7.0(c)(5).

Par. 2. Section 1.936-1 is added to read as set forth below.

§ 1.936-1 Elections.

(a) Making an election. A domestic corporation shall make an election under section 936(e), for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1975, by filing Form 5712 on or before the later of—

(1) The date on which such corporation is required, pursuant to sections 6072(b) and 6081, to file its Federal income tax return for the first taxable year for which the election is made; or

(2) April 8, 1980.

Form 5712 shall be filed with the Internal Revenue Service Center, 11601 Roosevelt Boulevard, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19155 (Philadelphia Center).

(b) Revoking an election. Any corporation to which an election under section 936(e) applies on February 8, 1980 is hereby granted the consent of the Secretary to revoke that election for the first taxable year to which the election applied. (The corporation may make a new election under § 1.936-1(a) for any subsequent taxable year.) The corporation shall make this revocation by sending to the Philadelphia Center a written statement of revocation on or before April 8, 1980.

Par. 3. Section 1.1502-77(a) is amended by inserting in the first sentence thereof "the making of an election under section 936(e)," after "paragraph (a)(1) of § 1.1502-75," and before "the making of an election to be treated as a DISC".

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in sections 7805 and 936(e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917 and 90 Stat. 1644; 26 U.S.C. 7805 and 936(e)).

JEROME KURTZ,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Approved January 29, 1980.

DONALD C. LUBICK,
Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Section 1402.—Definitions [Tax on Self-Employment Income]

26 CFR 1.1402(a)-1: Definition of net earnings from self-employment.

Honorary corporate director. Payments received by an honorary director of a corporation who has served as an active director for a period of 20 years and who is no longer required to perform any services for the corporation are includible in net earnings from self-employment.

Rev. Rul. 80-87

ISSUE

Are payments to honorary directors of a corporation who are not required to perform services for the corporation includible in net earnings for self-employment under section 1402(a) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

The corporation appoints individuals who have served as directors for a period of 20 years to the position of honorary director. Honorary directors are not required to attend any directors' meetings and do not have voting powers. The corporation pays the honorary directors a fee whether or not they attend the meetings.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1402(a) of the Code provides that the term "net earnings from self-employment" means an individual's gross income from, less the allowable income tax deductions attributable to, a trade or business.

Rev. Rul. 72-86, 1972-1 C.B. 273, holds that the fees received by the director of a corporation for performing services on its board of directors are income from a trade or business and are includible in computing net earnings from self-employment.

Section 1.1402(a)-1(c) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that gross income from a trade or business includes gross income received or accrued in the taxable year of the individual even though such income may be attributable in whole or in part to services rendered in a prior taxable year as to which the individual was not subject to the tax on self-employment income.

Rev. Rul. 68-498, 1968-2 C.B. 377, holds that royalties received by an author from previously published books are includible in computing net earnings from self-employment under section 1402(a) of the Code.

In addition, Rev. Rul. 54-312, 1954-2 C.B. 327, holds that renewal commissions paid to life insurance agents who perform no services at the time they receive their commissions, and who may be retired, are includible in determining net earnings from self-employment at the time paid, since they are based on services rendered at the time of sale of the policies.

In the instant case, the payments to the honorary directors, who do not attend meetings or perform any services as directors, are attributable to their prior services within the meaning of section 1.1402(a)-1(c) of the regulations.

HOLDING

The payments to the honorary directors are includible in net earnings from self-employment under section 1402(a) of the Code.

In accordance with directions in Section 15(a) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974, the Railroad Retirement Board has determined that for the quarter beginning April 1, 1980, 20.3 percent of the taxes collected under Sections 3211(b) and 3221(c) of the Railroad Retirement Tax Act shall be credited to the Railroad Retirement Account and 79.7 percent of the taxes collected under Section 3211 (b) and 3221(c) plus one hundred percent of the taxes collected under Section 3221(d) of the Railroad Retirement Tax Act shall be credited to the Railroad Retirement Supplemental Account.
